The Library of Congress is a matchless source without which a work of this type could not be instigated.

The Folger Shakespeare Library provided me with both an amazingly comfortable scholarly environment as well as a number of fine 16th and 17th century illustrated travelers’ accounts.

Though my time there was limited, the staff of the British Library was helpful with this project, and I especially appreciated the opportunity to examine the first edition of Florence Nightingale’s Letters from Egypt.

To Monica Blanchard, librarian of The Catholic University of America’s Institute of Christian Oriental Research division of Mullen Library, I owe a special debt of thanks for introducing me to the Library’s Hyvernat Collection of travelers’ accounts of the Near East, which, with its many Continental imprints must surely be one of the finest in North America.

In the Library of Congress, of special assistance were the members of the Collections Management Division deck staff who keep thousands of books on shelf against fearsome odds. Also in the Collections Management Division I would like to thank Diane Nester Kresh for convincing me of the joys of librarianship.

On our own trip to Egypt, my wife and I lacked a dragoman, but did have a longtime friend, Janice Bailey-Goldschmidt, who smoothed the many rough spots on the way from Cairo to Abu Simbel. Without Janice, our own trip down the Nile would have been much more perilous. Not only does Janice deserve thanks for those three weeks, but she is also owed a great debt for many years of friendship.

INTRODUCTION

As an anonymous reviewer said of the literature on Egypt in the mid-nineteenth century: "Were we to pile together the various works that have appeared of late years upon the subject of Egypt and Palestine, we might readily construct a monument rivaling in magnitude, if not in durability, some of those that still frown on the waters of the Nile."^1

Had the reviewer known that the deluge would continue, he might not have qualified his statement. Countless travelers have made their way up and down the Nile and into the adjoining deserts. These same travelers and tourists, archaeologists and artists, soldiers and savants, were treated alike to the imploring cries of the donkey boys offering their services and the pleas from all quarters for baksheesh. The land of Egypt, from Alexandria in the north to Wadi Halfa near the Second Cataract in the south and from the fringes of the Sinai to the east and the great wastes of the Libyan Desert to the west, has attracted visitors from the earliest times and these travelers have left us, as for no other region for so long a time, a record of their passage.

ANTquITY

Though some claim that true travel literature did not begin until the late 4th century A.D., the accounts of Classical travelers to Egypt were to have a great effect on those that came after them.²

Discounting such biblical travelers as Joseph and his brothers, mythic figures such as Helen of Troy (who supposedly sojourned in Egypt with Menelaus after the Trojan War), and apocryphal visitors such as Plato (who is said to have learned some of his wisdom as well as picked up tales of Atlantis from Egyptian priests while sitting under the obelisk at Heliopolis), the first reliable, most extensive, as well as best known, tale comes from Herodotus. Herodotus may rightly be called not only the Father of History, but also the father of travel writing. Fleshing out his historical and geographical sketch of Egypt in Book II of his History, he gives the earliest, and certainly one of the most influential, accounts of Egypt.

During his visit to Egypt in 450 B.C., however, Herodotus had a rather limited tour. He visited the Pyramids (but not the Sphinx which was covered, as it was periodically, by sand), and Luxor and Aswan. Still, his report of an Egypt well past its prime, is tantalizing for its omissions and errors as well as fascinating in its concrete details and proven facts. Herodotus’ account has proven to be one of the most durable accounts of Egypt, quoted from (and carried with) many thousands of travelers on the Nile.

Strabo, in his Geography—another of the oft-quoted and carried pieces of literature by later travelers—gives a good account of pre-Roman Egypt and numerous details on the people, products, and antiquities. He was followed a few years later by Diodorus Siculus, a Greek writer from Sicily. Diodorus, frequently criticized on numerous counts regarding his work Historical Library (which attempted to update and correct Herodotus) has left us primarily fragments though his section on Egypt is mostly complete. Though Diodorus himself is little known outside the world of Classical scholarship, his account of Thebes contains a description of a fallen colossal statue of Ramesses II (also known as Ozymandias) with the inscription “I am Osymandias, King of Kings. Should any man seek to know how great I am and where I lie, let him surpass one of my works” that nearly two thousand years later inspired Shelley’s sonnet “Ozymandias” and its lines that have become a touchstone of vanitas:

“My name is Ozymandias, King of Kings
Look on my Works, ye Mighty, and despair!
Nothing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal Wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away”

Pliny the Elder, among the last of the great and influential Latins to travel to Egypt, looked on the country with sensible Roman eyes and found only folly in such vast incomprehensible works as the Pyramids. More to his taste were the natural wonders and the abundant fertility of the land that would turn Egypt into the granary of the Roman Empire.

By the start of the Christian era, Egypt had been under Western influence (especially Greek) since its conquest by Alexander the Great in 330 B.C. Instead of being subsumed into the great Hellenic, and later Roman, cultures, however, Egypt maintained a flourishing, albeit, lessened, native flavor, imparting more of its own Eastern/African nature to the conquerors than itself imbibing of the foreign. Though the many Ptolemaic temples strewn along the length of the Nile during the nearly five hundred years of Greco-Roman rule lack neither charm nor beauty (one thinks of the temple of Isis at Philae, the last temple built to the ancient gods or the striking twin temple of Haroeris and Suchos at Kom Ombo that still jumps out at the modern visitor as he rounds a bend of the Nile), there is lacking the awesome grandeur of Karnak with its hundreds of massive columns and sun piercing obelisks.

Though Julius Caesar’s earlier victories had brought Egypt into the Roman circle, it was Octavian’s (later Augustus’) defeat of Marc Antony and Cleopatra VI at the naval battle of Actium that transferred Egypt from an independent nation into the private domain of the Roman Emperor and the Empire’s granary. Though members of the Imperial family and the Roman Senate were allowed to visit Egypt without the direct permission of the Emperor, the common Roman tourist began to abound (not to mention the members of two Roman legions, III Augusta and XXII Deiotariana). The Roman tourist of the first years of our own era followed an itinerary almost unchanged to the present: “The program of travelers is known: the Pyramids and the Sphinx, then a trip up the Nile, the monuments of Thebes, the colossi of Memnon, the temples of Dendera and Philae. This is the classic tourist itinerary.” Additionally, the Roman tourist was likely to, like today’s traveler, make a side trip to the beaches of the Red Sea. And, again, like travelers for the next two thousand years, the Roman traveler was to leave behind him inscriptions and graffiti carved into the antiquities which still remain to witness the passing of such otherwise forgotten men as Marcus Antiochianus Pulcher of the III Augusta, as well as thousands of others.

Not only the common Roman Legionnaire, but also the famous went. In a journey up the Nile in around 130 A.D., the Emperor Hadrian proceeded with an entourage that would be echoed many times in the next two thousand years by such diverse leaders as the Prince of Wales (1869, 1875), Frederick III, Emperor of Prussia (1869), the King Kalakaua of Hawaii (1881), former presidents Ulysses S. Grant (1878), and Theodore Roosevelt (1910).

The disintegration of the Roman Empire by the 6th century A.D. again turned Egypt into a semiautonomous state under the rule of the Byzantine Emperor. Christianity firmly took root and a number of early Church Fathers (including Cyril and Theophilus), lived in Egypt and the land as a whole saw a flourishing of early Christian culture that was to survive to the present in the form of Copticism, even after the nearly complete submission of Egypt to Islam by the year 650 A.D. Travel accounts of Egypt in this betwixt and between time are rare and we have to wait the next great rush of travelers—the religious pilgrims, for accounts of Egypt to appear again.

Medieval and Early Modern Period

Though the Islamic conquest of Egypt cut down on travel by Western travelers, a number of Arabs did make the voyage. In the 14th century a wide ranging Arabic traveler, Ibn Batuta made a voyage through the Arab world stopping in Egypt and composing poetry in honor of the land and the river Nile.

For Europeans, even though the journey was dangerous, many still made the trip. Though antiquities of the Pharaohs were still sought out, the primary focus of these visits were associated with Biblical episodes. Even with Herodotus in hand, the Pyramids were seen as Joseph's Granaries and no trip to Cairo was complete without visiting Joseph's House, Mary's Well, the tree of the Flight to Egypt, and the other crowd drawing sites. During this time, even though Egypt was popular, it was still primarily an adjunct to the more numerous and popular trips that were made to the Holy Land.

Topographical engravings of Egypt did make their way to Europe, as did wondrous and unbelievable stories. Due to difficult travel conditions (both the sheer physical difficulties as well as those imposed by the Moslem rulers), few travelers left the vicinity of Cairo, leaving a gap in the classic itinerary of Herodotus of a Nile trip from Cairo/Memphis to Aswan.

Though Egypt was never a real focus of the Crusaders, Saladin built the huge Citadel (1176) to protect the city from Christian invaders. An anonymous English writer left us the account of the Crusader William Long-espee (or Long-Sword) who traveled in the service of the French King Louis IX when the latter captured the city of Damietta in 1249.

Among the other important and well known European travelers at this time were Felix Fabri, a Swiss priest who, on a religious pilgrimage, wrote a fascinating and detailed account of his trip. British merchants and pilgrims, among them Richard Guylforde, John Fox, John Sanderson, Laurence Aldersey, and John Eve-sham in their accounts attest to the interest, for both religious and mercantile reasons, that Egypt held for even this northern part of Europe.

An even more remote nation in Europe, Russia, had an interest in Egypt (particularly the mountains of the Sinai). The Turks had overrun Byzantium in 1453, deposing the Emperor and leaving Christian travelers without their nominal protector. In 1472 when Ivan III married Sophie Paléologue, niece of the deposed Byzantine Emperor, Russian interest took on a more official aspect with Ivan III taking on the responsibilities of the former Emperor.6

Even before this time, however, Grethenios, a Russian priest, wrote a few lines on Egypt as he passed through 1400. Vasilii, a merchant, traversed on a tour of Turkey in 1465–66, and a number of monks, including Gregoire and Sopfronii, visited the monasteries in the Sinai in the 16th century.7

The rise of European power as well as a decline in that of the Turks led to an increase in travelers at the same time Egypt began to become more important to Europe. The route to the East turned out (even with the discoveries of Columbus) to pass through Egypt, and control of the Eastern resources made a stable, west-looking Egypt a necessity. The Turks were pacified and Egypt became safe for tourists. French, English, and Germans began to flood the area, looking for antiquities, resources, and the source of the Nile.

The number of visitors was still quite small in the seventeenth century and only with Napoleon's invasion did a widespread interest in Egypt and things Egyptian take hold of Europe.

FRANCE AND THE AGE OF EMPIRE

The rise and dominance of the European powers by the late 18th century led to an interesting period in Egypt. The British, with their possessions in India becoming an ever more important resource, saw Egypt as the key not only to their holdings on the sub-continent, but also to the unexplored and untapped interiors of Africa. The other powers saw in Egypt a means of thwarting these same British desires. When the weakness of the Ottoman Empire (based in distant Istanbul) in its ability to control Egypt were added to this already complex situation, the stage was set for Egypt to figure prominently on the world stage as it had not since the time of Caesar and Cleopatra.

After rising to the rank of general on the strength of his European conquests, Napoleon Bonaparte turned his attention to Egypt in 1798. Leading the French Army to Cairo, Napoleon and his troops easily defeated the Mameluke army at the Battle of the Pyramids on 21 July 1798.

Seeing Egypt as the key to cutting off the British from their possessions in India, Napoleon wanted to quickly bring Egypt into the French sphere of power, because of its strategic importance. And, although its strategic value was central in his mind, Napoleon also saw Egypt as the cultural forbearer of Classical Western antiquity. A founding member of the Institute d’Égypte (on the council of Mathematics), Napoleon sent—in addition to his troops—an army of French savants (167 scientists, artists and technicians) through the country to measure, catalog, record and preserve all aspects of the Valley of the Nile from the ancient Egyptian antiquities to the natural wonders.

The culmination of this effort was the truly monumental Description d’Égypte, published in 30 large folio volumes over a span of nearly 18 years. The Description, which counted among its many collaborators Vivant Denon, is perhaps the greatest accomplishment of Napoleon’s efforts in Egypt.

The British, not content to see their lifeline to India straddled by the French, quickly began a campaign to push them out. The naval battle at Aboukir (1–2 August 1799) in which Admiral Nelson defeated the French fleet was the beginning of the end for Napoleon’s Egyptian campaign. Napoleon himself slipped past the British blockade and out of Egypt to France, leaving the French Army in the hands of his brilliant generals Jean-Baptiste Kléber and Françoise Menou.

However, with the British blocking the sea lanes the French cause was already lost. Kléber was assassinated on 14 June 1800 and Menou finally surrendered in August of 1801.

As part of the spoils of war, the British captured the irregularly broken stone discovered by the French near the town of Rosetta. The Rosetta Stone, transported to London in 1802 and soon deposited in the British Museum, proved to be the key to unraveling the Egyptian hieroglyphics, deciphered by the brilliant Frenchman Jean Françoise Champollion in 1822.

The French and British soldiers who partook in the campaign in Egypt left behind numerous memoirs, collections of letters, and accounts, some of which are only now being published in this century. These accounts, written by the common foot soldier as well as the great Napoleon himself, offer a unique glimpse of Egypt as it was being truly discovered by the modern traveler.
Introduction

BRITISH IN EGYPT

The defeat of the French in Egypt left the British in an awkward position. Egypt still, at least nominally, belonged to the Turkish Empire in distant Constantinople. Fearful of another European power gaining possession of the vital crossroads to India, however, led the British to make sure no single power unfriendly to the British controlled Egypt. 12

In 1807 Mohammed Ali, an Albanian in the service of the Turks (who rose to power in the chaos that ensued after the British defeated the French), defeated the British at Rosetta and forced them to withdraw. In 1811 Mohammed Ali massacred the Turkish Mamelukes at the Citadel in Cairo and, in order to keep him in nominal obedience to the Turks (after he had been ruling with near absolute authority since 1811), was given the title Khedive in 1841 by the Ottoman Emperor. The British, as well as the other European powers, carefully watched the moves of Mohammed Ali and his sons (and grandson) who succeeded him (Ibrahim, 1848; Abbas I, 1849–54; Said, 1854–63; and Ismail, 1863–79—Ibrahim’s son).

Ismail, Europeanized, with lofty goals and expensive tastes, oversaw the construction of massive public works (such as the Suez Canal) as well as military adventures in the south through which he had hoped to create a new Egyptian empire. His debts, however, rather than any military defeats, led to his deposition by the European powers in 1879 and the installation of his son Taufiq in his place. 13

The work of the French savants meanwhile, along with the decipherment of hieroglyphics, brought a flood of interest in things Egyptian to Britain. Henry Salt, the British consul in Cairo became an active collector of antiquities, employing the incredibly colorful Italian Giovanni Belzoni (successively circus strongman, engineer, explorer, and archaeologist). The accounts of these early 19th century amateur archaeologists—Giovanni Belzoni, Henry Salt, the Italian born French consul Bernardino Drovetti, Giovanni d’Athanasi, Salt’s right hand man—are of incalculable worth for understanding the early exploration and exploitation of the forty centuries of Egyptian culture.

The British presence in Egypt was also fueled by the desire to discover the source of the Nile—a question that had been unanswered since the time of Herodotus. Among the earliest seekers of the Nile headwaters were the Scotsman James Bruce,
Sir Samuel Baker, Richard Francis Burton, and the eventual discoverer of the source at Lake Victoria, John Speke.\textsuperscript{14}

By mid century, Egypt was also becoming a popular winter resort for the adventurous Englishman. Nile cruises as far south as Aswan were not unheard of and counted amongst their many tourists one Florence Nightingale who was to find in Egypt the spiritual resources that would send her to the Crimean War front in 1852.

In 1852 Cairo saw the founding of an institution that, though in much altered form and style, continues today, Shepheard's Hotel. This hotel, through which passed many a traveler, was a sight surpassed only by the Pyramids in travelers' accounts.

Samuel Shepheard, who had run the "British Hotel" in Cairo since 1841, renamed the establishment Shepheard's Hotel in 1845. Built near the spot where General Kléber had been assassinated in 1800, Shepheard enlarged it over the years, finally selling it to the Bavarian Philip Zech in 1861. The hotel continued to grow in size and fame, attracting as clients royalty from throughout Europe and the East, literary figures such as Théophile Gautier, as well as the throngs of common people who, if they could not get a room, would be sure to at least take tea on the hotel's famous balcony.

For over a hundred years the old hotel welcomed travelers, finally succumbing to flames ignited by a nationalistic uprising on 16 January 1952. Five years later, in July of 1957, the New Shepheard's Hotel, a nine story modern structure was opened some distance from the original site.\textsuperscript{15}

In 1868, Shepheard's Hotel formed a partnership with an Englishman best known at the time for his work in the Temperance movement and for arranging railroad trips for bored Britons between Leicester and Loughborough. Thomas Cook (1808–1892) saw in Egypt the perfect holiday spot for Europeans tired of the same old ruins in Greece and Italy. Advertising his first tour of the Nile in December of 1868, Cook sold thirty-two tickets for a trip into the land of the Pharaohs.

Cook's son, John Mason Cook (1834–1899), worked diligently in both Europe and Egypt at promoting Cook's Egyptian tours and by 1875, Thomas Cook and Sons, Ltd. was running steamboats above the First Cataract. By this time Cook's boats, Cook's tours, and Cook's personnel were becoming so ubiquitous in Egypt that travelers were commenting that neither the Emperor in Istanbul, the Khedive in Cairo, nor Victoria in London ruled Egypt, but rather Thomas Cook.\textsuperscript{16}

In 1869, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Introduction

Wales along with various and sundry other royalty and exalted guests from around the world witnessed the opening of the Suez Canal. The Prince and Princess then capped off their tour with a trip up the Nile and a spectacular fireworks display at the Pyramids. Soon, however, the financial excesses of the Khedive Ismail had forced him to sell his shares in the Canal to the British and control of this strategic passage passed from Cairo to London.

Since the abdication of Ismail in 1879, his son Taufiq had been ruling Egypt under the careful eye of the European powers. In 1881 the Minister of War, Arabi Bey led a nationalistic revolt to restore Egyptian control of Egypt. Arabi’s revolt was crushed by 1882, however by the combined forces of the British and French.17

For the British, though, the trouble in Egypt had just begun. Mohammed Ahmed, called the Mahdi (religious leader), led the Sudanese in a revolt against British control. In 1882 events came to a climax when British forces in the Sudan, led by George “Chinese” Gordon were massacred at Khartoum. Unwilling to permit any further mishaps in the future, the British moved quickly and forcefully into Egypt, taking control of all aspects of the government in everything but name.

Once more, a flood of soldiers’ tales, letters, and memoirs passed forth from Egypt. Australians, Canadians (French and English), members of the Camel Corps, and countless others wrote home about their impressions of Egypt in the late 19th century. These had changed little from those of their predecessors more than eighty years before.

After some sensitive negotiations involving the other European powers, Egypt was placed under British protection (ruled by a succession of able British administrators: Sir Evelyn Baring, Lord Cromer, 1883–1907; Sir Eldon Gorst, 1908–1911; General Lord Kitchener, 1911–1914; and thereafter by a series of High Commissioners) and it continued in that status until 1922 when the nation was declared a Constitutional monarchy.18

This formal, official British presence in Egypt led to an explosion of tourist travel to the country. Hotel facilities increased and the steamboat replaced the sail dahabeah as the common method of ascending the Nile. Freed from the vagaries of the wind, and with the assistance of Mr. Cook and Sons, travelers could now “do” the Nile from Alexandria to Aswan, or even the Second Cataract at Wadi Halfa in as little as three weeks, a far cry from the many months spent by a traveler such as Claude Sicard in the early 18th century or even John Burckhardt in 1813.
The American Presence

Perhaps the first American to visit Egypt was John Ledyard. Ledyard, an adventurous traveler, had recently returned from a voyage with Captain Cook in the South Seas. Counting among his friends Thomas Jefferson and the Marquis de Lafayette, Ledyard came to London in 1798 planning a trip to Central Africa.

Unfortunately this early American traveler was not to leave an extensive record of his trip—a trip which never began as Ledyard died in Cairo of a malarial fever.19

The first half of the 19th century saw little of an American presence in Egypt. The greatest traveler—and certainly one of the most popular writers of the period—was John Lloyd Stephens. Trained to be a lawyer, Stephens never practiced law, but visited the Old World at the age of twenty-four and published a number of successful books (Incidents of Travel in Greece, Turkey, Russia, and Poland, Incidents of Travel in Central America, Chiapas, and Yucatan, and Incidents of Travel in Yucatan) on his travels. In 1838, Stephens embarked on a trip to Egypt and Arabia Petraea. Bringing to Americans a Yankee perspective on the exotic East, Stephens’ account (his first book Incidents of Travel in Egypt, Arabia Petraea, and the Holy Land) is still read today. After his Egyptian adventure, Stephens went on to Central America in 1858 to be (with the British Egyptian traveler and artist Frederick Catherwood) one of the first re-discovers of the Mayan civilization, and later, involved in the building of Central American railways.20

Stephens’ account of his trip became a touchstone for many other travelers, some finding his account too glib for their more serious tastes. By the 1850’s, Americans were beginning to visit Egypt and the Holy Land in greater numbers than ever before. Ministers of all denominations stopped in Egypt to visit Joseph’s Well, the tree beneath which the Holy Family rested and numerous other sights mentioned in the Bible and visited by Christian tourists since the 13th century.

Some of these Americans made as much of an impression on Egypt as it on them. James Cooley, a New York state senator and newspaperman, wrote a witty, satiric account of his (and many others’) trip to Egypt. Unfortunately, his American in Egypt (1842) sometimes played loosely with the facts and lifted many of its illustrations from other sources. Lastly, George Robbin Gliddon, the English born American consul in Cairo felt com-invention to write a fascinating, if scathing, rebuttal in his “Appendix” to the American in Egypt (1842).

In 1867 Samuel Clemens sent Mark Twain to Egypt as an “Innocent” abroad, providing an endless number of future writers on Egypt with anecdotes to retell and compare to their own experiences.

After Twain's trip, Cook's Tours began its frequent Nile excursions, bringing to Egypt countless young ladies and gentlemen, maidens, the solid burghers of Chicago and their families and the countless others who would soon make the exotic extremes of Nubian Egypt just another stop on the grand tour of the well rounded American.

The close of the Civil War left a number of trained military men without any battles. Luckily, the Khedive Ismail was able to provide almost a hundred of these veterans from both the Union and Confederate forces with a new uniform to wear. In 1868, the Khedive, through the offices of General Sherman, brought General Stone (later to design the base for the Statue of Liberty) to Egypt to organize the Khedive's army to battle the Ethiopians. Among the men Stone brought to Egypt were William Wing Loring, Charles Chaillé-Long, Valentine Mott, and William Dye, all of whom later wrote fascinating accounts of their stays in Egypt. The Khedive's luck in playing off the great powers ran out, however, and he was forced to turn the Americans loose in 1878 when the British put an end to his grandiose schemes of annexing Ethiopia.21

The year 1878 saw the arrival in Egypt of ex-President Ulysses S. Grant, or as the natives called him, the King of America. Grant's world tour of 1877-78 was one of the first super media events with no fewer than seven accounts written. Grant, traveling with his wife, Julia, and son, Jesse, brought to Egypt an American in the form of a brusque, cigar-chomping man who, it was said, rode a donkey quite well.

Another world tour of a much different sort took place twenty years later when in 1898 Alexander Spaulding sent the Chicago team and an All-Star team around the world to stage exhibition baseball games. The sight of a baseball diamond in the sand at the foot of the Great Pyramid on the Giza plateau was certainly one of the more confusing sights Americans created in Egypt. The eve of the First World War saw countless Americans visit (and write about) their tours of Egypt.

Among the other notable Americans to visit Egypt were:
William H. Seward (Lincoln and Johnson's Secretary of State) and his daughter Olivia (1871); Ralph Waldo Emerson (1872–73); Andrew Carnegie (1879); Charles Edwin Wilbour (visited 1880–91) whose collection of antiquities and papyrus would form the core of the marvelous collection at the Brooklyn Museum; Henry Adams (1898); ex-President Theodore Roosevelt (who, in 1910, had to be whisked out of Cairo after delivering a speech praising the despotic ruler whose assassination had been greeted with great joy).

The Nineteenth Century and Three Special Groups of Travelers

The mid 19th century brought three groups to Egypt for special purposes. The first group were those following in the footsteps of the amateur archaeologists and collectors of antiquities who had been coming to Egypt for hundreds of years. With the example of the Institute d'Égypte from a few decades before to guide them as well as the advancing techniques of archaeology, explorer/archaeologists like Lepsius, Mariette, Brugsch, and Wilkinson began a systematic recording and protection of the Egyptian antiquities. These professionals, aided by such adventurous amateurs as Maxime Du Camp (traveled 1849–50) did much to bring reliable images of Egypt to the West. Du Camp, whose mission was to collect "squeezes" (paper-mâché impressions of inscriptions on tombs and temples) was accompanied by his friend Gustave Flaubert. Flaubert, when not complaining of boredom or entertaining Egyptian women, assisted Du Camp with his other pressing duty, that of taking photographs of the ruins.

The earliest forms of photography, the daguerreotype and the calotype, appeared in 1839. In this same year the first photographers arrived in Egypt. Appearing between 1840 and 1843, Daguerriennes: vues et monuments les plus remarquable du globe appeared with photographs of Egypt by Frederic Goupil-Fesquet, Hector Horeau, Joly de Lotebinière, and Horace Vernet.22 The daguerreotype process, however, created a unique image that could not be reproduced. The works of these photographers were instead copied in the form of engravings for reproduction in book form.

In 1841, Panoramas d'Égypte et de Nubie with aquatints after the daguerreotypes of Hector Horeau appeared. Only four years later, the calotype process was perfected enough to allow the printing of hundreds of copies from the paper negatives. It was this calotype paper negative process that Maxime Du Camp used on his expedition to Egypt in 1849–50. The result of this trip was Égypte, Nubie, Palestine et Syrie, one of the first books to be illustrated with photographs. Following Du Camp were a number of French photographers. Among them was Félix Teynard (Égypte et Nubie, 1852), who used the nuances of the calotype process to not simply record the monuments before him, but to imbue them with an artistic sense of form and light.

Another early photographer to visit Egypt was the American John Beasely Greene who visited in the 1850's. Greene (whose work appeared in Le Nil, monuments et paysages, 1854) was primarily interested in archaeology, publishing other works on Egyptology.23

With the advent of the wet collodion glass plate negative in the late 1850's, thousands of prints could be made from a single negative allowing the cheap mass production of images, bringing Egypt to an even wider audience than had been one through earlier travelers' tales illustrated with engravings. The Englishman Francis Frith, who first traveled to Egypt in 1856 and was to make a number of further trips, was amongst the first to use this process and in so doing left the greatest collection of photographic images of mid 19th century Egypt. The collodion process had numerous drawbacks. The glass plates were fragile and easily broken; the wet plates dried quickly in the Egyptian heat and had to be developed immediately in dark, hot, airless tent/darkrooms that themselves had to be dragged by camels or carried in boats up the Nile. Frith's photographs of Egypt and the Holy Land were astoundingly successful earning him a fortune and allowing him to set up Frith and Co. which continued to sell his prints as well as take more that were then sold to armchair tourists as well as true travelers for decades to come.24

As the various photographic techniques and processes were simplified, even the most casual of travelers could now record his trip up the Nile with his own camera. The introduction of the Kodak camera in late 19th century forever removed photography from the circle of travelers with the skill and means to lug many pounds of equipment and allowed anyone to take his own snapshot of his wife on a camel, or the same wife to snap her husband being pushed-pulled up the side the Pyramid of Cheops. In 1893–94, the Buxton sisters (Hannah, Clare, and Theresa) along with their father, Edward, traveled to Egypt with their Kodak, and in 1895 published their account illustrated with their “snap-shots.”25
The third of these groups to visit Egypt at this time were the professional artists. Earlier travel literature from Egypt was frequently filled with illustrations. These early works, however, were usually illustrated with an eye more towards the fanciful than the factual. With needle-shaped spires surrounded by Corinthian columns passing for the Giza pyramids and the Sphinx depicted as the nude torso of a woman rising from the sea of desert sand like some Bedouin’s dream of a giant mermaid, it was no surprise that Egypt was believed to be a land where mythical reptiles still lived.

As more sober minded and scientific travelers visited Egypt, however, Egypt as a land for the pictorial imagination gave way to an Egypt for the draftsman, architect, and copyist. Though such works as the Description d’Égypte, Lepsius’ Denkmaeler aus Aegypten und Aethiopien (1849–56), and Rosselini’s I monumenti dell’Egitto e della Nubia (1832–44), contain beautiful illustrations, often done by brilliant professional artists, at heart their purpose was to depict and record Egyptian antiquity and present it to a scientific audience for archeological and architectural purposes.

The 1830’s saw a number of British and Continental artists travel to Egypt to capture the exotic nature of Egypt past and present for audiences at home. Among the important British artists to visit at this time was David Roberts. Roberts, a member of the Royal Academy, traveled extensively throughout the Levant and Egypt. His elaborate depictions of the mosques and other contemporary scenes in Egypt as well as the ancient ruins were published in full-color lithographs in large folio volumes with accompanying text by well known writers at the time like Binon, Birch, and Brockedon.26

William Henry Bartlett, a noted illustrator, also visited the Levant in 1838 and took a Nile trip in 1845. The resulting publication, The Nile Boat (1849), brought together both his excellent depictions of Egypt as well as personal comments of a traveler in Egypt. Other English artists visiting Egypt included David Wilkie, Frederick Catherwood, and Edward Lear (who, unfortunately left no account).

It was, however, the French who were to turn depictions of the Levant and Egypt into less an occasional thing and into a movement, Orientalism. Horace Vernet and Tissot visited Egypt and the Levant for first hand material to illustrate Biblical scenes. Though he had made numerous other trips to the Near East, Jean Léon Gérôme made his first trip to Egypt in 1869 for the opening of the Suez Canal, was the father of the movement. Gérôme surrounded himself with pupils and admirers while in Egypt (including Paul Lenoir who published a marvelous account of life with the artist in Egypt, Le Fayoum, le Sinai et Pétra in 1872). In 1893, by which time the movement was essentially finished, the Sociétés des Peintres Orientalistes was formed with the elderly Gérôme as the honorary president.

Artists of all types and nationalities continued to visit Egypt; just a few include Elihu Vedder (American, 1889–90); Lance Thackeray, British, c.1907); and Robert Talbot Kelly (British, c.1883–1902).

World War I and After

The First World War once more saw Egypt as a strategic battleground and letters and memoirs from British, French, and German soldiers at the war front near the Suez Canal again told the terrible story of foreign soldiers at war in Egypt.

The close of the war saw great changes in Egypt. In 1922 Britain formally relinquished control of Egypt to the Constitutional Monarchy headed by King Fuad I. Travelers came, if anything, in greater numbers, but the world had changed. Travel accounts have continued to be written by the famous (Julian Huxley’s From an Antique Land, 1954) and the lesser known who still have interesting adventures on the Nile (Charlie Pye-Smith’s The Other Nile, 1986), but these travelers and their works are for another time.

Conclusions

Today’s traveler to Egypt follows much the same itinerary set down by Herodotus 2500 years ago and described by countless other travelers during that time.

To be sure there are some changes. Instead of coming to Alexandria or Port Said, the modern traveler arrives at the Cairo International Airport. In Cairo, the familiar sights of the dozens of mosques, the Citadel, and even the New Shepheard’s Hotel are visited.

The Pyramids, alas, are often enveloped in a smoggy haze when viewed from Cairo, but on clear days, today’s traveler is sure to find them as magnificent as visitors in the past did.
Rather than taking a slow river trip up the Nile, an overnight train or a few hours air trip finds the modern traveler 500 miles up the Nile in Nubia. And where Amelia Edwards spent days waiting for the right winds to carry her to Abu Simbel, today, a hurried trip by plane and bus takes the tourist to Ramesses II’s fantastic temple only miles from the Sudanese border.

Like the traveler of the past, today’s visitor after rushing up the Nile, makes a leisurely trip downstream past the numerous Ptolemaic temples. Aboard any of a number of floating palaces run by the world’s premier hoteliers, the traveler is catered to in luxury before arriving at the awesome splendor of the temples at Luxor and the tombs of Thebes.

The Red Sea and the Suez Canal are no longer a journey to write home about, but just one more beach resort for the sun-seeking European and American. Suez itself is just a cheap (though long) taxi ride from Cairo, leading to a beach club on Crocodile Lake.

Though relatively few of the millions of visitors to Egypt have written of their travels, probably all have been affected in some way by the experience. James Augustus St. John (himself a frequent traveler to Egypt in the 19th century), opens his book The Lives of the Celebrated Travelers with the following passage:

Dr. [Robert] Southey, speaking of the works of travelers, very justly remarks that “of such books we cannot have too many!” and adds, with equal truth, that “because they contribute to the instruction of the learned, their reputation suffers no diminution by the course of time, but that age rather enhances their value.” Every man, indeed, whose comprehensive mind enables him to sympathize with human values under all its various aspects, and to detect—through the endless disguises superinduced by strange religions, policies, manners, or climate—passions, weaknesses, and virtues akin to his own, must peruse the relations of veracious travelers with peculiar satisfaction and delight, v. 1, p. i.

Egypt has seen many changes since the visit of Herodotus. A trip to Egypt is no longer a major excursion taking weeks or months, but can be squeezed into ten days as part of a package tour. And those ten days for the right visitor, I am certain, would make a marvelous book.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Introduction

A NOTE ON THE COMPILATION

SOURCES

The primary source for the items in this bibliography was the Library of Congress' catalog (both the card form and the automated system). Though the Library of Congress catalog provided a vast amount of material, there were a number of limitations to this source. To supplement the Library of Congress records, I used a number of sources. For pre-1801 imprint items, the Edward Cox's A Reference Guide to the Literature of Travel (1935–49) and The Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences' Catalogue of the Egyptological Library and other books from the collection of the late Charles Edwin Wilbour (1924) were invaluable. In many instances, it was the travelers themselves who led me to interesting material when they would supply suggested reading lists for future travelers. Coverage of Continental European travelers, is, alas, much less thorough than I would have hoped. The British Library Catalog was an extremely useful source for bibliographic data on many British and Continental travelers, but I feel certain the Bibliothèque Nationale must have fascinating holdings, particularly in the area of early 19th century imprints.

CRITERIA FOR INCLUSION

The items in this bibliography are primarily firsthand accounts of the Nile Valley and the nearby deserts by the men and women who visited there from antiquity to the close of the First World War. Excluded are the numerous works of a strictly scientific, archaeological, political, instructional, or anthropological nature.

EDITIONS

In all cases, I attempted to examine the first edition of a work in the original language. Also, when possible, I examined an edition in an English or French translation. In each entry, the first edition is usually cited, as well as any edition or editions used for the annotation. In some instances a work may have seen numerous editions or be available in a recent reprint; I have tried to include this information when possible.

Organization

Entries are organized chronologically with travelers who visited Egypt during the same time period being arranged alphabetically. In many cases, fixing the exact date of travel was impossible and the following system and chronological order was used:

184— The source gives only this general date.

1840 The traveler was in Egypt some part of this year; evidence for this date is in the work or a supplemental source.

1840(?) No specific date of travel could be discerned in the work; this date is based on publication date and/or other evidence.

1840–42 The traveler was in Egypt some part of these years; evidence for this date is in the work or a supplemental source.

1840–42(?) No specific date of travel could be discerned in the work; these dates are based on publication date and/or other evidence.

When a traveler made two or more separate trips to Egypt, during different years, each with its own separate account, each item will appear in the year of travel relevant to that work.

Sample Entry

0913¹ Hogarth, David George, 1862–1927²

A Note on the Compilation

Date of Travel: 1893–965
Nationality: British6

a. Hogarth, an Oxford professor, visited Egypt, traveling throughout the country, each winter for three years.7

b. A brief account only of the area around Alexandria. Mostly concerned with other parts of the East.7

1. Entry Number
2. Author's name and life dates, if known
3. First edition or work
4. Second edition or work
5. Date of Travel
6. Nationality
7. Annotation(s)

A Note on Nationality

Fixing nationality of the traveler was a sometimes difficult task. However, the following conventions were used:

If there was no evidence of nationality, I chose the nation of publication;
For travelers who wrote in German, I have assigned each of them the German nationality (unless Austrian, Swiss, etc. can be made) for all times, even before the establishment of the German nation;
Likewise, British is used for all writers from the British Isles, except in the cases of very early Irish travelers;
Designations such as the Flemish are used to avoid the absurdity of a 15th-century Belgian.

I apologize beforehand for any incongruities, inconsistencies, and outright errors that may appear, but feel in general the nationality notation will be of use.
Annotations

Though the vast majority of items in the bibliography have been annotated, for those I was unable to examine, I have provided the source of my citation. For items in certain languages (Finnish, Hungarian, Polish, Swedish, Russian, etc.), the annotations are usually limited to lists of cities in Egypt the traveler visited. These items are marked NOT SEEN.

Biographical information on some of the travelers has been drawn from a number of the usual biographical dictionaries such as the Dictionary of National Biography, Dictionary of American Biography, and Who Was Who in Egyptology (see the bibliography at end of introductory essay for the full citation).

A Note on Arabic and Egyptian Names and Transliteration

The romanization of Arabic and Egyptian names seemed to be as often an exercise in whimsy as a practice of science on the part of most travelers; therefore, to keep the flavor of the original, in direct quotations, all names and place names are as the writer transliterated them. For our own modern custom of standardization, I have used the transliteration of all Arabic and Egyptian names and place names as they appear in Baedeker’s Egypt (Englewood Cliffs, NJ: Prentice-Hall, Inc.).

For the transliteration of Cyrillic alphabets, I have used the Library of Congress’ transliteration. When that has been unavailable, I have provided a translation of the title.

Principal, Common, and Usual Sights

As many travelers to Egypt visited the same sights and saw the same attractions, these are not listed in every annotation. Below is a list of most of the popular sights visited by most travelers:

Alexandria: In Alexandria and vicinity, travelers would visit the harbor, Pompey’s Pillar, Cleopatra’s Needles (one is now in New York City while the other is in London), the Catacombs, the Mahmudiya Canal, and Cleopatra’s Baths (a natural rock formation).

Cairo: In the city of Cairo itself, the Citadel of Saladin, the numerous mosques, the Nilometer on the island of Roda, the Coptic Quarter of Old Cairo, bazaars (principally the Khan el-Khalili), the Egyptian Museum (after 1857, present site 1897), were all regularly described by travelers. Shepheard’s Hotel, founded in 1841 by an Englishman, was the residence of choice for nearly every traveler until it was destroyed in 1952.

Other less common sights were the Zoological Gardens, ostrich farms (during the later 19th century), Cairo’s asylum, and chicken hatcheries (Europeans seemed to be endlessly fascinated by the Egyptian incubators!).

Four events were also regularly witnessed and described from the earliest times: the colorful Islamic weddings; the Islamic funeral processions; the departure of the Pilgrimage Caravan to Mecca; and the religious rites of the Whirling Dervishes.

In the vicinity of Cairo, the primary attractions were the three large Pyramids on the Giza plateau (Cheops, Chephren and Mycerinus) and the Great Sphinx; the Step Pyramid of Djoser and its surrounding tombs and lesser pyramids; the ruins of Memphis; and Heliopolis (where Plato was said to have visited).

THE NILE: A trip up or down the Nile presented the traveler with a colorful array of sights to write about. Numerous types of river vessels were seen or traveled in. The cange (a small, practical, and uncomfortable boat), the graceful dahabeah (a larger craft whose opulence was limited only by the depth of the traveler’s pocketbook), and the felucca (a lateen sailed vessel still seen on the Nile).

While traveling the Nile in one of these boats (which by the 1870’s were often steam powered), the traveler saw the natives (the fella, fellahin, pl.) working the land and drawing water from the river by means of the shaduf (a weighted water bucket—still in use in some places), and ever less frequently and only further south, crocodiles which were often shot for sport.

Ptolemaic temples were usually visited: Esna, Edfu, Dendera, and Kom Ombo. On the Nile two major stops were made, Luxor and Aswan.

LUXOR: The city of Luxor (known as Thebes in classical times), site of the great temples of Karnak and Luxor is also the site (on the opposite bank of the Nile), of the great burial grounds of the Egyptians, the Valley of the Kings, the Valley of the Queens, and the Valley of the Officials. In this same area are the ruins of the huge funeral temples of Hatshepsut (Deir el-Bahri), Mentuhotep II, Medinet Habu, and Ramesses II (the Ramesseum), as well as the Colossi of Memnon (remnants of a temple of Amenophis III).
ASWAN: Aswan, the southernmost point for most travelers is full of sights for tourists. The ancient quarries where the pharaohs found the stone for their numerous temples and monuments, a Moslem cemetery, Elephantine Island, the First Cataract of the Nile, the Old Aswan Dam (1898–1912), and the jewel in the string of Ptolemaic temples along the Nile, the Temple of Isis at Philae (nearly completely submerged by the building of the Old Aswan Dam and saved from complete drowning by the High Aswan Dam only by being moved to the higher ground of the island of Agilka).

FURTHER SOUTH: Southward from Aswan lay a few more temples (principally the Kalabsha and Dendur—which was removed to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York during the construction of the Aswan High Dam). Finally, nearly 800 miles from Cairo, is the great temple of Abu Simbel built by Ramesses II and first visited by Europeans in 1813 when the traveler Johann L. Burckhardt rediscovered the sight.

Wadi Halfa, today part of the Sudan, is the site of the Second Cataract and the southern terminus of most travelers to Egypt and is the gateway to Ethiopia, the Sudan, and Central Africa.

THE SINAI: For many travelers, a visit to Egypt was a religious pilgrimage, merely another stop on the way to the Holy Land. For these as well as other more secular travelers, a visit to Egypt would be incomplete without a journey in the footsteps of Moses to the Sinai. From earliest times, the mountains of the Sinai (particularly Mt. Sinai and Mt. Horeb) and the monastery of St. Catherine (where Moses was said to have received the Ten Commandments) attracted visitors.

With the construction of the Suez Canal (opened 1869) and the creation or growth of three new cities (Port Said in the north, Ismailia in the center and Suez in the south), visitors both traveled through the Canal for practical purposes and to simply make the trip. Alexandria, which had been the principal port of entry for most visitors to Egypt since 331 B.C., yielded to Port Said.

OTHER LOCATIONS: The Fayyum, a large oasis fifty-six miles southwest of Cairo, was a popular spot for many visitors who wished merely to relax and avoid any form of strenuous sightseeing. The same cannot be said of the oases of Siwa (almost 100 miles due west of Cairo) which even today is difficult to reach. Most travelers to Siwa were explorers, scientists or the extremely curious. Another large oasis, that of Kharga (approximately forty miles west of Luxor) was also a sight usually only visited by the hardy.
LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

Standard abbreviations are used throughout; special ones are listed below:

IFAO Institut Français d'Archéologie Orientale du Caire

LC Library of Congress bibliographic catalog (card and automated system).

NUC The National Union Catalog (pre-1956 imprints to present).

Herodotus was perhaps the first and certainly the most influential writer to describe his trip to Egypt. The entire second book of The History is devoted to Egypt, its history, geography, myths, and people. With Egyptian priests as his guides, Herodotus traveled as far south as Aswan. He discounts the explanation of the flooding of the Nile (snows melting in the South) told him by the Egyptian priests which turned out to be true, and his story of the building of the Great Pyramid is, if not accurate, entertaining. Herodotus, for the present day traveler, should be the first thing read on Egypt, as he was for travelers for the past 2,500 years. Grene's recent translation is very readable.

Diodorus, a Sicilian Greek, wrote the monumental Historical Library in which Egypt is covered in Book 1. In this work, Diodorus gives the history of Egypt from the earliest times through Alexander the Great. Like Herodotus, he gives a physical description of Egypt and recounts its myths and mysteries. Traveling throughout Egypt, Diodorus, like Herodotus, tells of the building of the Pyramids. Also in this work is the inscription on a fallen colossal statue of Ramesses II ("I am Osymandias, King of Kings. Should any man seek to know how great I am and where I lie, let him surpass one of my works," p. 63), that inspired Shelley’s "Ozymandias." Excellent new translation by Edwin Murphy.
0003 Caesar, C. Julius, 102-44 B.C.

Date of Travel: 49-48 B.C. Nationality: Roman

a. In The civil wars, Caesar discusses Egypt in Book III (Loeb edition pages 343-359). This is Caesar’s account, in the third person, of his arrival in Alexandria to quell the attempts of Pompeius to take Egypt for his own. The classic account of Caesar rallying Cleopatra’s troops to his side to win Egypt still makes for good reading. Includes a detailed description of the harbor of Alexandria as well as its lighthouse.

b. Though probably not written by Julius Caesar, these three works have been attributed to him. Of the three, only the “Alexandrian War” deals with Egypt. Includes a detailed account of the battle for Alexandria as well as an in-depth description of the city itself: “For Alexandria is well-nigh fire-proof, because its buildings contain no wooden joinery and are held together by an arched construction,” p. 1.

0004 Strabo, c.63 B.C. to 21 A.D.

Date of Travel: 25-19 B.C.(?) Nationality: Roman

Another of the important Classical writers on Egypt who influenced later travelers, Strabo gives a very detailed account of Egypt from Alexandria to Nubia and a good description of the people, products and antiquities of Egypt. “Here are two colossi, which are near one another and are each made of a single stone; one of them is preserved, but the upper parts of the other from the seat up, fell when an earthquake took the place, so it is said. It is believed that once each day a noise, as of a slight blow, emanates from the part of the latter that remains on the throne and its base,” Book 17.1.46. This translation is clear and well annotated.
0005 Tacitus, b. c. 56 A.D.

Date of Travel: 19
Nationality: Roman

Tacitus gives the account of Germanicus who visited Egypt and the East in 19 AD. Germanicus, traveling as far south as Aswan, had broke Augustus’ rule of Senators or members of the Imperial household traveling to Egypt without his direct permission, but was eventually forgiven and while in Egypt, lowered grain prices by opening the granaries. “But other marvels, too, arrested the attention of Germanicus: in especial, the stone colossus of Memnon, which emits a vocal sound when touched by the rays of the sun,” v.3, p. 491.

0006 Josephus, Flavius, 37-c.98

Date of Travel: 66(?)
Nationality: Jewish

Josephus, the renowned Jewish historian, gives a good physical description of Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan, in particular, its strategic importance. Original in Greek.

0007 Plinius Secundus, C. (Pliny the Elder), 23–79

Nationality: Roman

“In Egypt too are pyramids, which must be mentioned, if only cursorily. They rank as a superfluous and foolish display of wealth on the part of the kings,” 36.16.75. One of the most important Classical sources for later travelers, Pliny gives a detailed description of Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan, including Pharos, Memphis, and the Pyramids. The date of Pliny’s travel is not known. He died in 79 while watching the eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

0008 Saint Silvia
The pilgrimage of S. Silvia of Aquitania to the holy places (circ. 385
Nile Notes of a Howadji

Date of Travel: 385(?) Nationality: French

Translated by John Bernard from a Latin text. Only a visit to Mount Sinai covered in the Egypt section.

0009 Arculfus, bp., 7th cent.

Date of Travel: 700(?) Nationality: French

Brief account of Alexandria

0010 Dicuil, fl. 825

Date of Travel: 775(?) Nationality: Franco/Irish

Dicuil, a Carolingian historian, primarily rewrote the works of Classical historians (particularly Pliny) in Latin verse. In his account of Egypt, however, he includes a description of the country given him by a brother Fidelis who reportedly visited Egypt and the Holy Land in 775 A.D.

0011 Bernard, the Wise, 9th cent.

Date of Travel: 867(?) Nationality: Jewish

A good account of Alexandria, and the pre-Cairo settlement of Babylon (now Old Cairo).
0012 Saewulf

Date of Travel: 1102–03 Nationality: Unknown

A visit to the Sinai.

0013 Bale

Date of Travel: 1130 Nationality: British

Athelard, a monk of the abbey of Bath, “was so diligent a searcher of the secrets, and causes of naturall things, that he deserveth worthely to be compared with some of the auncient Philosophers.” According to the author, Bale, Athelard traveled through Egypt and Arabia in search of mysteries. In Latin and English.

0014 Benjamin ben Jonah, of Tudela, 12th cent.

Date of Travel: 1171 Nationality: Jewish

Benjamin, an Iberian Jew, traveled extensively in the Near East in the late 12th century. In Egypt, he traveled from Alexandria to Aswan, including a side trip to the Fayyum. An excellent early account, which includes his report on the status (and census) of Jews in Egypt. Numerous early editions.

0015 Anonymous
Glasgow: James MacLehose and Sons; New York: Macmillan, 1903–05. 12 v.

Date of Travel: 1248–49    Nationality: British

Traveling with the French, Longespee and his English followers helped the French take Damietta. Due to the foolishness of the French, however, the forces are trapped by the Saracens and Longespee is killed. Written from an obviously English point of view, this is a good account of warfare during the Crusades.

0016 Hayton (Haiton, Haycon, or Aithon), Nicholas
L’Hystoire merveilleuse, plaisante et récréative du grand empereur de Tartarie, seigneur parle du pays de Syrie, et des villes sur mer, d’Égypte, du Désert du Mont Synaï, d’Arabe, et des saints lieux, etc.
Paris, 1529.

Date of Travel: 1300(?)    Nationality: Armenian(?)

NOT SEEN. CITED IN HILMY. Hayton was king of Little Armenia or Cilicia from 1224 to 1269, abdicating to become a monk and travel in the East. See note in COX for full history of this item.

0017 Fitzsimmons, Simon fr. (Symonis Semeonis)

Date of Travel: 1322–23(?)    Nationality: British

“The number of camels in this city is infinite, and of the multitude of the sheep and goats there is no end,” p. 27. Fitzsimmons (Anglicized from the original Symonis Semeonis) is believed to be of Anglo-Irish origin with English as his mother tongue. His trip to the Holy Land included stops in Alexandria and Cairo (of which he made the above remark). His account is both entertaining and informative. Original manuscript illuminated by Hugo of Hibernia at Cambridge University.

0018 Mandeville, Sir John, (14th century?)
Date of Travel: 1322–66(?) Nationality: British

Whether a person named "Sir John Mandeville" actually travelled through Egypt and the East, the travels ascribed to him was one of the most influential travel books of the Middle Ages. According to Moseley's introduction, the manuscript edition of the Travels first began to circulate between 1356 and 1366 and by 1400 was available in nearly every European language. A few chapters are devoted to Egypt giving a neat, complete description of the country from a medieval viewpoint. The Pyramids (thought to be "Joseph’s Barns" for the storing of wheat during the seven Biblical years of lean) are described, as are the Monastery of St. Catherine and the Sinai.

Date of Travel: 1326 (1349) Nationality: Arab

Ibn Batuta, a great traveler, visited Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, Aswan and the Fayyum), giving an excellent, descriptive account of the land, people and antiquities. Fascinating reading as he quotes from Arabic poetry on Egypt and the Nile. First part of trip was in 1326 and he passed through Egypt again in 1349.

0020 Ludolfus de Suchem, 14th cent.

Date of Travel: 1336–41(?) Nationality: German

Visited Alexandria, Cairo, and the Sinai. Translated by Aubrey Stewart.

0021 Frescobaldi, Leonardo, fl. 1384–1405
a. Viaggio di Lionardo di Niccolò Frescobaldi . . . in Egitto e Terra Santa, con un discorso dell’editore sopra il commercio degli’italiani

Date of Travel: 1384  Nationality: Italian

Frescobaldi, along with twelve other Tuscans (see below) visited Egypt and the Holy Land. In Egypt, they saw Alexandria, Cairo and the Sinai. Frescobaldi gives an interesting account of Moslems in Alexandria, a physical description of Cairo, the dress of Cairenes, and the strange animals (elephants and giraffes) he saw in Cairo. Impressed with Cairo, he visits the Holy sites in Old Babylon and then is off to the Sinai and St. Catherine’s monastery and then Jerusalem. First published edition was in Italian. The English account is well annotated and introduced.

0022 Gucci, Giorgio

Date of Travel: 1384  Nationality: Italian

Similar to Frescobaldi’s account (q.v.), but more concrete. Also, Gucci includes the Pyramids and the Citadel which Frescobaldi omits.

discusses the government of Egypt. A basic account of the state of Egypt in 1634.

0092 Blount, Henry, 1602–1682
A voyage into the Levant. A briefe relation of a journey, lately performed by Master H.B. gentleman, from England by way of Venice, into Dalmatia, Sclavonia, Bosnah, Hungary, Macedonia, Thessaly, Thrace, Rhodes and Egypt, unto Gran Cairo: with particular observations concerning the moderne conditions of the Turkes, and other people under that empire. London: Printed by I.
Leggatt for Andrew Crooke, 1636.

Date of Travel: 1634
Nationality: British

A good, but brief account of Alexandria and Cairo, filled with facts about commerce and natural history. "Many rarities of living Creatures I saw in Gran Cairo: but the most ingenious was a nest of four-leg’d Serpents, of two foot long, black and ugly, kept by a Frenchman, who when he came to handle them, they would not endure him, but ran, and hid in their hole," pp. 58–59.
0093 Gogara, Vasilii

As also, A voyage to the Levant: a description of Candia, Egypt, the Red Sea, the desarts of Arabia, Mount- Horeb, and Mount-Sinai; the coasts of Palestine, Syria, and Asia-Minor; the Helespont, Propontis, and Constantino-ple; the isles of the Carpathian, Egean, and Ionian seas. Wherein, their present state, interest, customs, manners, and religion; their learning, and learned men; with the most celebrated pieces of sculpture, painting, &c. are more accurately set forth, than hath hitherto been done . . . And what else occurr’d most remarkable in thirteen years travels. Illustrated with divers figures. By E. Veryard, M.D. London: Printed, and sold by S. Smith and B. Walford, 1701. 360 p.

Date of Travel: 1678        Nationality: British

An excellent account of Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, Suez and the Sinai). Though Veryard did not care for the Egyptians ("The Natives of Egypt are generally proud, beggarly, lazy, illiterate, instable, unfaithful, treacherous, and such as would not stick at any thing that's Ill on the prospect of least Gain," p. 310), he does include chapters on the Copts and on Islam. Illustrated with engravings.

0113 Pitts, Joseph, 1662–3–1735?

b. A faithful account of the religion and manners of the Mahometans: in which is a particular relation of their pilgrimage to Mecca . . . and a description of Medina . . . as likewise of Algier and the country adjacent, and of Alexandria, Grand Cairo, &c.: with an account of the author's being taken captive, the Turks cruelty to him, and of his escape. The fourth edition, corrected, with additions, a map of Mecca, and a cut of the gestures of the Mahometans in their worship. London: Printed for T. Longman . . . and R. Hett, 1738. 259 p.

Date of Travel: 1685        Nationality: British

b. "There is in no Part of the World, I am apt to think, greater Encouragement given to Whoredom, than in Egypt. It is impossible for me to give you a full Account of their Licentiousness of this kind, and which is tolerated too," p. 67. Pitts, who had been captured by the Turks and served as a slave, did not see Egypt under the best circumstances and thus has a bit of a biased view of the country. He traveled through Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez. An interesting account.

b. Voyage d'Égypte et de Nubie ouvrage enrichi de cartes & de figures dessinées sur les lieux, par l'auteur même. Copenhagen: Imprimerie de la Maison Royale, 1755. 2 v. in 1.

Date of Travel: 1737–38  Nationality: Danish

An explorer for the King of Denmark, Norden traveled through Egypt from Alexandria as far as Deri in Nubia. In addition to examining nearly all the ruins along the way, Norden comments on the people of Egypt: "The conversations of the people, with whom one makes acquaintance in the country, gives commonly into the marvelous. They relate a thousand accidents that, they pretend, have happened to travelers, or to others," p. 35. Norden’s description of the Pyramids is good, as are the numerous engravings which though mostly accurate, often venture into the fanciful. Includes index. First published in French as Voyage d'Égypte et de Nubie, Copenhagen, 1755 in 2 volumes. The English edition keeps the French titles for many of the plates.

0140 Pococke, Richard, bp. of Meath, 1704–1765
A description of the East and some other countries. London: Printed for the author, 1743–45. 2 v. in 3.

Date of Travel: 1737–38  Nationality: British

Pococke, before beginning his clerical duties in Great Britain (he was later Bishop of Meath) and traveling throughout the British Isles and writing of his adventures, made a journey to the East. His Description of the East is perhaps, along with Norden’s Travels in Egypt and Nubia, the best source for information of all types on Egypt in the early 18th century. Traveling from Alexandria to Cairo and then on to Saqqara, Pococke visited the sights as far south as Philae. After returning to Cairo, he crossed the Sinai (stopping at the monastery of St. Catherine) and thence on to Arabia Petra and the Holy Land. The work is divided into five books of which the first three are Pococke’s actual travels. The fourth includes observations on the government, customs, natural history of Egypt. The fifth book contains miscellaneous subjects such as lists of the bishops of Egypt. A veritable encyclopedia of Egypt written in a lively style. Illustrated with engravings.

0141 Sandwich, John Montagu, 4th earl of, 1718–
A voyage performed by the late Earl of Sandwich round the Mediterranean in the years 1738 and 1739. Written by himself... To which are prefixed, memoirs of the noble author’s life. Edited by John Cook. London: Printed for T. Cadell Jun. and W. Davies, 1799. 539 p.

Date of Travel: 1738–39 Nationality: British

“After a stay of about six weeks at Grand Cairo, we descended the Nile by our former conveyance, as far as Rossetto, and thence to Alexandria, where we arrived the fourth day after our departure from Cairo,” p. 485. A good account of Alexandria and Cairo, with a detailed description of Islam, and an excellent description of the Pyramids. Illustrated with engravings.

0142 Perry, Charles, 1698–1780

Date of Travel: 1740(?) Nationality: British

“The Hurry and Confusion one meets with in passing the principal Streets of Cairo, what with the Number of People, Camels, Asses, and, which is of all the greatest Eye-sore, the Grandees, (to whom you must pay the Reverence of dismounting, on Peril, or rather, full Assurance, of being knock’d off your Ass for want of Respect) is very incommodious,” p. 224. 0147 Hasselquist, Fredrik, 1722–1752

Date of Travel: 1750–51  Nationality: Swedish

Hasselquist, a pupil of Charles Linnaeus, was a great explorer as well as naturalist. Traveling from Alexandria through Cairo and then on to the Holy Land, Hasselquist collected for study specimens ranging from snakes to insects to plants. In fact, it is this aspect of Egypt that most fascinates him: “All the architecture, magnificence, and experience that shine in the excellent Pyramids, cannot give a contemplator of nature such high ideas, as the art of these little creatures (the Lion ant, Hemerobius Fromicaleo), can excite,” p. 71. A fascinating book with numerous lists of the plants and animals of Egypt.

Date of Travel: 1768–69
Nationality: British

Bruce, the great Scottish explorer of Africa, failed in his attempt to find the source of the Nile, but his exploration paved the way for many more travelers who came after him. Beginning his trip in Alexandria, Bruce travels through Egypt on the Nile to the Sudanese border and beyond. His very readable account is still fascinating today. “I have always considered the French at Cairo, as a number of honest, polished, and industrious men, by some fatality condemned to the galleys; and I must own, never did a set of people bear their continued vexations with more fortitude and manliness,” v.1, p. 25. Date of Travel: 1773–1798 Nationality: British

Baldwin, at first a merchant and later the British consul-general in Egypt (1785–1796), gives an interesting account of his time spent in Egypt. Much of the book is devoted to politics and the events that led up to Napoleon’s invasion. An excellent book. Includes “A narrative of the ever-memorable British campaign in the spring of 1801” and advice to troops in Egypt. “I arrived at Alexandria in July 1775, and succeeded very prosperously in establishing a direct commerce from England to Egypt,” p. 6.

0155 Binos, Abbé de

Date of Travel: 1776 Nationality: French

In letters home, Binos gives a good, detailed account of Egypt. “Je ne crois pas qu’il y ait de lieu où le ciel soit plus serein que dans ce climat. Jamais des nuages n’y cachent le soleil; on n’y voit ni pluie ni brouillard; la fraîcheur des nuits dédommange des chaleurs du jour,” p. 289 (18 August 1777). Illustrated with engravings.

A series of adventures in the course of a voyage up the Red-Sea, on the coasts of Arabia and Egypt; and of a route through the desarts of Thebais, hitherto unknown to the European traveller, in the year M.DCC.LXXVII. Dublin: Printed for W. Sleater; 1780. 576 p.

Date of Travel: 1777 Nationality: British

Traveling “In the service of the Honorable East India Company,” Irwin tells the story of his trip from India back to England via Egypt in a series of letters to “a Lady” and others. Sailing from India, he landed at Cossier and then traveled overland to Suez and then on to Luxor, Cairo and Alexandria. More interested in adventures (and getting home) than seeing the sights, Irwin comments as follows when seeing the Pyramids in the distance: “Travelers like us, who fall by accident into a country replete with the monuments of past ages, and whose time is not at their own disposal, to gratify the desire of investigating the remains of decayed art, can only skim the surface of the stream they would willingly dive into,” pp. 337–38. Includes two poems by Irwin (“Ode to the Dessert” and “Ode to the Nile”) as well as numerous engravings and maps.

Date of Travel: 1777–80 Nationality: French

A naturalist, Sonnini de Manoncourt traveled extensively through Egypt (from Alexandria to Aswan), making notes on the flora and fauna, the customs of the people, and only incidentally, the antiquities (he does notice the Pyramids). Written a number of years after his visit, with a watchful eye to the Revolutionary authorities, Sonnini de Manoncourt slips in the requisite number of praises for "Le citoyen." An interesting account with an amusing section on Egyptian cats and dogs: "Chez une nation, pour laquelle le physique est tout, et le moral presque rien, les dehors séduisants des chats paroissent préférable à la docilité, à l’instinct exquis, à la sensible fidélité du chien," p. 319, v.1. Capper, working for the British in India, published a letter describing the trip through Egypt to India. Though most of the book is taken up with the land route through Syria to India, Capper begins with an account of the Red Sea/Suez route, including a description of Alexandria and Cairo. “The city of Cairo and its environs as you well know are full of curiosities, but nothing attracted my attention so much as the infinite variety of people in the public streets, and yet I could discover nothing like an original national character among them,” p. 21. 0168 Sparks, Jared, 1789–1866, ed.

Date of Travel: 1789  Nationality: American

One of the great early American travelers, John Ledyard (1751–1789) first traveled with Captain Cook around the world and was with him when he was killed in Hawaii. A friend of Thomas Jefferson, the Marquis de Lafayette, Joseph Banks (q.v.), and others, Ledyard began his travels into Africa at the instigation of Jefferson on behalf of the London-based Africa Association. Unfortunately, he took ill in Cairo as he planned his trip into the interior and died at the age of 37. This item is a life, including selections from Ledyard’s letters and journals, and is fascinating reading. In a letter to Jefferson, then in Paris, Ledyard writes the following: “Alexandria at large presents a scene more wretched, than I have witnessed. Poverty, rapine, murder, tumult, blind bigotry, cruel persecution, pestilence! A small town built on the ruins of antiquity, as remarkable for its miserable architecture, as I suppose the place once was for its good and great works of the kind,” p. 304.

Date of Travel: 1790–95   Nationality: French

The English edition, done by an anonymous translator, has a misleading title as it does not include the section on Egypt. In the original French edition, volume 3 includes Olivier’s description of Egypt. Traveling throughout the Ottoman Empire, Olivier’s Egyptian travels appeared to be limited to the areas around Alexandria and Cairo. The description of Alexandria is particularly detailed as is his account of the Pyramids and the Sphinx: “On n’est pas plus d’accord sur celle du sphinx. Devait-il arrêter les sables de la Libye, et les empêcher de se répandre sur les terres cultivées? où bien n’était-il qu’une image symbolique, qui rappelait au peuple l’époque de l’année où le fleuve se débordait sur les terres, et y portait la fécondité?” v.3, p. 147. In addition to his account of his travels, Olivier also includes essays on the morals and politics of Egypt as well as a description of the plants and animals, agriculture, industry and commerce, comments on the French Expedition, and the cause of the Nile flood. Both editions illustrated with engravings and maps.

Date of Travel: 1797–98 Nationality: British

A member of the Africa Society (aka Association for Promoting the Discovery of the Interior Parts of Africa), Hornemann was friends with Mungo Park, John Ledyard (q.v.), and other notable explorers of Africa. This account of the deserts of North Africa includes a good section on Siwa as well as Cairo. “During the time I was first in conference with the people of Siwah, and those of the caravan, my baggage was left with my interpreter; who in the paroxysms of his fears, and indeed with no light apprehensions of our bales of goods being searched, took my remains of mummies, my specimens of mineralogy, my more detailed remarks, made on my way from Cairo to Schiacha, and generally my books, and gave them to a confidential slave of my Arab inmate to bury in a bog," p. 35. The introduction by William Young is a good summation of African exploration at the time. Illustrated with engravings.

0179 Nelson, Horatio Nelson Viscount, 1758–1805

Date of Travel: 1798 Nationality: British

Nelson, searching the Mediterranean for the French fleet, cruised about the shores of Egypt, occasionally landing in Alexandria. Eventually finding the French in the Bay of Aboukir, Nelson destroyed the French fleet at the Aboukir 1 August 1798, cutting Napoleon off from France and effectively eliminating the French threat in Egypt, though the struggle on land would go on for a number of years.

a. Very little on Egypt itself is in these letters and dispatches; most information is contained in the days before and after Aboukir.

b. Nelson continued to write his wife Frances Herbert Nelson ("Fanny") through both his great battles and affair with Emma, Lady Hamilton. Only one brief letter on Egypt is in this collection from after the Battle of Aboukir.

Memoires relative to Egypt, written in that country during the campaigns of General Bonaparte, in the years 1798 and 1799, by the learned and scientific men who accompanied the French expedition. London: R. Phillips, 1800. 459 p.

Date of Travel: 1798–99
Nationality: French

Translations of the early reports of the Institut d'Égypte from Egypt, probably to cash in on the popularity of things Eastern. The actual reports are by members of the Expedition such as Vivant Denon (q.v.) and others, and are not very personal, leaning towards the scientific. Illustrated with maps and plans.

0184 Napoleon I, Emperor of the French
a. Correspondance de Napoléon Ier; publiée par ordre de l'empereur Napoléon III. Paris: Imprimerie Impériale; 1858–69. 32 v. Edited by a commission headed by Jean Baptiste Philibert Vaillant.

Napoleon felt that Egypt was both the key to controlling the East and cutting off England from India. After his initial success with the Battle of the Pyramids and the founding of the Institute, there followed the naval loss at Aboukir. With the French forces cut off by the English, the prospect of holding Egypt was bleak. Napoleon evaded the English blockade and escaped back to France and cheering crowds, leaving Egypt in charge of generals Menou and Kléber, but in a hopeless situation that eventually led to their defeat.

a. Napoleon’s time in Egypt is covered in volumes 4–5 of his correspondence. Most of the letters, dispatches and proclamations are dated from Cairo, though there are others from Alexandria, the Fayyum and many other parts of Lower Egypt. Subjects discussed are primarily of a military nature, but there are some other interesting topics covered, such as the founding of the Institute: “Il y aura en Égypte un Institut par les sciences et arts, lequel sera établi au Caire,” 22 August 1798, v.4, p. 383.

b. Napoleon’s memoires, written while in exile at St. Helene, and edited from his manuscript by Baron Gourgaud, are a fascinating account of his career. The French Expedition is covered in volume 2. Including history, politics, military strategy, and pure travel writing, it is wonderful reading. It is here that Napoleon recounts his famous words of 11 July 1798 to the Army at the foot of the Great Pyramids before the French went on to defeat the Mamelukes: “Ce fut commencement de cette bataille, que Napoléon adressa aux soldats, ces paroles devenues si célèbres: Du haut de ces Pyramides, quarante siècles vous contemplez!” v.2, p. 239.

c. Printed at nearly the same time in Paris as the London edition, it is identical in content.

Denon, a member of the French Expedition to Egypt, artist, scholar, soldier, playwright, and bon vivant, traveled to Egypt with Napoleon and gives a fascinating account of his adventures in Egypt as soldier, artist, explorer, and archaeologist. One of the most important of the French works on Egypt from this time.

a. “J’avois toute ma vie désiré faire le voyage d’Égypte; mais le temps, qui use tout, aïoit usé aussi volonté. Lorsqu’il fut question de l’expédition qui devoit nous rendre maîtres de cette contrée, la possibilité d’exécuter mon ancien projet en réveilla le désir,” v.1, p. 1. The French edition includes a large folio of plates that show the kind of work Denon was doing in Egypt.

b. The second English edition, translated by Arthur Aikin is much nearer Denon’s intent and in the first person. Also includes “An Historical Account of the Invasion of Egypt by the French.”

c. This first English edition lacks the plates contained in the French (but see below, Egypt Delineated). It also has added “An Historical Account of the Invasion of Egypt by the French.” The rather free, third person translation is by E.A. Kendal.

d. This large folio volume includes the plates from Denon’s French work. Including selected text from Denon’s writings, it is primarily a descriptive work with none of the personal memoires of Denon. Text is in French and English.

Jean Baptiste Kléber took over from Napoleon in August of 1799 and was the de facto ruler till his assassination on the future site of Shepheard’s Hotel on 14 June 1800 (he did get an avenue in Paris named after him). Françoise Menou took over on Kléber’s death until the final surrender of the French in August 1801. This is mostly just their dispatches during their time in command.

0202 Drovetti, Bernadino, 1776–1852

Date of Travel: 1799–1829          Nationality: Italian/French

Drovetti ranks along with Henry Salt as one of the most important collectors of Egyptian antiquities at the turn of the 18th century. Born in Italy, he assumed French citizenship and was the French Consul-General in Egypt until 1829. His battles with Henry Salt (q.v.) and Giovanni Belzoni (q.v.) over antiquities were heated and made for fascinating history. His great collections later went to Turin, the Louvre, and Berlin. These two collections of his correspondence include letters to and from Belzoni, Salt, Cailhaud, Champollion and other major figures in early Egyptology. Most, however, are to Drovetti, so it is hard to discover what he was thinking.

Date of Travel: 1800 Nationality: British

Egypt is contained in volumes 2–3 of Clarke’s copious memoirs of his travels. Alexandria, Cairo, and the battle of Aboukir figure most prominently. Not all that interesting. Illustrated with engravings.

0204 Noé, Louis Pantaléon Jude Amédée comte de

Date of Travel: 1800 Nationality: French

Traveling from India in the service of the British, Noé landed at Cossier and traveled down the Nile to Cairo and Alexandria. An interesting account. Illustrated with colored engravings.

0205 Anderson, Aeneas, fl.1802
A journal of the forces which sailed from the Downs in April 1800, on a Secret Expedition under the command of Pocot, till their arrival in Minorca, and continued through all the subsequent Transactions of the Army under the command of Sir Ralph Abercromby in the Mediterranean and Egypt, and the later Operations under the command of Lord Hutchinson, to the surrender of Alexandria; with a particular Account of Malta, during the time it was subjected to the British government. London: Debrett, 1802. 562 p.

Date of Travel: 1800–01 Nationality: British

“From the sailing of the expedition from Malta, under Sir Ralph Abercromby, during the time it remained in Marmorice Bay, and to the final evacuation of Egypt by the French, an almost daily account is given of the proceedings of the British army; not only in its principal positions, as at Aboukir, Alexandria, and Cairo, but in its detached services, and all its intermediate operations," p. xii. Detailed military account of the actions in Egypt. Illustrated with engravings.

Voyages and travels to India, Ceylon, the Red Sea, Abyssinia, and Egypt, in the years 1802, 1803, 1804, 1805, and 1806. London: Printed for Wm. Miller, 1809. 3 v.

Date of Travel: 1806 Nationality: British

Coming to Egypt from India via Ethiopia and the Red Sea, Mountnorris gives a fascinating account as he meets with many of the famous men in Egypt (Henry Salt, q.v., Bernardino Drovetti, q.v.). “If it were dubious in the time of Herodotus, by whom, or for what purpose, the pyramids were constructed, it is scarcely possible that modern ingenuity should clear away the deeper gloom which the course of ages has covered the mystery,” v.3, p. 389. Illustrated with engravings after drawings by Henry Salt.

0220 Salamé, Abraham V., 1788–
A narrative of the expedition to Algiers in the year 1816 under the command of the Right Hon. Admiral Lord Viscount Exmouth.

Date of Travel: 1806–14      Nationality: Arab

Salamé, a native of Alexandria educated by a “Christian merchant from Syria,” was the interpreter for Lord Viscount Exmouth as well as serving with many other British officers in England. He begins his book with a biographical sketch, giving some interesting anecdotes of Egyptian life, as told from a native’s point of view. He continues with stories of his life in the service of the British, including a particularly interesting account of the opening of a mummy pit (“When I opened the cloth, I saw the face of a young girl, about twenty years of age. The hair, the features, the flesh, and the body, all together, were sound, and in a perfect state,” p. cxii). A well done book, though Salamé is very obsequious to the British at times. A large portion of the book is devoted to Salamé’s account of the British expedition to Algiers. Salamé moved to England in 1815.

0225 Athanasi, Giovanni d', 1799–1837?

b. _A series of highly finished engravings, by P.Q. Visconti, comprising a few of the principal objects in a collection of Egyptian antiquities, the property of Giovanni d’Athanasi, by whom the greater portion have been discovered._ London: For the proprietor, 1837. 12 p., 16 plates.

Date of Travel: 1809–37  Nationality: Greek/British

D’Athanasi, born in Greece, was only a boy when he came to Egypt. He quickly became employed in various capacities by the occupying British forces, rising to become the personal servant to Henry Salt, often leading the excavations in Salt’s name. After Salt’s death, D’Athanasi continued to collect antiquities and is frequently mentioned in other travelers’ works. He disappeared around 1837.

a. Beginning with a brief biography, D’Athanasi describes his life in Egypt in the company of the great explorers, adventurers, and diplomats such as Henry Salt, Giovanni Belzoni, John Lewis Burckhardt, Cailliaud, and Drovetti. D’Athanasi, who took Belzoni’s place as Henry Salt’s majordomo from 1819–27, gives an excellent account of life in the early days of Egyptian exploration (giving Salt’s side of the Belzoni controversy). “I should never have thought of laying before the public the slightest account of my adventures and proceedings during my sojourn in Upper Egypt, and more especially in the celebrated Thebes, but for the oft-repeated suggestion of several English travelers, who urged me to do so,” p. 1. Illustrated with engravings and includes the catalog to Henry Salt’s Egyptian collection (half of the book is this catalog).

b. An excellent series of engravings of Egyptian antiquities with commentary by D’Athanasi on his adventures in acquiring them.

Memoirs sur quelque parties de l’Égypte. Livourne, Italy: Jean Marenigh, 1814. 1 v.

Date of Travel: 1811(?)                     Nationality: French

A number of philosophical/meditative thoughts on Egypt; much of the book is devoted to the Exodus, though there are some travel comments. Dubois-Aymé was a member of the French Expedition and a number of his reports for the Expedition were pulled from the Description and printed separately, including this one.

0228 Stanhope, Hester Lucy, 1776–1839
a. Travels of Lady Hester Stanhope; forming the completion of her memoirs. Edited by Charles Lewis Meryon. London: H. Colburn, 1846. 3 v.

Date of Travel: 1812        Nationality: British

Stanhope, sister of William Pitt and "eccentric" (so says the Dictionary of National Biography), traveled extensively in the Holy Land, living in Palestine for a number of years, and was visited nearly as often as many of the other sights. Interesting, straightforward account of Alexandria and Cairo. Narrated by her physician (Charles Lewis Meryon). Illustrated.

0229 Legh, Thomas, 1793–1857

Date of Travel: 1812–13        Nationality: British

a. NOT SEEN

b. Leaving Turkey to avoid the Plague, Legh and fellow traveler Reverend Charles Smelt (1784–1831) arrived in Alexandria. Traveling through Egypt as far south as Aswan, Legh gives a particularly good description of the slave markets in Egypt. ("With respect to the values of the slaves in Egypt, it is various, according to their age, sex, and other qualities. An eunuch was estimated at 1,500 piastres. Girls whose virginity was secured by means more powerful than moral restraint were valued at 500 piastres: but such is the state of degradation to which human species is reduced in this country, that the precaution seems only to produce abuses of a more revolting nature," p. 60). The travelers also see the other usual sights and temples along the route.

0230 Burckhardt, John Lewis, 1784–1817

Date of Travel: 1812–17        Nationality: Swiss/ British

Born and raised in Switzerland, Burckhardt went to school in Germany at age 14 and in 1806 came to London. Becoming friends with Sir Joseph Banks (q.v.), a supporter of the exploration of Africa, he left for Africa in 1809 disguising himself as an Arab merchant from India. Passing nearly three years in the Levant and Palestine, he arrived in Egypt in 1812 intending to search for the source of the Niger. Instead, he journeyed up the Nile visiting the sights as far as Aswan and then into Ethiopia. With the help of Mohammed Ali, he journeyed to Mecca (the first known European to visit the Kaaba) and then returned to Cairo, working on excavations being carried out by Salt. Continuing to travel throughout Egypt to the Sinai and Suez, he died of dysentery in 1817 and was buried in an Islamic cemetery under his eastern name, Ibrahim ibn Abdallah. A great influence on others, including Belzoni, John Lloyd Stephens (q.v.) and many more, Burckhardt was one of the most fascinating of travelers in Egypt.

a. Includes a brief biography as well as Burckhardt’s letters to various people including Joseph Banks, Henry Salt, and William Hamilton. Long section on Burckhardt’s trip through Nubia. Very little on Egypt.

b. This volume has two sections on Egypt, “Description of a journey from Damascus through the mountains of Arabia Petra and the desert El Ty, to Cairo,” pp. 311–457; and “Journal of a tour in the Peninsula of Mount Sinai, in the spring of 1816,” pp. 457–632. Illustrated with engravings.

Date of Travel: 1813(?) Nationality: Swiss

Very detailed account of Alexandria, Cairo and the Fayyum. Illustrated with engravings.

0232 Buckingham, James Silk, 1786–1855
a. Autobiography of James Silk Buckingham; including his voyages, travels, adventures, speculations, successes and failures, faithfully and frankly narrated; interspersed with characteristic sketches of public men with whom he has had intercourse, during a period of more than fifty years. London: Longman, Brown, Green, and Longmans, 1855. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1813-14
Nationality: British

a. An assiduous traveler, Buckingham, in the early years of the nineteenth century, visited nearly every corner of the earth. In his autobiography, he devotes nine chapters to the time he spent in Egypt. Visiting Belzoni and Burckhardt while there, he was also attacked by renegade troops of the Pasha, temporarily blinded, and survived numerous other adventures. A prolific writer on many subjects, Buckingham also turned his travel experience into lectures delivered in the United States and elsewhere.

b. Buckingham’s lectures on Egypt and Palestine, first delivered in New York City beginning on 30 October 1837, are here summarized by James Hildreth. Addressed to the “People of America” by Buckingham in his introduction to the lectures. It is odd that Buckingham did not print the lectures themselves.

b. Traveling with James S. Buckingham (q.v.) briefly between Alexandria and Cairo, Bramsen, a German writing in English, also met with Drovetti. An excellent, well done account. Traveled with John Baxwell.
0234 Light, Captain Henry, c.1780–c.1820

Date of Travel: 1814
Nationality: British

a. While stationed in Malta, Light visited the areas described in the title to this account. In Egypt, he stopped in Alexandria, Cairo, and traveled down the Nile to Aswan. An excellent account.

b. Excerpted from the above work. A detailed account of the utmost limits of Upper Egypt.

0235 Richter, Otto Friedrich von, 1782–1816

Date of Travel: 1815
Nationality: German

Richter makes only a brief mention of Alexandria on his way to the Holy Land.

0236 Turner, William

Nationality: British

An excellent account, written in an informal style. Turner traveled to the Suez area, the Sinai, Cairo and Alexandria. “Cairo must, to a European, be a most uncomfortable residence, for it affords no place where he can take a quiet walk,” v.2, p. 370. “I am here at an unfortunate season, for the fruits of Egypt do not come to perfection till the rise of the Nile; and the river being now at its lowest state, the water is foul and bad-tasted,” v.3 p. 303. Illustrated with engravings made from the author’s sketches.
0237 Cailliaud, Frédéric, 1787–1869
Voyage à l'oasis de Thèbes et dans le déserts situés à l'orient et à l'occident de la Thébaïde, fait pendant les années 1815, 1816, 1817 et 1818. Paris: Imprimerie Royale, 1821. 120 p.

Date of Travel: 1815–18 Nationality: French

A brief description, illustrated with numerous large plates of Cailliaud's travels in Thebes and its vicinity. The introduction includes a life and history of Cailliaud. Also includes extracts from Cailliaud's journal. An interesting book for the plates. See also his account from 1819–22.

0238 Belzoni, Giovanni Battista, 1778–1823
a. Narrative of the operations and recent discoveries within the pyramids, temples, tombs, and excavations, in Egypt and Nubia; and of a journey to the coast of the Red Sea, in search of the ancient Berenice; and another to the oasis of Jupiter Ammon. London: J. Murray, 1820. 533 p.

b. Narrative of the operations and recent discoveries within the pyramids, temples, tombs, and excavations, in Egypt and Nubia; and of a journey to the coast of the Red Sea, in search of the ancient Berenice; and another to the oasis of Jupiter Ammon. 3d ed. London: J. Murray, 1822. 2 v. and atlas of 40 pl. (part col.). Note: Atlas has title: Plates illustrative of the researches and operations of G. Belzoni in Egypt and Nubia.

Date of Travel: 1815–19 Nationality: Italian/British

Truly one of the most fascinating personalities associated with Egypt, Belzoni (a hydraulics engineer as well as archaeologist, actor, and side-show strongman), arrived in Cairo in 1815 to show one of his hydraulic projects to Mohammed Ali. Instead of finding work with the Pasha, however, he found himself in the controversial employ of Henry Salt, procuring antiquities for Salt (and eventually the British Museum). Traveling throughout Egypt, the antiquities he obtained are some of the most important now in Britain. His memoirs are often bombastic, self-serving, but always entertaining.
a. The first edition was issued in one volume. "The principal cause of my going to Egypt was the project of constructing hydraulic machines, to irrigate the fields by a system much easier and more economical than what is then in use in that country," p. 1.

b. "As I made my discoveries alone, I have been anxious to write my book by myself though in doing so the reader will consider one, and with great propriety, guilty of temerity; but what the public will perhaps gain in the fidelity of my narrative what it loses in elegance," p. v, v. 1. Illustrated with plates and engravings.

0239 Belzoni, Sarah, 1783–1870
"Short account of the women of Egypt, Nubia, and Syria; by Mrs. Belzoni." In Narrative of the operations and recent discoveries within the pyramids, temples, tombs, and excavations, in Egypt and Nubia; and of a journey to the coast of the Red Sea, in search of the ancient Berenice; and another to the oasis of Jupiter Ammon. London: J. Murray, 1820.

Date of Travel: 1815–19 Nationality: British

"During Mr. B.'s absence, I took up my residence at the top of the temple of Osiris in that Island, and with the help of some mud walls, I had enclosed two comfortable rooms," v. 2, p. 265. Mrs. Belzoni, nearly as remarkable as her husband for showing the fortitude to travel with him through his harrowing adventures, writes an entertaining tale of following her (often absent) husband through Egypt. Appears in both editions.

0240 Salt, Henry, 1780–1827

Date of Travel: 1815–27 Nationality: British

a. One of the key figures in Egyptology, Salt was appointed British consul-general to Egypt in 1815 and held the position till his death. The supporter (and sometimes antagonist) of such explorers and early archaeologists as Belzoni (q.v.), Giovanni Battista Caviglia, d’Athanasi (q.v.), and John Burckhardt (q.v.), his actions helped to facilitate the discovery of many of Egypt’s wonders. He sold parts of his collection of Egyptian antiquities to the British Museum, the Louvre, and Sir John Soane. On his death, most of his remaining collection was purchased at auction by the British Museum. This account of his life, includes Salt’s letters to family and friends, and the details of his relations with Belzoni. In addition to the great events Salt was involved in, there are also touches of the man: “The want of society in Egypt, and the living pretty much alone, or with those I care nothing about, have rendered me a complete philosopher, not of the ‘Rousseau school,’ as you may tell Miss Mary, but of that temperate sort of philosophy which make me enjoy things as they come with little regard to the future,” v.2, p. 113 (7 May 1819). Hall also reprints Salt’s poem, “Egypt: A Descriptive Poem” (see below). Illustrated with engravings.

b. “Egypt: A Descriptive Poem,” written by Salt during a period of illness, is a slight work of little consequence. Describing the cities and towns, history and culture, of Egypt, it also includes a tour of the sights up the Nile. “Should the contents of this little work bring back any agreeable recollections to the minds of Travelers of the various scenes they have noticed in passing through Egypt, the object of its Author will be, in great measure, attained,” (note at end of poem). Worth reading for the man, if not the work.

0243 Richardson, Robert, 1779–1847
Travels along the Mediterranean and parts adjacent; in company with the Earl of Belmore, during the years 1816–17–18: extending as far as the second cataract of the Nile, Jerusalem, Damascus, Balbec, &c. London: Printed for T. Cadell, 1822. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1816–17 Nationality: British

A physician traveling with Viscount Mountjoy and the Earl of Belmore, Richardson gives an excellent, detailed account of Egypt from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa. Among his anecdotes is his being at John Lewis Burckhardt’s (q.v.) bedside as he died. “Who shall cover Thebes again with splendor? With man it is impossible; but not so with God. When the Millennium commences, these dry bones shall live,” v.2, p. 124.

0244 Finati, Giovanni
Narrative of the life and adventures of Giovanni Finati, native of Ferrara; who, under the assumed name of Mahomet, made the campaigns against the Wahabees for the recovery of Mecca and Medina; and since acted as interpreter to European travellers in some parts least visited of Asia and Africa. London: J. Murray, 1830.

Date of Travel: 1816–29(?) Nationality: Italian

A good account with descriptions of the land, people and antiquities. Finati also includes descriptions of the Europeans he met, including Belzoni, Salt, and Drovetti. Visited Alexandria, Cairo, the Fayyum, and south to Aswan. William John Bankes transcribed and translated Finati’s account.

0245 Joliffe, Thomas Robert, 1780–1872

a. NOT SEEN
b. Coming from the Holy Land, Joliffe first stopped in Damietta before heading off to Alexandria and Cairo. The letters in this volume, written to various personages, contain historical as well as descriptive details. Cairo, the present state of affairs in Egypt, as well as the dervishes and extracts from the Koran are included. An interesting anecdote of Joliffe's watching, with Henry Salt, the loading of the colossal bust of Ramesses II excavated by Belzoni being loaded aboard a ship bound for England. The section on Egypt is in the second volume which also includes an appendix with hints for travelers in question and answer form. Illustrated with engravings and lithographs.

0246 Forbin, Louis Nicolas Philippe Auguste comte de, 1777–1841

Date of Travel: 1817–18    Nationality: French

A good descriptive account. Forbin, a member of the Commission on Egypt, knew and met a number of famous Egyptian travelers including Belzoni, Salt, Drovetti, and Cailliaud. "Je passais presque toutes mes journées chez M. Drovetti," p. 312. Illustrated with atlas of engravings. Traveled from the Holy Land to Cairo, Alexandria, and Luxor.

0247 Irby, Charles Leonard, 1789–1845

Date of Travel: 1817–18    Nationality: British

A naval officer, Irby traveled with James Mangles throughout Egypt and up the Nile into Ethiopia. Meets with Belzoni at Philae, and writes an interesting account. "Egypt begins to fill with English travelers: a few days ago Captain Bennet (dragoons) and a Mr. Jolliffe arrived from making the tour of Palestine," p. 163. Illustrated with engravings.

0248 Munster, George Augustus Frederick Fitzclarence, 1st Earl of
Date of Travel: 1818  Nationality: British

Returning to England after a tour of duty in India, Lt. Colonel Fitzclarence (Munster) lands in Cossier and travels overland and, after some adventures, makes it to Luxor. Traveling down the Nile, he visits Cairo and Alexandria before sailing for Morocco to avoid the Plague in Alexandria. Quite a name dropper, Munster visits with or speaks to Henry Salt, Giovanni Belzoni, John Burckhardt, and Giovanni Battista Caviglia. Includes colored engravings and a map.

0249 Sieber, Franz Wilhelm

Date of Travel: 1818  Nationality: German/Austrian

Stopping in Damietta and Cairo, Sieber devotes most of his account to Jerusalem. Engravings by G. Dobler.

0250 Edmonstone, Archibald

Date of Travel: 1818–19  Nationality: British

Traveling from Cairo to Thebes and thence westward to the great oases, Edmonstone, along with Robert Master and a Mr. Hoghton, meet with Belzoni, and follow behind Drovetti. At the oases, they visit the temples and transcribe inscriptions (included in the volume). A basic book of early travel in the deserts of Egypt. Illustrated with maps, plans, and engravings drawn by the three travelers.

0251 Montule, Edouard de

a. A very delightful, interesting account of Egypt (Alexandria to Aswan) in letter form. "Voulant rester trois où quatre jours à Assouan, nous examinâmes en détail les belles ruines qui l'environnement, ainsi que l'ancienne ville de Syenne," v.2, p. 205 (18 December 1818). Illustrated with some rather poor lithographs (buildings are alright, but the figures are terrible) by Montule from his own drawings.

b. In the form of letters, Montule describes his trip from Alexandria to Aswan, with visits to the Red Sea. Meets with the French Consul General M. Drovetti, and was stopped from visiting Fayyum by the Plague. Interesting account, but covers mostly the basic sights. Includes notes on the sights visited with extracts from other travelers who visited them. Illustrated with engravings.

0252 Wilson, William Rae, 1772–1849

Date of Travel: 1818–19  Nationality: British

“In descending the Nile from Grand Cairo, such is the state of dilapidation into which every thing has fallen, not only by the hands of barbarism, but the ravages of time, that I am fully aware I had passed many interesting spots without being able to trace any vestiges of their ancient consideration,” pp. 122–23. An excellent, detailed account of Wilson’s trip through Alexandria, Cairo, and the Sinai. Met with Henry Salt. Illustrated.

0254 Pacho, Jean-Raimond, 1794–1829
Date of Travel: 1818; 1820–25  Nationality: French

A brief account of Alexandria before Pacho continues on to various parts of North Africa.

0255 Fuller, John
Narrative of a tour through some parts of the Turkish empire. London: J. Murray; 1830. 560 p.

Date of Travel: 1819  Nationality: British

An excellent, detailed account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor and the Nile south to Abu Simbel. “The narrative of a voyage on the Nile cannot be very entertaining, the incidents being little more than a repetition of rowing and touring, fair and contrary winds, now and then running on a sandbank, and occasionally a mutiny of the boatmen,” p. 163.

0256 Gau, François Chrétien, 1790–1853

Date of Travel: 1819  Nationality: German/French

“Dans une partie de l’Égypte et surtout en Nubie, il faut voyager sous le charme des souvenirs; il faut, par l’imagination, restituer à ces contrées cette splendeur que révèlent ses monumens, et prêter à une nature, maintenant aride et dénueée, la parure qu’elle put tenir d’une population active, avant que la superstition et la barbarie eussent amené la solitude sur cette terre historique,” p. v. Gau (born in Germany as Franz Christian Gau) traveled throughout Egypt, from Alexandria south to Aswan and into Nubia. Though most of the magnificent plates are devoted to Nubia, the text itself is by Gau, and is about his fellow traveler, M. le baron de Sack’s, trip through Egypt proper. Illustrated with engravings and colored plates.

0257 Hanson, John

Date of Travel: 1819  Nationality: British

In letters to friends, Hanson describes his trip with Lt. General and Lady Nightingall from Bombay to Alexandria via Cossier and Luxor. Visiting the antiquities and meeting with Henry Salt, Hanson gives a good colloquial account full of frank comments on Egypt (“It may be stated once for all, that the present ruler, Mahommed Ally Pacha, is a most despotic sovereign, and very capable of screwing to himself the utmost resources of this country,” p. 85).

0258 Henniker, Frederick, 1793–1825
Notes, during a visit to Egypt, Nubia, the Oasis, Mount Sinai, and Jerusalem. London: J. Murray, 1823. 340 p.

Date of Travel: 1819-20 Nationality: British

A well-written account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Wadi Halfa. Done in diary style. “No English breakfast to be got; no breakfast of any kind; nothing but coffee, half and half, grits and water, neither sugar nor milk,” pp. 18–19. Illustrated.

0259 Cailliaud, Frédéric, 1787–1869

Date of Travel: 1819-22 Nationality: French

Primarily large folio plates illustrating the antiquities in the area approaching Meroe in Ethiopia. Very little on Egypt proper. Some text, mostly descriptive. See also his 1815–18 account.

0262 Minutoli Wolfradine (von der Schulenburg) von Watzdorf, freiherrn von

Date of Travel: 1820–22
Nationality: German

a. Written to show that ladies, too, can travel in Egypt (“Si les pages que je présente ici au public n’enrichissent en rien le domaine de la science et celui de l’archéolgie, elles ne seront peut-être pas sans intérêt pour les personnes de mon sexe, qui, en apprenant qu’une femme a parcouru, sous d’heureux auspices, ces régions lointaines, jusqu’aux limites du tropique, ne craindront pas de me suivre dans mes courses, et de s’aventurer sur mes pas à la contemplation de tant de merveilles de la civilisation antique,” p. xvii), Minutoli traveling with her husband (Julius Rudolf Ottomar Minutoli), see all the sights from Alexandria to Aswan, meet with the French Consul General in Alexandria, Bernardino Drovetti and travel in the company of a Charles Rosetti and his wife. Minutoli includes numerous passages about the present state of women in Egypt. Illustrated with engravings. French edition includes a biographical sketch of Minutoli by M. Raoul-Rochette.

b. English edition includes a biographical sketch of Mohammed Ali by Baron Minutoli.

0263 Mackworth, Digby
Diary of a tour through southern India, Egypt, and Palestine, in the years 1821 and 1822. London: J. Hatchard and Son, 1823. 372 p.
Date of Travel: 1821-22          Nationality: British

A well-done account of Cossier, Luxor and Cairo. Illustrated with engravings.

0264 Wilkinson, John Gardner, 1797-1875

b. Modern Egypt and Thebes: being a description of Egypt; including the information required for travellers in that county. London: J. Murray, 1843. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1821-55          Nationality: British

One of the first and greatest archaeologists of Egypt. Spending twelve consecutive years in Egypt from 1821-33, he left for health reasons, but visited again many times, traveling to Luxor for the last time in 1855. As the author of Modern Egypt (London, 1843), he was one of the most quoted authors by later travelers as the book saw numerous editions and reprints. In addition to this and other popular works, he published numerous scientific papers on Egyptology.

a. Though mainly an account of Wilkinson’s excavations in Thebes and Karnac, this book is also practical guide for European travelers. Mostly factual and historical with little personal narrative. Includes excellent engravings after the author’s own drawings.

b. “I conclude by expressing my hopes that the following pages may induce many to visit Egypt, and that the information they contain may be serviceable to travellers, both on the Nile, and in the Desert,” p. iv. More of a guidebook. Illustrated with woodcuts and maps.

Wanderungen durch Sicilien und die Levante. Berlin: Nicolai, 1834–40. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1822  Nationality: German

Parthey, a German classical and Coptic scholar, gives a technical and detailed account with many quotations and special sources. Visited Alexandria, Cairo and the Nile to Wadi Halfa.

0267 Rapelje, George, 1771–
A narrative of excursions, voyages, and travels, performed at different periods in America, Europe, Asia, and Africa. New York: Printed for the author, 1834. 416 p.

Date of Travel: 1822  Nationality: American

A diary style account, with brief entries and descriptions of the people he met. Rapelje dined with Henry Salt in Cairo, and Gliddon in Alexandria. An interesting early American account. “I saw Capt. Gordon, of the British royal navy; he was very civil and polite; I went with him to visit the English Consul, Mr. Salt, who was very kind and civil, and is a very agreeable man,” p. 316. Illustrated with engravings.

0268 Madox, John
Excursions in the Holy Land, Egypt, Nubia, Syria, &c including a visit to the unfrequented district of the Haouran. London: R. Bentley, 1834. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1822–23  Nationality: British

An excellent and detailed account of Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, the Nile to Wadi Halfa, and Cossier). Utilizing diary-style entries like the following: “I got my firman and all necessities on board; sent some letters by Mr. Salt to Alexandria, and rode to the cangea with my Coptic servant, Abdrebbo, who belonged to Mr. Salt’s establishment and spoke Italian,” v.1, p. 256. Illustrated with engravings.

0269 Sherer, Moyle
Date of Travel: 1823  Nationality: British

Sailing from Bombay, Sherer made his Egyptian journey in reverse of the usual order. Landing in Cossier and then over the desert to Thebes. His description of these places at such an early date (1823) is amazing for showing how travelers and tourists were already becoming familiar sights to the local populations. He also visited the tomb recently discovered by Belzoni. Sailing down the Nile he visited the temple of Dendera, the Pyramids at Saqqara and Dahshur, and Memphis. At Memphis, he met with Giovanni Battista Caviglia, an archaeologist digging there and at Saqqara. After a visit to the Pyramids and the Sphinx, he lingers in Cairo (including a visit to the recently founded Egyptian Institute where he finds amongst the books Les Liaisons Dangerous, Byron in French prose and a lone book on Persia in English). As the Plague (as usual, it seems) was sweeping Alexandria, Sherer left quickly for Malta. A very interesting and entertaining account.

Date of Travel: 1823–32; 1837–60  Nationality: French

Surgeon-in-chief to Mohammed Ali, Clot also created a medical center in Egypt and collected antiquities later given to the Louvre.
Most of this book is history and not description. A strong coverage of the health situation in Egypt. Clot was given the title Bey and is often referred to by other travelers and writers as Clot-Bey. Illustrated with charts and maps.

0273 Carne, John

Date of Travel: 1824(?) Nationality: British

“It is difficult to describe the noble and stupendous ruins of Thebes. Beyond all others they give you the idea of a ruined, yet imperishable city; so vast is their extent, that you wander a long time confused and perplexed, and discover at every step some new object of interest,” p. 131. A well-written, interesting account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, the Nile to Aswan, and the Sinai. First appeared in New Monthly Magazine. Illustrated.

0274 Madden, Richard Robert, 1798–1886

Date of Travel: 1824–27 Nationality: British

a. NOT SEEN

b. In letters to Judith Montefiore (q.v.) and others, Madden, a doctor living in Alexandria, gives a gripping account of life in Egypt. Traveling throughout Egypt, from Alexandria to Aswan, he includes the obligatory descriptions of the Pyramids and Sphinx, but also includes details of his meetings with Henry Salt, Mohammed Ali and others. His descriptions of the diseases of Egypt, the asylum in Cairo, and the Plague in Alexandria (“Heaven preserve you from a quarantine in Egypt! It is not the death of one’s neighbors which is so overcoming; I can hear of a case next door with a sympathetic pain in my axilla; but it is the horror of eternally hearing of plague,” p. 186) are fascinating.

0275 Hay, Robert, 1799–1863
Date of Travel: 1824-38  Nationality: British

NOT SEEN. Making a number of trips to Egypt between 1824 and 1838 in the company of such people as Francis Arundale (q.v.), Joseph Bonomi (q.v.) and Frederic Catherwood, Hay amassed a large collection of drawings, antiquities, and copies of inscriptions. His manuscript and drawing collection eventually went to the British Museum and many of his antiquities to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Date of Travel: 1825  Nationality: British

"We breakfasted with Mr. Hay and Mr. Bonomi in their tent, and were favoured by them with a sight of some very spirited and correct sketches of the paintings and sculpture on the different temples, particularly those lately discovered by themselves, and which I imagine and believe will some day be given to the public," p. 209. Returning from India, Elwood and her husband Colonel Elwood see the sights from Cossier to Luxor and then go on to Cairo and Alexandria in the company of such illustrious people associated with Egypt as Henry Salt, as well as Robert Hay and Joseph Bonomi. A very interesting account. Illustrated with engravings.

0278 Lane, Edward William, 1801-1876

Date of Travel: 1825-28; 1842-49  Nationality: British

Lane, whose influential work, Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians (London, 1836) saw dozens of editions and was a virtual Bible to travelers throughout the nineteenth century, was a noted Arabic scholar (translating A Thousand and One Nights, London, 1838–40); and compiling a compendious Arabic dictionary, wrote this book, its plan having been incorporated into his Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians. For various reasons, however, it was never published until twenty years after his death, with Stanley Lane-Poole then serving as its editor. An interesting account of Cairo, but it is mostly historical with little personal insights. Illustrated.

Syria and Egypt under the last five sultans of Turkey: being experiences, during the fifty years, of Mr. Consul-General Barker. London: Tinsley, 1876. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1826–1833 Nationality: British

John Barker (1771–1849), though British to the core, was born in Smyrna (present-day Ismir in Turkey). This book, written by his son, recounts the lifetime that the elder Barker spent in various positions for the East India company and British government. Appointed British consul in Alexandria in 1825, he was made consul-general, retiring in 1833 to his home near Antioch. This memoir is a good account of the business and political activities of the British in Egypt and the Middle East.

0290 Champollion-Figeac, Jacques Joseph, 1778–1867
L’obélisque de Louqsor transporté à Paris: notice historique,

Date of Travel: 1828–29 Nationality: French

Brother of Jean Champollion, decipherer of Egyptian hieroglyphics, Champollion-Figeac traveled in Egypt with his brother and Ippolito Rosellini (q.v.). In this account of the transporting of the Luxor obelisk from Egypt to Paris, he includes a good description of Luxor. A fascinating account. Illustrated with engravings.

0291 Champollion, Jean Françoise, 1790–1832

Date of Travel: 1828–29 Nationality: French

Champollion who performed the single most important act in the history of Egyptology—the decipherment of hieroglyphics (announced in his famous Lettre à M. Dacier, 1822)—while in Paris, made only a single trip to Egypt with the scientific expedition of Ippolito Rosellini.

a & b. The results of Champollion’s trip to Egypt with Rosellini are summarized in this mostly illustrated account. The 1971 reprint handily condenses this important work into manageable size, but with a loss of the color plates.

A fascinating, insightful series of letters by the Father of Egyptology on his first and only trip to Egypt. While there, Champollion travelled the length of the Nile from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, with stops in all the major sights along the way. Illustrated with engravings.

e. "J’ai transporté mon camp et mes pénates à l’ombre des grandes pyramides, de puis hier que, quittant Sakkarah pour visiter l’une des merveilles du monde, sept chameaux et vingt ânes ont transporté nous et nos bagages à travers le désert qui sépare les pyramides médionales de celles de Gizéh, les plus célèbres de toutes, et qu’il me fallait voir on fin avant de partir pur la Haute-Égypte," p. 56.

a. I monumenti dell’Egitto e della Nubia disegnati dalla spedizione scientifico-letteraria toscana in Egitto; distribuiti in ordine di materie. Pisa: Presso N. Capurro e c, 1832–44. 9 v.

Date of Travel: 1828–29 Nationality: Italian

Rosellini, an Italian Egyptologist and professor at Pisa, was head of the Tuscan delegation which included Champollion (q.v.) on an expedition to Egypt, 1828–29.

a. Similar in scope and format to the great Description by the French Commission of Monuments or Richard Lepsius’ Denkmaler, Monumenti dell’Egitto e della Nubia is primarily large scale plates and engravings with some accompanying text. Among the others on the expedition were Champollion’s brother, Jacques Joseph Champollion-Figeac (q.v.).

b. The journals of Rosellini done while on his great expedition. Entertaining account, but concerned mostly with the archaeological explorations.

0294 Saint-Elme, Ida, 1776–1845 (pseud. of Maria Elzelina Johanna Versfelt)

Date of Travel: 1829–30  Nationality: French

An amazingly detailed account of Saint-Elme’s visit to Alexandria, Cairo, the Nile to Luxor, and across the desert to the Sinai. Meeting with other well-known Frenchmen in Egypt (Drovetti, Clot), she tells an interesting story.

0295 Yates, William Holt, 1802–
The modern history and condition of Egypt its climate, diseases, and capabilities; exhibited in a personal narrative of travels in that country: with an account of the proceedings of Mohammed Ali pascha, from 1801–1843. London: Smith, Elder and Co., 1843. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1829–30  Nationality: British

Proposing to give a recent history of Egypt, Yates includes a life of Mohammed Ali and only passing references to the antiquities. Though there are some personal remarks, most of the commentary is basic, but good, historical detail. “How happy should we be to think that we live in a Christian country where all are protected by the laws; where the sick and destitute are provided for; and where even the wretched maniac may find an asylum! But what, alas! becomes of the poor in Egypt? What provision is made for the aged? who shall direct the footsteps of the blind, or support the cripple?” v.1, p. 339. Illustrated with engravings by Yates.

0296 Dumas, Alexandre, 1802–1870 and Adrien Dauzats, 1804–1868

Date of Travel: 1830
Nationality: French

Dumas wrote this account of Dauzats’ trip to Egypt from his journals; Dumas himself never traveled to Egypt. The account is told in the first person singular. Visiting Alexandria, Cairo, the Red Sea, Suez, and the Sinai, there are accounts of thieves with noses and ears cut off, and a very long account of Napoleon’s Battle of the Pyramids. The English translation is very loose and abridged as the anonymous translator found large parts “tedious,” feeling Dumas/Dauzats had run out of interesting things to say. Illustrated by Dauzats.

0297 Robinson, George

Nationality: British

“As we pushed off from the shore, many a poor Arab fellah gazed upon our bark with a longing eye, as if desirous to escape from the tyrannic chains of the present ruler of Egypt,” p. 12. Though Robinson visited Egypt from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, his account makes only a brief mention of Egypt, concentrating on the Holy Land.

0298 Verninac de Saint Maur, Raimond Jean Baptiste de, 1762–1822

Date of Travel: 1830
Nationality: French

One of the men responsible for the transporting of the Luxor obelisk to Paris, Verninac de Saint Maur gives a detailed account of the obelisk and the journey to France. Illustrated with engravings.

“On ne connaît point les voitures en Égypte, pas plus que dans tour le Levant. Il n’y a guère en Égypte que les gens riches que se servent de chevaux de delle,” v.1, p. 13. An interesting, but brief account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Sinai, with journal-style entries.

0301 Michaud, Joseph Francoise and Baptistin Poujoulat

Date of Travel: 1830–31 Nationality: French/Belgium

Traveling throughout the Levant, Michaud and Poujoulat wrote very detailed, descriptive letters home on the sights of Egypt (Alexandria and Cairo). Egypt covered in v.5–7.

0302 Lebas, Jean Baptiste Apollinaire, 1797–1873

Date of Travel: 1830–33 Nationality: French

Beginning with a history of the gift of the Luxor obelisk to France from Egypt, Lebas—an engineer with the Corps of Marine Engineers—then goes on to give the account of how it was taken down, transported and re-erected in Paris. Also includes descriptions of Luxor and Alexandria. A good account. Illustrated with numerous excellent engravings.

0303 Taylor, Isidore Justin Severin, 1789–1879

Date of Travel: 1830–33  Nationality: French

First visiting Egypt in 1828, Taylor, a French archaeologist, wrote this account under the pseudonym of R.P. Laorty Hadji. This trip was arranged by Charles X of France for Taylor to pick up the obelisk promised the French by Mohammed Ali (not discussed in this account). Delayed in his mission, Taylor had a chance to visit all of Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan. Written much later, this account includes comments on the possibility of the Suez Canal and a history of Egypt.

0304 Wellsted, James Raymond, 1805–1842

Date of Travel: 1830–34  Nationality: British

Wellsted traveled extensively throughout the Near East, passing through various parts of Egypt during a four-year period. This is a detailed account of Sinai, Red Sea and Arabian Peninsula. “Several of our Bedowins appear to have suffered from the ravages of the small-pox, a disease more prevalent here than in any part of the coast which I have visited. This appears to be owing to the constant intercourse the Towará Bedowins have with Cairo, the grand nursery of this scourge, as of the plague,” v.2, p. 65.

Date of Travel: 1831  Nationality: British

Traveling with Joseph Bonomi and Frederic Catherwood, Arundale gives a brief account of Cairo before continuing on to the Holy Land via the Sinai. "The route from Grand Cairo to Beirut, passing by Suez, and visiting Mount Sinai, is not likely to be attended with either danger or fatigue to the traveler, which might arise from the constant tumults among the different Arab tribes; should he wish to pursue his journey further eastward," p. vii. Illustrated with engravings.

Date of Travel: 1832–33  Nationality: French

A very good account in letter form by a "Monk of La Trappe." Geramb visited Alexandria, Cairo, the Sinai, and the Nile to Aswan. While in Upper Egypt, he traveled with Count d'Estourmel (q.v.). Illustrated with engravings.

0315 Jones, Owen, 1709–1874 and Goury, Jules
Views on the Nile: from Cairo to the second cataract: drawn on stone by George Moore. London: Graves and Warmsley, 1843. 35 l.

Date of Travel: 1832–33  Nationality: British

Jones, the noted architect (the Crystal Palace) and designer (he later decorated the Khedive's palace in Cairo), visited Egypt in 1833. Excellent engravings, lithographed by George Moore. Text, mostly historical, by Samuel Birch (q.v.).

0316 St. John, James Augustus, 1801–1875

d. There and back again in search of beauty. London: Longman, Brown, Green, & Longmans, 1853. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1832–33  Nationality: British

a. St. John, the father of Bayle St. John (q.v.) and friend of J.S. Buckingham (q.v.), traveled through every nook and cranny of Egypt gathering evidence of the evils of Mohammed Ali. A virtual encyclopedic account of the history, economics, commerce ("We next proceeded to the printing-office, where the Cairo Gazette, in Arabic, is printed,—a small insignificant establishment, which would be no where remarkable but in such a country as Egypt," p. 129), customs, and antiquities, it is also a fascinating personal narrative.

b. A condensed and more "literary" version of the above work. Much more in the vein of the typical travel book, much of the invective against Mohammed Ali is cut out in favor of concentrating on the land of Egypt. Much more entertaining, if not informative, reading. Illustrated with engravings.

c. A fascinating, if strange account by St. John of Egypt. A sort of poetic meditation of his time in Egypt, Isis moves the furthest from the realistic description St. John provided in his first book. Almost a love letter to Egypt.

d. Yet another fiction/factual book, similar to his Isis. Egypt is only mentioned briefly in the item.

0317 Gliddon, George Robins, 1809–1857

Date of Travel: 1832–42 Nationality: British/American

a. Gliddon, born in England was taken to Egypt at an early age by his father, John Gliddon (later first American consul in Alexandria) and became the first United States Consul at Cairo (beginning in 1832), assisted many American travelers to Egypt and was a rather well-known Egyptologist in his own right. The primary purpose of this book is to refute the adventures of James Ewing Cooley (q.v.). Gliddon accuses Cooley of lying, fabricating events, stealing illustrations, and of, in essence, writing a "best seller" at the expense of the truth. He also provides a list of American visitors to Egypt extracted from the Consular Register 1832–1842.

b. The guide to a panorama painting of Egypt. The work, done by Joseph Bonomi (q.v.), Harry Warren, and James Fahey from drawings made on the spot by Bonomi was 800 feet long by 8 feet wide. Being shown in London at the time, a copy was made to tour America for which Gliddon wrote this booklet. Includes reviews of the original from the London press, commentary on the sights by Gliddon, a report by Gliddon on his archaeological interests, and a list of the scenes in the panorama.

0318 Cornille, Henri

Date of Travel: 1833 Nationality: French

A brief, basic account of Cairo and Damietta. Illustrated with engravings.

0319 Estourmel, Joseph Comte d’, 1783–1852

Date of Travel: 1833 Nationality: French

A very detailed account of his tour from Suez to Cairo, and up the Nile to Aswan. Informative, but a bit dull reading.

0320 Monro, Vere, 1802–1841
A summer ramble in Syria, with a Tartar trip from Aleppo to Stamboul. London: R. Bentley, 1835. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1833 Nationality: British

Only a brief account of Cairo and Damietta before Monro (a friend of James Augustus St. John) continued on to the Holy Land. “I lingered near three weeks at Cairo, awaiting the arrival of a servant from Alexandria, who having frequently travelled through Syria, knew everything, was well known, and generally accounted the best attendant in Egypt for that expedition,” v.1, p. 2. Illustrated with engravings.

0321 Skinner, Thomas, 1800?–1843

Date of Travel: 1833

Nationality: British

a. NOT SEEN

b. A brief account of Alexandria before Skinner, a major in the 31st Regiment, continues on to India.

0322 Zouche, Robert Curzon, baron, 1810–1873

Nationality: British

Robert Curzon, the Baron Zouche, traveled extensively in the Levant, amassing a large collection of Oriental manuscripts which he later presented to the British Museum. This account of his travels finds Zouche concentrating on the Christian monuments in Egypt, completely ignoring the antiquities. ("On a rocky hill, perforated on all sides by the violated sepulchers of the ancient Egyptians, in the great Necropolis of Thebes, not far from the ruins of the palace and temple of Medinet Habou, stand the crumbling walls of an old Coptic monastery, which I was told had been inhabited, almost within memory of men, by a small community of Christian monks," p. 102). In Egypt, the sights are primarily Coptic churches in Alexandria, Cairo and Luxor, though he also includes the monasteries of the Sinai. When visiting the monasteries, he speaks with the monks, buys manuscripts and has the usual troubles with the dragomen. A great book for an unusual angle on early nineteenth-century Egypt. (Later editions also published under the title Monasteries of the East).

0323 Scott, Charles Rochfort, d.1872

Rambles in Egypt and Candia; with details of the military power and resources of those countries, and observations on the government, policy, and commercial system of Mohammed Ali. London: H. Colburn, 1837. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1833–34

Nationality: British

"It would be in vain to search within the walls of Modern Alexandria for any traces of the proud capital of the Ptolemies:
scarically, indeed, can any remains of the archipiscopal city that in after ages disgraces Christianity by its tumults, massacres, and disputes, be divined,” v.1, p. 26. A good, detailed account of Alexandria, Cairo, the Nile to Aswan and the Suez area. Illustrated with engravings.

0324 Combes, Edmond, 1812–1848

Date of Travel: 1833–35 Nationality: French

Combes, the French Vice-Consul in Egypt, found it a “nouvelle Sodome,” still, his account of his time there and his travels throughout the country from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, Sinai, and the deserts, is excellent and informative reading. Concentrating on the people and contemporary Egypt, he gives little coverage to the antiquities except for Philae, and is constantly quoting from Voltaire's Dictionnaire philosophique. “Mais ce n’est pas seulement dans les rues et le soir que vous êtes exposé à faire de pareilles rencontres: dans cette Babylone impure, la sodomie est partout. Les demeures des grands, les réduits les plus misérables, les cafés, les bains public sont infectés par la présence de ces êtres immodes et fangeux qui se livrent sous honte, et avec un effronterie dont vous rougirez pur eux, à ce vice dégradant et ignoble,” v.1, p. 77.

0326 Jones, George
Excursions to Cairo, Jerusalem, Damascus, and Balbèc from the United States ship Delaware, during her recent cruise. New York: Van Nostrand and Dwight, 1836. 388 p.

Date of Travel: 1834 Nationality: American

The chaplain aboard the USS Delaware, Jones met with John and George Gliddon (q.v.), United States consuls in Alexandria and Cairo on his tour through those two cities. An interesting account for the enthusiasm he shows for Egypt.

0327 Marmont, Auguste Frédéric Louis Viesse de, duc de Raguse

Date of Travel: 1834  Nationality: French

A fascinating account by a member of the great French Expedition as he returns to Egypt years later. Marmont stopped in Alexandria and Cairo, and reminisces about his first trip to Egypt with Napoleon in 1799. Egypt is covered in volume 3.

0328 Champagnac, Jean Baptiste Joseph, 1796–1858 and M. Olivier

Date of Travel: 1834(?)  Nationality: French

c. A mostly guidebook-like account with very little personal information. Traveled with a Monsieur Olivier. Illustrated with engravings.

0329 Everett, Edward

Date of Travel: 1834–35  Nationality: American

John Lowell Jr. (1799–1836), Boston Brahmin and founder of the Lowell Institute, began to travel after the deaths of his wife and children in 1830 and 1831. This work was originally delivered as a lecture by Everett to introduce the lecture series sponsored by the Lowell Institute and gives a sketch of Lowell’s life and quotes from his letters: “The prospect is most beautiful. On the one side, is the boundless desert, varied only by a few low ridges of limestone hills. Then you have heaps of sand and a surface of sand, reduced to so fine a powder, and so easily agitated by the slightest breeze, that it deserves the name of fluid,” p. 41–42 (letter from the top of the Great Pyramid, 12 February 1835). In Egypt, Lowell traveled from Alexandria to Cairo, up the Nile to Luxor and on to Wadi Halfa and into Ethiopia and the Sudan. He died in Bombay after an illness that began in Egypt.

0330 Fontanier, Victor, 1796–1857

Date of Travel: 1834–35 Nationality: French

Traveling on behalf of the French government, Fontanier visited Cairo, Luxor, and the Red Sea before continuing on to India. A good account. “Si les monuments de l’antiquité que l’on voit sur les bords du Nil excitent notre admiration, on peut dire aussi que rien n’égale la monotonie du voyage lorsque l’on est seul dans un petit bateau et que le vent contraire oblige les mariniers à le remorquer péniblement,” p. 26.

a. Puteshestvie po Egiptu i Nubii v 1834–1835 g. St. Petersburg, 1840. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1834–35 Nationality: Russian

a. Voyage in Egypt and Nubia. Illustrated with prints. On a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, Norov decided to visit Egypt. In Egypt, he traveled to Alexandria, Cairo, the Nile to Wadi Halfa and the Sinai. A good, detailed account of his travels, the people, and sights. Visits with A.B. Clot-Bey, (q.v.), a French medical officer in the service of Mohammed Ali.

0333 Voilquin, Suzanne

Date of Travel: 1834–36 Nationality: French

a. Voilquin, a member of the Saint-Simon Christian socialist group, lived in Egypt for two years, attempting to live a good, socialist life in Cairo. Her observations on the public baths of Cairo: “C'est le lieu le plus complet et le mieux approprié pour observer les femmes du Caire. Nous voulûmes juger si l'attraît qu'elles y trouvent justifie leur empressement à s'y rendre,” p. 268.

b. Edited by Fakkar Rushdi, this selection is from her own book.

0334 Kinglake, Alexander William, 1809–1891

Date of Travel: 1835 Nationality: British

Eothen, Greek for “from the East” was one of the most successful travel books in the mid-19th century. Kinglake’s travels took him through the entire domain of the Ottoman Turks of which Egypt, in 1835, was only a small part. In Cairo, Kinglake avoids the Plague, visits the Sphinx and Pyramids and then is quickly off to Suez and the Levantine provinces of the Ottoman Empire. Kinglake’s short description of Egypt is fascinating for its depiction of plague-ridden Cairo and a moving, if inventive, description of the Sphinx.
0335 Howard-Vyse, Richard, 1784–1853
Narrative of the operations carried on at the Pyramids of Gizeh in 1837, with an account of a voyage unto Upper Egypt; also Perring's appendix of operations and surveys of the Pyramids at Abou Roash and to the southward, including those in the Faiyum. 3 v.

Date of Travel: 1835–36  Nationality: British

NOT SEEN. Carrying out excavations at the Pyramids at Giza with Giovanni Caviglia, Howard-Vyse's work was one of the most thorough, accurate and influential works on the Pyramids for many years.

0336 Meerza, Najaf Koolee

Date of Travel: 1836  Nationality: Persian

Meerza, a Persian prince, traveled through Egypt, stopping in Alexandria, on his way to England. Only a brief mention of Egypt, however. Translated by Assad Y. Kayat. Traveled with Reeza Koolee Meerza and Taymoor Meerza.

0338 Hoskins, George Alexander, d.1864
Visit to the Great Oasis of the Libyan Desert; with an account, ancient and modern, of the oasis of Amun, and the other oases now under the dominion of the pasha of Egypt. London: Longman, Rees, Orme, Brown, Green & Longman, 1837. 341 p.
Date of Travel: 1836(?) Nationality: British

Living in Luxor in the house built by Giovanni d’Athanasi, Hoskins traveled with Robert Hay and Frederick Catherwood to the oases in the Libyan Desert, where he runs into Joseph Bonomi. “Our caravan was rather formidable. Mr. H. had a Maltese dragoman and two Arab servants. Mr. C. had one, and I had two Arab servants,” p. 22. The preparations for the trip are described in great detail as are the troubles met on the way. A good account. Illustrated with engravings and maps by the author. Visited Egypt again in 1863 (q.v.).

0339 Burton, Nathanael
Narrative of a voyage from Liverpool to Alexandria, touching at the island of Malta, and from thence to Beirut in Syria; with a journey to Jerusalem, voyage from Jaffa to Cyprus and Constantinople, and a pedestrian journey from Constantinople, through Turkey, Wallachia, Hungary, and Prussia, to the town of Hamburgh, in the years 1836–37. Dublin: J. Yates, 1838. 335 p.

Date of Travel: 1836–37 Nationality: British

“Lord and Lady Brudenel departed this day on asses, preceded by a janissary from the British consul, with his baton of office, to embark for Cairo in a boat on the canal of the Nile,” p. 79. A bit of a stuffy account of Burton’s visit to Alexandria. Illustrated with lithographs by Frederick Burton (his nephew), from drawings made by Burton himself.

0341 Cumming, William Fullerton
Notes of a wanderer a search of health, through Italy, Egypt, Greece, Turkey, up the Danube, and down the Rhine. London: Saunders & Otley, 1839. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1836–1837    Nationality: British

“... I am not aware that sufficient importance has heretofore been attached to Egypt as a resort for the Invalid. This deficiency I would now endeavour to supply,” p. vii. Almost a caricature of the English valetudinarian, Cumming traveled the world in search of a cure for his “emphysème pulmonaire.” In spite of this deficiency, Cumming was quite able to take a full tour through Egypt in the primitive days of 1836–37, climbing the Great Pyramid and taking camel rides on Elephantine island. He also finds the time to describe his own and others’ ills, and complain about everything from the dirt to the service at the British consular office. His final verdict on Egypt: “I think he (the pulmonary Invalid) will not be disappointed: but there are two things I would strongly impress on him, viz.—to go in time, and never forget, that in no climate can he safely dispense with prudence,” p. xi.

0342 Stephens, John Lloyd, 1805–1852

a. NOT SEEN

b. Stephens, who later became famous for his seminal discoveries with Frederick Catherwood of Mayan civilization, produced, in Incidents of Travel, one of the earliest and best-selling American travel books on Egypt. Neither a professional archaeologist nor explorer, Stephens began traveling to cure a “health” problem that prevented him from following his father’s wishes and practice law. Stephens visits the principal sights up the Nile, shoots at crocodiles, measures tombs and temples, and displays his American brashness (“I do not believe that the contents of all the bazaars in Siout, one of the largest towns in Egypt, were worth as much as the stocks of an ordinary dealer in dry goods on Broadway,” v.1, p. 67). Leaving the Nile, Stephens traveled through the Sinai to the Monastery of St. Catherine and then on to Arabia Petra and the Holy Land.

0343 Puckler-Muskau, Hermann Ludwig Heinrich, 1785–1871

Date of Travel: 1837 Nationality: German

a. UNREAD

b. A boastful, exuberant, miles gloriosus-like tale by this “Prince.” A great friend and defender of Mohammed Ali, he describes the conditions of the fellah, finds the antiquities of Alexandria lacking in interest, and includes a long, reverential reminiscence of Napoleon. At the Pyramids he speaks in typical terms: “With my usual perseverance I crawled through everything that was opened, and ascended the ladders into the holes discovered partly in modern, partly in ancient time,” p. 21.

0350 Wilde, William Robert

Narrative of a voyage to Madeira, Teneriffe and along the shores of the Mediterranean, including a visit to Algiers, Egypt, Palestine, Tyre, Rhodes, Telmessus, Cyprus and Greece. With observations on the present state and prospects of Egypt and Palestine, and on the climate, natural history, antiquities, etc, of the countries visited. Dublin: W. Curry, Jun. and Company, 1840. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1838
Nationality: British

A very good account of the usual sights, plus a few others. Wilde traveled as the medical attendant to Henry Marsh and these two were also accompanied by a Professor Graves. "There are many good bazaars in Alexandria, and in the Frank quarter, shops kept mostly by Greeks and Italians, where every description of European article may be obtained," v.1, p. 267. Illustrated.

0352 L'Hôte, Nestor, 1804–1842

Date of Travel: 1838–39
Nationality: French

An archaeologist and draftsman, L'Hôte, the uncle of Auguste Mariette (q.v.). gives a scientifically-oriented account, primarily of the area south of Luxor, though some on Cairo. "Parti du Caire le 12 avril, je ne suis arrivé à Thébes que le 1er mai, sans cesse contrarié par le vent et par la lenteur opiniâtre des Arabes qui conduisaient ma barque," p. 1. (23 July 1838). Illustrated with engravings.

0353 Roberts, David, 1796–1864

Date of Travel: 1838–39 Nationality: British

a. William Brockedon (1787–1854) supplies an introduction and "historical descriptions" to the plates drawn or painted by David Roberts and engraved by Louis Haghe. Roberts (1796–1864) was a member of the Royal Academy and a noted landscape and architectural painter. The illustrations in this and other works were influential in forming the Victorian ideas of the East. Brockedon's text for the illustrations is drawn from common sources on Egypt (Herodotus, Wilkinson) as well as Roberts' own journals. Three large folio volumes containing 124 plates of both everyday life in Egypt as well as detailed renderings of nearly every temple and tomb known at the time.

b. More of Roberts' magnificent drawings, lithographed by Louis Haghe. Descriptive text is by George Croly this time.

0354 Tattam, Henry, Mrs.

Date of Travel: 1838–39 Nationality: British

"I have a companion at night, which sadly disturbs me—a large lizard, who has taken up his quarters under the beams of the high ceiling of my chamber: he is certainly a beautiful creature, but a most annoying one," v.1 p. 89. Excellent, descriptive, anecdotal account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, the Nile to Aswan, the Sinai, the Libyan desert and the Suez area. Mrs. Tattam traveled with Mr. Tattam and a Miss Holliday. Illustrated.

0356 Kinnear, John Gardiner

Date of Travel: 1839 Nationality: British

A friend of the artist David Roberts (q.v.), Kinnear gives an interesting account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Sinai. "Of Egyptian ladies, you see little more than a huge mass of black silk and white muslin, shuffling along upon a pair of very wide yellow morocco boots. The dress, however, which they wear in the house is very rich and graceful," p. 22.

0357 Montefiore, Judith Cohen, 1784–1862
Notes from a private journal of a visit to Egypt and Palestine by way of Italy and the Mediterranean. London: Printed by J. Rickerby, 1844. 410 p.

Date of Travel: 1839 Nationality: British

Traveling with her husband Sir Moses Montefiore, Montefiore makes her second trip to Egypt. On board the Megara, they make a brief stop in Alexandria from 8 to 9 May 1839 before traveling on. Montefiore found Alexandria little changed.

0358 Wathen, George Henry
Date of Travel: 1839    Nationality: British

An architect by profession, Wathen made a short journey to Egypt, (including only Alexandria and Cairo on his trip) for both professional and personal reasons: “My visit to Egypt was partly for professional improvement, and partly to satisfy that curiosity to explore her works which, from the times of the venerable historian Halicarnassus to our own, have attracted so many to her shores,” p. iv. Wathen uses what he finds in Egypt to put forward his own views on the chronology of Egypt and its history.

0359 Goupil Fesquet, Frédéric Auguste Antoine and Horace Vernet

Date of Travel: 1839(?)    Nationality: French

Goupil Fesquet and Jean Emile Horace Vernet traveled through Egypt (Alexandria and Cairo), leaving an excellent, detailed account of their journey. Illustrated with colored engravings by Goupil Fesquet.

0360 Haight, Sarah (Rogers)

Date of Travel: 1839(?)    Nationality: American

“Let the barbarian but touch a stone of the Pyramids (those monuments which belong to the world at large), and if the sword of the Gaul or the bayonet of the Briton cannot reach him, I hope the cannon of the young West will thunder such anathemas in his ears as never echoed through the whole valley of the Nile,” p. 104. An excellent, descriptive, and very American, account that makes fun reading. Traveled from Alexandria to Aswan.

0361 Cooley, James Ewing, 1802–1882
The American in Egypt; with rambles through Arabia Petraea and the Holy Land, during the years 1839 and 1840. Illustrated with numerous steel engravings, also with designs and etchings by Johnson. New York: D. Appleton, 1842. 610 p.
A rambling, verbose, and inventive account of Cooley’s trip to Egypt. Cooley, a New York State Senator does not take his subject seriously which makes for an entertaining, if irreverent account. In addition to making fun of most everyone he meets, he also mocks James Silk Buckingham (q.v.) for his account of Pompey’s Pillar: “If I am right in my recollection, Mr. Buckingham, the ‘ex-member of Parliament,’ in his fanciful lecture with which he enlightened the dark and benighted inhabitants of the obscure city of New York . . .,” p. 149. Cooley never gets to Arabia Petra, so the title can be taken as just another joke. Illustrated with a mix of good and bad engravings, which if we are to believe Gliddon (see also George R. Gliddon’s panning of this work, “Appendix” to The American in Egypt), were stolen from other publications.

0362 Damer, Mary Georgina Emma (Seymour) Dawson
Diary of a tour in Greece, Turkey, Egypt and the Holy Land.

Date of Travel: 1839–40  Nationality: British

Traveling with her husband and daughter, Damer visited Suez, Cairo, Alexandria after a tour of Greece and Turkey. An excellent account of the people and antiquities of Egypt. “Some of the boys’ dresses were so picturesque, from their wearing tunics of deep blue linen; the loose sleeves, and sometimes the drapery was confined by a scarlet cord: the construction produced so much the effect of Raphael’s and Correggio’s colouring,” v.2, p. 147.

0363 Olin, Stephen

Date of Travel: 1839–40  Nationality: American

The president of Wesleyan University, Olin, traveling in the footsteps of John Lloyd Stephens (q.v.) who he comments on, writes an excellent account of Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, the Nile to Aswan, the Suez, and the Sinai). Includes a large number of details without being dull. “The exertions made for the religious improvement of the native Christians of Egypt have hitherto been inconsiderable. I was informed by Mr. Lieber that the English Wesleyans at one time supported a mission in Alexandria, which met with but slight encouragement, and was finally withdrawn,” v.1, p. 118. Illustrated with engravings by Frederick Catherwood (q.v.).

0366 Garston, Edgar
_Greece revisited, and sketches in Lower Egypt, in 1840; with thirty-six hours of a campaign in Greece in 1825._
London: Saunders & Otley, 1842. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1840 Nationality: British

“The dogs under my care aroused the jealousy of the canine aborigines, and I was pursued by a howling pack from the gate to the hotel,” v. 2, p. 85. A good account of the usual sights in Alexandria and Cairo. Includes appendices on topics such as the Pyramids and Egyptian funerals. Landing in Alexandria after an extensive tour of Greece, Garston sees the sights in a brief stay and then sails up the Nile to Cairo. “Rambling” through Cairo, he visits the back streets and is amazed at the resistance of the Egyptians in the face of such filth. In a visit to the Pyramids, he is compelled to quote the usual sources such as Herodotus and Belzoni. He then continues on to Saqqara and Dahshur. He concludes the book with a treatise on Egypt from the time of the Moslem conquest to the present and comments on British interests in Egypt.

A pictorial tour in the Mediterranean; including Malta, Dalmatia, Turkey, Asia Minor, Grecian Archipelago, Egypt, Nubia, Greece, Ionian Islands, Sicily, Italy, and Spain. London: Longman, Brown, Green, and Longmans, 1843. 96 p.

Date of Travel: 1841–42  Nationality: British

A basic account of a stop in Egypt (from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa), primarily of interest for the good, if not masterly engravings done from drawings by Allan.

0374 Londonderry, Frederick William Robert Stewart, 4th marquess of Londonderry, 1805–1842

Date of Travel: 1841–42  Nationality: British

A good descriptive account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Nile to Wadi Halfa. A full coverage of the antiquities. Illustrated with engravings from drawings by A. Schranz, a fellow traveler.
0375 Measor, Henry Paul

Date of Travel: 1841–42  Nationality: British

A well-written, entertaining account of Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, the Nile to Abu Simbel, the Suez area and the Sinai). “One experiences a great deal of annoyance on a visit to the Pyramids, from the crowds of naked Arabs, who continue to gain a trifle by conducting travellers to the top and interior of the buildings,” p. 21. Illustrated with engravings.

0376 Millard, David, 1794–1873

Date of Travel: 1841–42  Nationality: American

“A large number of languages are spoken in Alexandria, and yet I saw but few who could converse in good English,” p. 36. Well done, basic account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Sinai.

0377 Fisk, George

Date of Travel: 1842  Nationality: British

“If it were one’s disposition to mention annoyances, a long catalogue might soon be formed, of those which prevail in Egypt, and especially in Cairo, its great capital,” p. 91. A good, detailed description of Alexandria, Cairo, the Sinai, and the Suez area. Illustrated.

0385 Umanets, Aleksandr Alekseevich
a. Poiezdka na Sinai. St. Petersburg, 1850. 2 v. in 1.

Date of Travel: 1842–43  Nationality: Russian

a. UNREAD. Translation of title: Voyage to Sinai.
b. Traveling in a mission headed by prince M.S. Vorontzov and including two other members, Umanets visited Alexandria, Cairo, the Suez area, and the Sinai. Includes some description of Cairo and Alexandria—the people, Europeans he met, the antiquities—but is mostly concerned with the Sinai. Met with Antoine Clot-Bey (q.v.). Also mentions A. Rafalovich (q.v.).

0386 Lepsius, Richard, 1810–1884

d. A tour from Thebes to the peninsula of Sinai, by Professor R. Lepsius, of Berlin, between March 4 and April 14, 1845. Translated from the German, by Charles Herbert Cottrell, esq. London: J. Petheram, 1846. 92 p.

Date of Travel: 1842–45  Nationality: German

Lepsius, the great German archaeologist/explorer, traveled through Egypt, from Alexandria up the Nile into Nubia, and across the deserts from Fayyum to the Libyan desert, in the service of Frederick William IV of Prussia. The Denkmaeler stands as his great archaeological achievement, but the letters are fascinating from a more personal point-of-view.

a. NOT SEEN

b. The very readable and entertaining letters are full of detail, both historical and descriptive. His accounts of his “collecting” antiquities is fascinating: “I am now employing daily from forty to sixty people in excavations and similar works. I have also made them dig in front of the great Sphinx, to disclose the small temple which is situated between its paws, and to expose the colossal stele of a single block of granite, eleven feet high and seven feet broad, which forms the back wall of the little temple,” p. 52 (2 January 1843). Translated by Leonora and Joanna B. Horner.

c. Along with the Description d'Égypte, Lepsius’ Denkmaeler, done under the auspices of Frederick William IV of Prussia, is one of the great landmarks of Egyptian travel and archaeology. More personal than the description, the Denkmaeler is an invaluable work.

d. Diary-style account of Richard Lepsius’ journey to explore the Sinai. Lepsius, one of the most important early Egyptologists, was from 1842–45 head of the antiquarian expedition sent to Egypt by the King of Prussia. Primarily interested in establishing the Biblical route of the Exodus, he also stops at the monasteries. An interesting, detailed account of exploration and travel in the Sinai. Very little mention of Thebes. Translated by Charles Herbert Cottrell.

0387 Poole, Sophia (Lane), 1804–1891

c. The Englishwoman in Egypt: letters from Cairo, written during a residence there in 1845–46, with E. W. Lane. 2d series ed. London: C. Knight, 1846. 249 p.

Date of Travel: 1842–46  Nationality: British

The sister of Edward William Lane (q.v.), Poole’s delightful account, told in letter form to friends in England (the letters were selected by E.W. Poole), is full of details not often described or seen by female visitors such as a visit to the female baths: (a) “On entering this chamber a scene presented itself which beggars description. My companions had prepared me for seeing many persons undressed; but imagine my astonishment on finding at least thirty women of all ages, and many young girls and children, perfectly unclothed. You will scarcely think it possible that no one but ourselves had a vestige of clothing,” p. 226.

Date of Travel: 1843 Nationality: Italian

Professor of Geometry at the University of Turin, Baruffi gives a very detailed account of the Pyramids (“Le grandi piramidi di Giseh sono i monumenti più maravigliosi dell’antichità egiziana, forse del mondo intiero, i quali siano sopravvissuti alla distruzione delle nazioni ed alle ingiorie del tempo,” p. 193. Also visited the rest of the Cairo area and Alexandria. Illustrated with maps and plans.

0389 Borrer, Dawson, 1817-1895
A journey from Naples to Jerusalem, by way of Athens, Egypt, and the peninsula of Sinai including a trip to the valley of Fayoum. London: J. Madden, 1845. 579 p.

Date of Travel: 1843 Nationality: British

An excellent, detailed account of Egypt, including Alexandria, Cairo, the Fayyum, the Suez, and the Sinai. Includes a long section on the Fayyum. Borrer was of Irish extraction and traveled widely. Illustrated with engravings.

0390 Gérard de Nerval, Gérard Labrunie, known as, 1808-1855

translated first appeared in the Revue des deux mondes in 1846 and 1847.”-p. xiii.

Date of Travel: 1843 Nationality: French

A detailed account of Egypt, with numerous bits on daily life. Visited Alexandria and Cairo. Labrunie, a playwright and journalist lived a rather exciting life, of which his trip to the East was an important part. (c) and (d) are English editions that contain selections from the original French edition.

0391 Warburton, Eliot, 1810–1852
The crescent and the cross, or, Romance and realities of eastern travel. London: H. Colburn, 1845. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1843 Nationality: British

One of the most popular books on Egypt and the East, Warburton gives a marvelous account of Egypt, its people, its past and its present, the antiquities, and the natural wonders. Not without a very liberal dose of British nationalism (particularly where Napoleon is concerned). Includes discussions of Moslems, the Hareem, fellahs, Copts, and the antiquities brought to Britain. Still, like many travelers before and after him, he wearied of the constant barrage of temples from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa: “We found, on awakening the day after leaving Assouan, that we had passed Edfou in the night-time, and (shall I confess it?) were rather glad than otherwise. By this time we had been so be-templed and be-ruined, that we look on a city of the Pharaohs with as much indifference as on a club-house in Pall Mall,” p. 143. Includes interesting quotes (Shelley, Byron, Napoleon) at the heads of the chapters and concludes with some hints to travelers such as costs of renting a boat (“First class £16–35 per month). Illustrated with engravings.

0392 Hahn-Hahn, Ida Marie Louise Sophie Friederike Augusta, 1805-1880

a. NOT SEEN
b. "Few Europeans, my dearest brother, receive letters from their sisters, from Wadi Halfa, or Halfo. You, however, shall be one of those highly favoured," v.3, p. 142. Traveling across the desert to Cairo and then up the Nile to Wadi Halfa, Hahn-Hahn wrote informative, descriptive and entertaining letters.

0393 Nugent, George Nugent Grenville Baron, 1784–1850

Date of Travel: 1843-44 Nationality: British

Commenting heavily on the politics and the reign of Mohammed Ali, Nugent gives an interesting account of his trip through Alexandria and Cairo on his way East. "Services are nowhere so violently thrust upon you as in Cairo, either in forcing you to mount a beast of hire, or in guiding you when you have mounted him," v.1, p. 75.

0394 Chenavard, Antoine Marie, 1787–1873

Date of Travel: 1844 Nationality: French

A very basic description of Alexandria and Cairo. Traveled with E. Rey, a painter; and J.M. Dalgabio, an architect. Includes drawings made by the author.

0395 Schroeder, Francis

Date of Travel: 1844 Nationality: American

Schroeder, the secretary to the Commodore of the American squadron in the Mediterranean, made a brief visit to Alexandria and Cairo. His account, though itself brief, is an interesting glimpse into the lives of American sailors visiting Egypt. Illustrated with engravings.

0396 Thackeray, William Makepeace, 1811–1863

0398 Durbin, John Price, 1800–1876

Date of Travel: 1844(?) Nationality: American

The president of Dickinson College, Durbin gives an excellent, detailed account of Egypt from Alexandria to Cairo, and the Suez area and the Sinai. Traveled with Thomas Sewall, James Cortland, and J. O’Hara Denny. Illustrated with engravings, maps and plans, some signed Alexander Anderson.
0399 Griffith, Lucinda Darby
_A journey across the desert, from Ceylon to Marseilles comprising sketches of Aden, the Red Sea, Lower Egypt, Malta, Sicily, and Italy._ London: H. Colburn, 1845. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1844(?) Nationality: British

On their way from India, this is a good account of Mr. and Mrs. George Darby Griffith's journey from Suez to Cairo and then Alexandria. Includes a detailed account of the stage stops made on the trip across the desert. The description of Cairo is fascinating and includes a visit to the asylum. Illustrated.

0400 Malherbe, Raoul de
_L'Orient, 1718–1845; histoire, politique, religion, mours, etc._ Paris: Gide et Cie, 1846. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1844(?) Nationality: French

0402 Ampère, Jean Jacques Antoine, 1800–1864

Date of Travel: 1844–45 Nationality: French

A member of the French Academy and opponent of Champollion’s method of deciphering Egyptian hieroglyphics, Ampère gives a very detailed account of his trip to Egypt. Traveling from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, he discusses the sights themselves, and gives some entertaining commentary as well (“Cette première vue du Caire me charme; que j’aurai de plaisir à me donner chaque jour le spectacle de ce désordre pittorsequed” p. 137. Also includes a poem he wrote on Egypt.
0403 Strauss, Friedrich Adolph, 1817–1888

Date of Travel: 1844–45 Nationality: German

b. A theology student from the University of Berlin, Strauss, traveling from Alexandria to Aswan and the Suez and Sinai areas, saw the usual sights, gives a number of Biblical quotations and an account of Islam and the Copts. A good description of Thebes and Luxor.

0404 Wallin, Georg August, 1811–1905?

Date of Travel: 1844–45 Nationality: Finnish

0405 Bartlett, William Henry, 1809–1854
b. Forty days in the desert, on the track of the Israelites; or, A journey from Cairo, by Wadi Feiran, to Mount Sinai and Petra. London: A. Hall, 1851.

Date of Travel: 1845 Nationality: British

Bartlett, a British topographical artist and illustrator, wrote and illustrated one of the best nineteenth-century travel accounts of Egypt. In addition to Egypt, Bartlett traveled throughout Europe, America and the Near East.

a. With guidebooks in hand (the Bible, Herodotus, Wilkinson), Bartlett travels from Alexandria to Aswan. Illness prevented him from traveling further, but he does include a section on Nubia from Aswan to Abu Simbel drawn from other writers. Bartlett writes with a clarity often lacking in descriptions of Egypt and has a meticulous eye for detail ("The troops of clamourous beggars, their eternal chorus for 'beckshish,' which everywhere encounters the traveler,—the alarming results of contact with the tattered garments and filthy persons of the claimants,—the eternal howling of dogs by which he is everywhere beset, some of which are savage and dangerous,—he must grope his way to tomb and temple, irritate his eyes, lungs, and temper, and too often convert his enthusiasm to fury" p. 35). Numerous fine engravings after drawings by Bartlett.

b. Bartlett begins this book where he leaves off with the Nile Boat. Includes an account of Cairo (including a description of the Pyramids), the Suez area, and, in most of the book, a description of the Sinai.

Date of Travel: 1845–46
Nationality: British

A mining engineer in the service of Mohammed Ali, Petherick traveled throughout Egypt and Nubia, and on into Central Africa. Most of book is about Africa. Petherick does include some interesting anecdotes on Egypt. See also his later account with his wife in 1861.

0409 Romer, Isabella Frances, d. 1852
A pilgrimage to the temples and tombs of Egypt, Nubia, and Palestine, in 1845–6. London: R. Bentley, 1846. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1845–46
Nationality: British

In letter form, Romer, a popular writer of the time, gives a basic account of a tour from Alexandria to Abu Simbel and then on to the Holy Land. Describing all the sights in an exuberant manner, she includes digressions on the Mamelukes, Egyptian wedding ceremonies, the Ghawazee dancing girls, and good sights for invalids in need of rest cures. In Cairo, she meets with Edward Lane (q.v.) and Sophia Poole (q.v.). Enjoying herself in Egypt, Romer goes to many social events and sometimes can't hold in her excitement: "I have seen, touched, entered, the Pyramids! I once promised that should such ever be the case, I would write from the summit of one of them; but alas! I am tracing these line from the base—a base admission (pardon the vile pun) to be made by one who this morning cantered across the plain of Gizeh," p. 68.

Recollections of scenes and institutions in Italy and the East. London, 1851. 2 v.

Nationality: British

"I speak not of Giseh only, but of Egyptian monuments in general, many curious specimens of which may be seen in the British Museum, though not with half the interest they create in their original position," v.1, p. 212. A detailed description of Alexandria and Cairo. Includes a long section on Egyptian mythology. Illustrated.

0413 Bevan, Samuel

Date of Travel: 1846(?) Nationality: British

Most of Bevan’s book is concerned with his trip to Italy. In need of a position, Bevan answered an ad in the London Times for “service in a foreign country, a gentleman of business-habits and good address,” and soon found himself on a steamer to Alexandria. Settling into his duties as agent for “Waghorn’s India Company” in Alexandria, Bevan attempted to amuse himself in the single cafe (whose attraction was lessened by the fact that the dancing girls were just recently sent south). Then he delivers business mail from Alexandria to Cairo and then on to Suez and back. Bevan does a great deal of visiting and helping travelers. Interesting description of crossing the Sinai. Includes a trip to the Pyramids and Saqqara. Bevan spent about one year in Egypt in the mid 1840's before going on to Italy. Illustrated with black and white and colored engravings.

0415 Newmarch, Charles Henry, 1824–1903

Date of Travel: 1846(?) Nationality: British

Written under the pseudonym R.N. Hutton, Newmarch has compressed his various wanderings throughout the Mid and Far East into one linear narrative. In this tale, after sailing from China, Newmarch lands in the Sinai and, after visiting Mount Sinai, travels overland to Cairo and is amazed at the variety of people there (Turks, Jews, Indians, Egyptians, Europeans), and visits the Citadel and some mosques at which point he recounts the tale of Mohammed Ali's massacre of the Mamelukes. He then sails down the Nile to Alexandria after a visit to the Pyramids. He ends the book with a philosophic treatise on the fall of great powers and the justice of God.

0417 St. John, Bayle, 1822–1859

Date of Travel: 1846–47 Nationality: British

Living in the Alexandria area, St. John (the son of James A. St. John, q.v.) gives an excellent account of life with the people of Egypt. Highly critical of Europeans in Egypt. “As I did not mingle much in what was called Alexandrian ‘Society,’ I am not perhaps competent to criticise it ex cathedrá. My impression, however, is that it is a very dull, stupid thing, made up of some very excellent, but very dull, stupid people,” p. 291.

Date of Travel: 1846–47 Nationality: British

A very well-done account of Cairo, the Nile to Luxor, Wadi Halfa and Alexandria. Includes chapters on traveler’s hints, religion in Egypt, and politics. “Boulak, the port of Cairo, is four miles south of Shoubra, and one and a half from the city. It has much the character of Thames Street, or Wapping, in London,” p. 303.

0420 St. John, Bayle, 1822–1859

Date of Travel: 1847
Nationality: British

St. John was amongst the first Europeans to visit the temple of Jupiter Ammon at the Siwa oasis. Traveling with St. John were T. Firty, H. Lamport, and N. Longshaw, longtime residents of Egypt. The trek from Alexandria, full of trials and tribulations, is described in great detail in a gripping account as St. John and his fellow travelers mingle with Berber and Bedouin tribesmen of the area. Upon reaching the oasis, St. John speculates on the temple and its associations with Alexander the Great as well as the fate of Man: “And I was confirmed in the idea which must present itself to all who transgress the boundaries of the narrow circle of our young civilization and expand of the senile region of the earth, that ‘there is a tide in the affairs of men;’ that we advance and retreat, never reaching the goal towards which we fancy we are approaching,” p. 241. A good book with a single engraving of the Siwa oasis.

Journal d’un voyage au Levant. Paris: Marc Ducloux et Cie, 1848. 3 v.

Nationality: French

“Une heure, et nous voilà sur la rive occidentale, devant les deux temples d’Abou-Simbel.—Ceci est vraiment beau,” v.3, p. 202 (23 January 1848). A chatty account that is both interesting and informative. Gasparin traveled from Alexandria to Abu Simbel.

0422 Hyett, William Henry Adams, 1825–1850

Date of Travel: 1847–48
Nationality: British

“Few know the ease and luxury of a boat on the Nile. Many a Leicestershire fox-hunter would leave his saddle, and many a Norfolk sportsman uncock his Joe Manton to spend three months of his life in the land of mummies,” p. 15. Hyett, who traveled to Egypt in search of health, was unable to find it on the Nile, dying at age twenty-five while on his trip to the Holy Land. Traveling up the Nile from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa in the company of a Mr. Moreton, he died while in Syria. These journals and letters compiled by an unnamed friend (perhaps Moreton), make for fascinating reading.

0423 Martineau, Harriet, 1802–1876

Date of Travel: 1847–48     Nationality: British

“The mingled expressions of spite, fear and hopelessness in the face of the camel always gave me the impression of its being, or feeling itself, a damned animal,” p. 19. A good description of the usual sights. Martineau was one of the more widely-read Egyptian travel writers in the 19th century. Visiting Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor and the Nile to Wadi Halfa, she writes an entertaining account and includes historical sketches of Egypt for educative purposes.

0424 Schuber, Maria

Date of Travel: 1847–48     Nationality: German

A very detailed account, in letter form, of Schuber’s voyage through the Levant, stopping in Alexandria and Cairo.

0425 Trémaux, Pierre

Date of Travel: 1848     Nationality: French

Most of this account is concerned with the Sudan. Trémaux gives a brief description of Cairo before he travels down the Nile.

0426 Wainwright, Jonathan Mayhew bp., 1793–1854

Date of Travel: 1848  Nationality: American

a. A brief account of Cairo visited by Wainwright on his way to the Holy Land. He does mention that he traveled up the Nile to Luxor, but gives no account of the trip. Illustrated with engravings.

b. A very basic account of Egypt from Alexandria to Luxor. Wainwright concentrates on Cairo and the religious aspects of Egypt. "For my part, while the stars and stripes are to me a sight which in a foreign land always fills my heart with delight and patriotic pride, I think the English flag, as a national banner, lifting up the Cross on high, is the most beautiful in the world," p. 23. Illustrated with excellent engravings.

Date of Travel: 1848  Nationality: British

A brief account of Alexandria as Willan returns from a trip to the Holy Land.

0428 Furniss, William, 1820–1888

Date of Travel: 1848(?)  Nationality: American

"Waraga," Furniss' transliteration of the Arabic for "charms," covers his trip from Alexandria to Aswan. A well done and very readable account, he concentrates on the people rather than the antiquities. "Like a genuine Yankee, we cannot omit to express our appreciation in dollars and cents; and when we state the whole expense of that trip up the Nile, which lasted 72 days, only cost three of us about $300, we take the liberty of adding, that while it is the most moderate of prices, it is also the most agreeable 'dolci far niente' barkarole in the world," p. 394. Illustrated with engravings by Furniss.

Journal of a voyage up the Nile made between the months of November, 1848, and April, 1849. Buffalo, NY: Phinney & Co., 1851. 162 p.

Date of Travel: 1848–49  Nationality: American

A remarkably well-written book by a widely read, educated, and intelligent author. Quite familiar with all the literature on Egypt, he travels from Alexandria through Cairo to Luxor. “The purpose of the author in going to the Nile being fully understood, he describes his voyage and visits to those interesting places, in which difficulty, of necessity, made his voyage adventurous, threw him upon all his fancy for interest, and made him catch enthusiasm from the high religious satisfactions, poetry from the genius of the place, and constant excitement from the noble antiquities, of the ‘time when the world was young,’ ” p. 12. Illustrated.

0430 Dieterici, Friedrich Heinrich, 1821–1903

Date of Travel: 1848–49  Nationality: German

Detailed account of all the sights up the Nile from Alexandria to Aswan. Also includes the Red Sea and the Sinai. Illustrated.

0431 Freeman, Joseph John, 1794–1866

Date of Travel: 1848–49  Nationality: British

After an extensive tour of southern Africa, Freeman makes a brief tour of Egypt via the Sinai. Stopping in Cairo, he sees the Pyramids and other sights, and then goes on to Palestine in a camel caravan.

0432 Monk, Charles James, 1824–1900
The Golden Horn; and sketches in Asia Minor, Egypt, Syria, and the Hauraan. London: R. Bentley, 1851. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1848–49  Nationality: British

A very good account of the Nile journey. Monk traveled the entire length of the Egyptian Nile from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa and into the Sudan. Includes numerous accounts of his and his party’s hunting exploits. “January is not the month, of all others, to spend in Cairo. Plash, plash, beats the rain against your windows, and when at last the sun bursts forth in all its strength, the poor donkey, so despised and ill-used in England, is the only resource in your peregrinations through the narrow and dirty streets of the capital,” v.2, p. 30. Illustrated with engravings.

0433 Spencer, Jesse Ames, 1816–1898

Date of Travel: 1848–49 Nationality: American

A very detailed account of Spencer’s trip from his arrival in Alexandria via Malta, to Cairo, up the Nile to Luxor and Aswan (and then back and on to the Holy Land) told in letters to a friend. In addition to the narrative of his trip, he also includes chapters on the building of the Pyramids and hieroglyphics for which he quotes the well-known sources. As well as the usual sights, he visits a school in Luxor (‘... I made my way through several passages and huts, and had a good chance to inspect an Arab school, which was as noisy as any of the primary institutions in our good city of New York,” p.133). Spencer also makes a detailed tour of Cairo and is amazed by its variety. Includes an appendix with a log of the daily weather reports of his trip up the Nile. A good book. Original edition, had hand-colored lithographs, but this one only maps and plans. Also printed under the title, Egypt and the Holy Land (New York, 1850).

0434 Crosby, Howard, 1826–1891

Date of Travel: 1849 Nationality: American

A well-written, competent account with descriptions of the people, places, antiquities, and products of Egypt. (In Thebes) “It was with great surprise and pleasure that, in the midst of our wanderings in this curious spot, we read inscribed upon the wall of an unfinished apartment, the familiar names of three New York friends, who, thirteen years before, had like us been here admiring visitants,” p. 85. Crosby used the pseudonym El-Mokattem. Illustrated.

0435 Malta Protestant College
Journal of a deputation sent to the East by the committee of the Malta Protestant College, in 1849 containing an account of the present state of the Oriental nations, including their religion, learning, education, customs, and occupations. London: J. Nisbet and Co., 1854. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1849 Nationality: British

Included in this journal of the Malta Protestant College is a good, thorough description of Cairo (the deputation also visited Alexandria). Written by “a member of the Committee.”

0436 Senden, Gerard Heinrich, 1793–1851
Het heilige land. Gorindon, 1851. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1849 Nationality: Dutch

Senden visited Alexandria, Cairo and the Sinai. UNREAD.

0437 Ward, Matthew Flournoy, 1826–1862

Date of Travel: 1849 Nationality: American

“Alexandria, although no longer the proud seat of learning, science and refinement, possesses for me a strange charm, from its intimate association with the memory of the loveliest of women and the bravest of men,” p. 138. A well-written, but brief account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, the Nile to Aswan, and the Sinai. Ward was the Arkansas correspondent for the Louisville Journal in which these letters first appeared.

0438 Du Camp, Maxime, 1822–1894

Date of Travel: 1849–50 Nationality: French

Traveling with Gustave Flaubert on behalf of the French government (copying paintings, taking photographs, and making “squeezes”—paper mâché casts of intaglio inscriptions), Du Camp, a fascinating man in his own right, produced a number of works relating to Egypt. The two traveled from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa as well as going into the Fayyum. He and Flaubert created a wondrous account of Egypt at mid-century.

b. A reprint of Le Nil with a number of Du Camp’s calotypes as well as other engravings and photographs of the nineteenth century. Edited and with notes by Michel Dewachter and Daniel Oster

d. NOT SEEN

e. NOT SEEN

f. Du Camp's autobiography gives a detailed account of the planning of his and Flaubert's trip to the East, but not much on the actual trip or the photographic and archaeological work he did. "Il paraît qu'à Louqsor il y a un hôtel anglais bâti près des ruines: furnished apartment; on y mange des mock turtle, on y boit des bouteilles de pale ale; j'y ai mangés œufs durs, j'y ai bu de l'eau claire et je ne m'en suis pas phismal trouvé: progrès de la civilisation ou de l'exploitation que j'admire et que je suis bien aise de n'avoir pas trouvé jadis," v.1, p. 349.

0439 Flaubert, Gustave, 1821–1880

Date of Travel: 1849–50 Nationality: French

a. "Reflection: the Egyptian temples bore me profoundly. Are they going to become like the churches of Brittany, the water falls in the Pyrenees? Oh necessity! To do what you are supposed to do; to be always according to circumstances (and despite the aversion of the moment) what a young man, or a tourist, or an artist, or a son, or a citizen, etc. is supposed to be!," pp. 142–43. Excellent descriptions by Flaubert on the antiquities (which from this account really did bore him), and the people of Egypt. Flaubert traveled with Maxime Du Camp (q.v.). The Steegmuller edition includes extracts from Du Camp's works, Flaubert's letters and journal entries, a wonderful introduction, and photographs taken by Du Camp on the trip.

b. Flaubert wrote many letters from Egypt to his mother, family and friends. It is interesting to compare his letters to his mother to the ones he wrote to friends. "Nous avons quitté enfin (et hélas!) Thèbes hier matin. Il y a de quoi y rester longtemps en dans un Before becoming the “Lady with the Lamp” in the Crimea, Florence Nightingale, at 29, was just one of many young British ladies who took a dahabeah up the Nile. In these letters to her family back in England, Nightingale describes the antiquities she has seen, chronicles the lives of the modern Egyptians, and composes Christian meditations on Egypt and its Biblical associations. Eminently readable. The 1987 edition edited by Anthony Sattin (which includes reproductions of Egyptian scenes done by Nightingale’s contemporaries) edits and reprints the 1854 privately printed edition edited by Nightingale’s sister, Parthenope.

a. “This is a very stupid letter, my dear friends. But a sort of torpor crawls over one in a dahabeah. You feel, as you lie on the divan, and float slowly along, and the shores pass you gently by, as if you were being carried along some unknown river to some unknown shore, leaving for ever all you had ever once known before—a mysterious feeling creeps over you, as if it were the passage to some other world, the invisible journey through the valley—not of death, but as the ancients imagined death, a shore where all you have known appear as shades," p. 45 (9 December 1849).

0441 Patterson, James Laird

Date of Travel: 1849–50 Nationality: British

On a pilgrimage to reaffirm his faith, Patterson visited Alexandria, Cairo, and the Nile to Aswan and Abu Simbel. A different account, good reading, with interesting meditative sections. Illustrated with lithographs after sketches by the author.

0442 Curtis, George William, 1824–1892

Date of Travel: 1849–50(?) Nationality: American

George William Curtis, editor of Harper's Magazine and Harper and Brothers publishing house, sailed up the Nile aboard the Ibis in 1849–50(?). Never calling himself by his name, Curtis refers to himself as a Howadj (tourist/traveler). Not very interested in the antiquities along the Nile, Curtis concentrates on the Eastern/Oriental nature of Egypt. The centerpiece of his memoir is a long description of the Ghawazee (dancing girls) of Esna. Well versed in the acknowledged Egyptian experts of the past and present (Herodotus, Sir Gardner Wilkinson, Eliot Warburton), Curtis is also adept at dropping Classical and Biblical allusions. His story, though interesting, sometimes slips into too flowery a prose ("The moon has gathered the golden light in her shallow cup and pours it paler over a bivouac of camels, by a sheik's white-domed tomb," p. 20) for the modern reader. Curtis continued his journey on to the Holy Land in the volume, The Howadj in Syria (New York, 1852), in which he makes a brief mention of having just come from Egypt.
1850–1859

0444 Lottin de Laval, Pierre Victorien, 1810–1903

Date of Travel: 1850  Nationality: French

A good account of Alexandria, the Suez and Sinai areas, and Cairo. Lottin de Laval was on a mission for the French government, collecting antiquities. Illustrated with engravings, in a separate folio volume.

0445 Porfirii, bp. of Chigirin, 1804–1885 (Uspenskii, Porfirii)

Date of Travel: 1850  Nationality: Russian

Returning to Egypt for another visit to the monasteries of the Sinai, Porfirii gives a detailed description of the two monasteries of St. Anthony and St. Paul.

0446 Wells, William, ed.
Wells describes the travels of Alexandrine Tinné (1839- ). Written for children, it describes her martyrdom for the Christian faith in Africa. She spent a brief time in Egypt proper.

0447 Bromfield, William Arnold, 1801-1851

Date of Travel: 1850-51 Nationality: British

“The extreme softness of the stone offers great facility to those aspirants to such fame as can be secured through other ages by the simple agency of an inscription, and I am ashamed to say that I yielded to the national propensity and found time to carve in large and deep letters the initials W.A.B. on the face of one of the altar-like blocks that occupy the centre of the platform [of the Great Pyramid], but could not add the date before our party proposed descending to view the interior,” p. 51. In these letters to his sister, Bromfield shows an extreme sensitivity to Egypt not often found (graffiti was perhaps his only fault in this respect!). Traveling from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, and across the Sinai to Suez, he continued on to the Holy Land, dying in Damascus before returning to England.

0448 Lowth, George T.
The wanderer in Arabia; or, Western footsteps in eastern tracks. London: Hurst & Blackett, 1855. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1850-51 Nationality: British

Traveling from Alexandria all the way up the Nile as far as the Second Cataract at Wadi Halfa in the Cambria, Lowth takes in all the sights (Pyramids, Luxor, Thebes, Cairo, Abu Simbel), and then sails back down before heading off across the Sinai to the Holy Land. His day-by-day account is colorful and full of the picturesque details such as the European and American dahabeah races and the local color (“The common dog of Egypt is red—a cur, rather large, and a sneaking brute, smooth haired, low-bred and worthless for anything, except to howl at jackals at night,” p. 105). A good, if common tale of Egypt. Illustrated with engravings done from sketches done by Lowth on the spot, a bit crude, but effective.
0449 Melly, André, 1802–1851

Date of Travel: 1850–51 Nationality: French

A well-written set of letters (mostly in French, though some are in English) by Melly, who traveled from Alexandria all the way up the Nile to Ethiopia where, in the village of Gagee he died. “We have become all at once so accustomed to the slight dress of our crew and of the people we see on the Nile, that it does not appear in the least indecorous, and we rather admire than otherwise the clean well-made limbs and broad shoulders of the adults,” p. 27. Traveled with family (wife Ellen, daughter Louisa, and sons George [see below] and Charles).

0450 Melly, George, 1830–1894
Khartoum and the Blue and White Niles. London: H. Colburn, 1851. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1850–51 Nationality: British /French

Melly attempts to mingle with the people and get to know the real Egypt. Seeing all the sights in Alexandria and Cairo, he sails up the Nile through Luxor and Aswan on into the Sudan. Traveling with his mother, father (André Melly, see above) and two siblings (none of whom are mentioned after he tells us they are there), gives the impression of being innocent and awed by all he sees. “Strangers attract little attention, and I walked about here alone without exciting any observation; but when accompanied by an English lady, she became the centre of all eyes, and I have no doubt the old Turks were much shocked at such a public exhibition of an unveiled lady,” p. 59. Illustrated with engravings and includes a day-by-day weather chart of the trip at the end of volume one.

0451 Paine, Caroline

Date of Travel: 1850–51 Nationality: American

A very good, informal account of Alexandria, Cairo and the Nile to Wadi Halfa. “Among the objects of the greatest interest that we have seen are the quarries at Assuan. The rock is a very hard kind of granite. There are immense blocks of it lying about, and a column, partly buried by the sand, the uncovered length of which measured ninety feet, and the sides of it, twelve," p. 150. Illustrated with engravings.

0452 St. John, Bayle, 1822–1859

Date of Travel: 1850-51 Nationality: British

Picking up where he left off in Two Years residence in a Levantine Family (q.v.), St. John has a wider and deeper view of Egypt. Continuing to defend the fellah at the expense of the Europeans, he writes a very good book, again. "Perhaps the contemplation of the unhappy condition of the fellâhs has softened me into a too favourable estimate of their character. There appears to me nothing repulsive about them; nor is there anything very fascinating. Like all agricultural races, their intellects are slow and somewhat obtuse. The smell of the earth has in no country a favourable effect on the development of mind; and though Virtue may follow the plough, Genius abides in the fields only as an amateur," pp. xix–xx.

0453 Smith, Jerome Van Crowninshield, 1800–1879
A pilgrimage to Egypt embracing a diary of the explorations on the Nile; with observations illustrative of the manners, customs, and institutions of the people, and of the present condition of the antiquities and ruins. Boston: Gould and Lincoln, 1852. 383 p.

Date of Travel: 1850–51 Nationality: American

"Hassan apologized for the extra appearance of dilapidation at Thebes, when we were approaching it ... by saying Dr. Lepsius had spoiled everything in his country. Myself and companions can bear testimony to the fact that, wherever recent injuries have been inflicted, or something is missing that used to be somewhere, the guides invariably charge it upon that jackal provider for the lion of Prussia," pp. 216–17. In addition to this strong criticism of Lepsius, Smith is also critical of Italians whenever he runs into one. A physician, he comments on the diseases of Egypt as he finds them in his travels from Alexandria to Aswan, particularly ophthalmia. Illustrated with engravings.
0454 Mariette, Auguste, 1821–1881

Date of Travel: 1850–81 Nationality: French

Mariette, the great French archaeologist who excavated numerous sights including Saqqara, Memphis, Abydos, Thebes, Dendera, Edfu, Karnak, and the Great Sphinx, as well as founder of the Egyptian Museum and the French School of Egyptology, was one of the seminal figures in modern Egyptian history.

a. NOT SEEN

b. Translated by Alphonse Mariette. Traveled all over Egypt. This work is mostly descriptions of the antiquities with very little personal commentary.

c. NOT SEEN

d. The text in this volume is mostly descriptive of the photographic plates in the atlas volume. Includes the sights from Cairo to Aswan.

0455 Aiton, John, 1797–1863

Date of Travel: 1851 Nationality: British

“The approach to Grand Cairo is charming and cheery, and altogether as fanciful as if I had been carried with Aladdin’s lamp in my hand through a fairy region to one of the palaces mentioned in the Arabian Nights of Entertainment,” p. 51. Aiton, a clergyman on a trip through Europe and the Levant, visited Alexandria, Cairo, and the Red Sea. A good account, with Biblical quotes and basic descriptions of the sights. Illustrated with engravings by various artists including J.M.W. Turner.

0456 Teynard, Félix

Date of Travel: 1851 Nationality: French

Teynard describes his travels from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa primarily with photographs. The photographs in his book are interesting from an historical point-of-view, but not as good as Francis Frith’s (q.v.) from just a few years later.

0457 Park, Andrew
Egypt and the East; or travels on sea and land. London, 1852.

0458 Churi, Joseph H.
Sea Nile the desert, and Nigritia: travels in company with Captain Peel, R.N. 1851–1852. Described by Joseph H. Churi . . . With thirteen Arabic songs, as sung by the Egyptian sailors on the Nile., tr., with notes and the Arabic words written in English as pronounced and set to musical annotation; with other Arabic songs. London: The author, 1853. 331 p.

Date of Travel: 1851–52 Nationality: Lebanese/British

Traveling as the friend and Arabic translator to Captain William Peel (q.v.), Churi gives a basic description of a trip up the Nile from Cairo to Wadi Halfa. The most unique aspect is his inclusion of the words (with translations) and music of the songs of the Nile sailors. Illustrated.

0459 Ireland, John B.

Date of Travel: 1851–52 Nationality: American

A very brief account of Ireland’s trip to Egypt (Cairo to Aswan plus a side trip to the Sinai). He sees the usual sights and describes them in letters home. Illustrated with engravings made from drawings done by the author.

0460 Peel, William, 1824–1858

Date of Travel: 1851–52 Nationality: British

Literal copy of Peel’s journal as he traveled with Joseph Churi (q.v.) up the Nile and through Nubia. Most of the account concerns Nubia. Not as interesting as Churi’s account.

0461 Taylor, Bayard, 1825–1878

Date of Travel: 1851–52 Nationality: American

a. NOT SEEN

b. “Although I have described somewhat minutely the antiquities of Nubia and Ethiopia which I visited, and have not been insensible to the interest which every traveler in Egypt must feel in the richness of her ancient art, I have aimed at giving representations of the living races which inhabit those countries rather than the old one which passed away. I have taken it for granted that the reader will feel more interested—as I was—in the live Arab, than the dead Pharaoh," pp. 3-4. After an excellent description of Alexandria and Cairo, Taylor goes up the Nile (visiting with Mariette in Memphis), traveling on to Khartoum. There is not much else on Egypt. Illustrated with engravings by the author. Taylor visited Egypt again in 1874 (q.v.).

0462 Burton, Richard Francis, 1821–1890
Personal narrative of a pilgrimage to El-Medinah and Meccah.
3 v.

Date of Travel: 1852                  Nationality: British

Burton, the great traveler (one of the early explorers of central Africa and seeker of the source of the Nile) and Orientalist (translator of the Arabian Nights and the Kama Sutra), gives a good description of Cairo before continuing on his famous trip to Mecca. Also includes a little on Alexandria. "The land of the Pharaohs is being civilised, and unpleasantly so: nothing can be more uncomfortable than its present middle-state between barbarism and the reverse," v.1, p. 17. Illustrated.

0463 Hackett, Horatio Balch, 1808–1875 Illustrations of Scripture: suggested by a tour through the Holy under title: A tour through the Holy Land.

Date of Travel: 1852                  Nationality: American

A basic description of the religious sights in the Sinai, Alexandria and Cairo. Illustrated with engravings.

0464 MacGavock, Randal William, 1826–1863
A Tennessean abroad; or, Letters from Europe, Africa, and Asia.

Date of Travel: 1852                  Nationality: American

A brief account of the usual sights in Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan. MacGavock and his party did have a run-in with some natives that led to shooting and a trial before the local Pasha that ended with the Americans pushing the locals around.
0465 Ross, Henry James, 1820–1902

Date of Travel: 1852  Nationality: British

“It was most truly a Golgotha, desolation in all senses of the word. Over all the Pyramids rose up, the great gravestones of the generations buried within their long shadows,” p. 176. Interesting, very well-written letters to his sister. Ross traveled to Alexandria and Cairo. Edited by his wife, Janet, the daughter of Lucie Duff Gordon (q.v.). Illustrated with sketches by the author.

0466 Stanley, Arthur Penrhyn, 1815–1881

Date of Travel: 1852  Nationality: British

A mostly historical and geographical account of Cairo, the Nile to Aswan, the Suez area and the Sinai. Illustrated with engravings.

0467 Thomas, Joseph, 1811–1891

Date of Travel: 1852  Nationality: American

In less than two weeks, Thomas visits Alexandria, Cairo, Saqqara, and the Pyramids and Sphinx. Describing his pleasant stay in letters later revised for publication, he has only a few troubles with the natives. A very basic account of Egypt before he travels on to the Holy Land.

0468 Petermann, Heinrich i.e. Julius Heinrich

Date of Travel: 1852(?)  Nationality: German

0469 Bryant, William Cullen, 1794–1878
Date of Travel: 1852-53  Nationality: American

A basic, though well-done account of the usual sights in Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor by the American poet. "It is a mistake to speak of the Oriental as grave, solemn, and quiet; the Egyptian, at least, is the liveliest and noisiest of slaves. Everything in this country is done with noise," p. 73.

0470 Clayton, John William, 1833–

Date of Travel: 1853  Nationality: British

Good, simple account of a Nile trip from Alexandria, through Cairo and Luxor to Aswan and back. Most of the book is taken up with getting Clayton from London to Alexandria.

0471 Graul, Karl, 1814–1864

Date of Travel: 1853  Nationality: German

Basic account of Egypt. Illustrated with engravings.

0472 Regnault, A.

Date of Travel: 1853  Nationality: French

A good account of the people and customs of Egypt (Alexandria and Cairo). Includes a long section on Napoleon. A basic account, interspersed with historical references. Regnault traveled from Alexandria to Aswan.

0473 Schmarda, Ludwig Karl, 1819–1908

Date of Travel: 1853  Nationality: German

On an around-the-world trip, Schmarda visited Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, the Nile to Aswan, and the Suez area. A detailed account. Includes temperature charts of his travels.
0474 Thompson, Joseph Parrish, 1819–1979

Date of Travel: 1853 Nationality: American

a. NOT SEEN

b. Traveling to Egypt for his health, Thompson visited Alexandria, Cairo, and traveled up the Nile to Aswan. Seeing the usual sights, he also shows a great concern and interest in the people: “The sorriest sight in an Arab village is the children. Boys, ten or twelve years old are often seen stark naked, with the exception of a little skullcap, while younger urchins sport a string of beads upon the simple apparel nature gave them when they came into the world,” p. 52. Thompson includes a chapter for invalids, and one on Egyptian chronology. He traveled with Thomas C. Upham (see below), Benjamin S. Walcott, and “a Lady.” Illustrated with engravings taken from Bartlett and Lane (q.v.). Note: the “photographic views” of the title are a metaphor for Thompson’s memories of Egypt.

0475 Upham, Thomas Cogswell, 1799–1872

Date of Travel: 1853 Nationality: American

A good account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, the Suez area, and the Sinai. Of Pompey’s Pillar: “Different opinions are entertained as to the time when it was erected. But as I travel for health chiefly, I am obliged to leave antiquarian inquiries to others,” p. 55. Illustrated with engravings.

0476 Dorr, David F.

A colored man round the world. Cleveland, OH: Printed for the Author, 1858. 192 p.
Date of Travel: 1853(?)  Nationality: American

A fascinating account by Dorr, a freed slave traveling with his former master, Cornelius Fellowes, around the world. In Egypt, he travels through Alexandria, Cairo and the Nile to Luxor. Visiting the Pasha's garden, Dorr describes the event: "Mr. Fellowes, of New Orleans, lit a cigar, Mr. Elliot, of South Carolina, threw a quid of tobacco among the flowers, and I plucked a rose, and the Reverend Levi Tucker, so far descended from his gravity, to joke by saying, 'you will all be fired, look sharp!' Diary in Turkish and Greek waters. Edited by C. Felton. Boston: Hickling, Swan, and Brown, 1855. 299 p.

Date of Travel: 1853–54  Nationality: British

Planning an extensive tour of Egypt, Carlisle had to cut his trip short with only a visit to Alexandria after he became ill. A good description of Alexandria.

0479 Dorr, Benjamin, 1796–1869

Notes of travel in Egypt, the Holy Land, Turkey, and Greece. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott, 1856. 396 p.

Date of Travel: 1853–54  Nationality: American

Traveling with his son, Dorr meets with a Henry Gilpin and his wife, and they travel up the Nile from Alexandria to Luxor together. Dorr, rector of the Christian Church of Philadelphia, gives a good, basic account of the sights and includes Biblical quotations where appropriate. "As we ascended the river, the scenery became more varied and interesting; the land is better cultivated, and there are more objects to attract our attention,” p. 71.

0480 Eames, Jane Anthony, 1816–1894

Date of Travel: 1853–54 Nationality: American

A very detailed account, full of Eames’ personal adventures in Alexandria, Cairo, and the Nile to Aswan. “From the manner in which we were dashing through the water this morning, we thought our Southern voyage of the Nile likely soon to come to a close, but once more the wind failed us, and we are now going on at a more sober pace,” p. 122. This is the middle volume of Eames’ travels, the first being A Budget of Letters (1847), and the third being Budget Closed (1860).

0481 Tobin, Catherine (Ellis)

Date of Travel: 1853–54 Nationality: British

Traveling in a group, Tobin gives a basic account of Egypt (Alexandria to Aswan, and Suez and Sinai area). Illustrated with engravings.

0482 Greene, John Beasly, 1832–1856

Date of Travel: 1853–56 Nationality: American/French

0485 Stewart, Robert Walter

Date of Travel: 1854 Nationality: British

A good, but brief account of Egypt as Stewart goes off to the Holy Land, via Alexandria, Cairo, and the Sinai. “As the vanity of a Egyptian dragoman is only second in degree to that of a peacock or a Greek, you are sure to be assailed by the fellow, whose good fortune it is to own you for his Howajee, with incessant applications for arms," p. 7.

A brief account of Alexandria and Cairo. Prime met and dined with Edwin De Leon, American Consul in Alexandria and traveled with Chester N. Righter and George E. Hill. Illustrated with engravings.

0489 Ziegler, Alexander

Date of Travel: 1854(?)
Nationality: German

A detailed account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan. Most of volume 1 is devoted to Egypt.
0490 Anonymous ("A daughter of Japhet")

Date of Travel: 1854–55 Nationality: British

The anonymous, seventeen-year old girl who wrote this did us all a disfavor in her anonymity since it is one of the best travel accounts of the period. Traveling with her family from Alexandria to Aswan, they saw the usual sights, but they are described in a memorable manner: “In vain does the traveler start from England well armed with quassia, papier tue-mouche, and a variety of professedly infallible means of destroying flies; they are worse than useless in a Nile boat,” p. 192. Includes list of recommended reading.

0492 Barthélemy-Saint-Hilaire, Jules, 1805–1895

Date of Travel: 1854–56 Nationality: French

A series of letters (actually more like essays), on aspects of Egypt, particularly the Suez Canal appearing originally in the Journal des Débats. Dealing with the building of the Suez Canal, commerce in Egypt, Egyptian architecture, the life and culture of the present-day Egyptians, and the camel, the accounts are straightforward, with those of the Canal best.

0493 Watson, Andrew, 1834–1916
Date of Travel: 1854–96  Nationality: American

Though mostly a history, Watson does include some fascinating personal stories of travel in Egypt (including his own) of the forty-two year period of the United Presbyterian Church’s mission in Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

0494 Douglas, William, private, 10th Royal hussars

Date of Travel: 1855  Nationality: British

Chatty, soldierly account of Douglas’ days in India and his trip through Egypt on his return to England. Entertaining, anecdotal, and full of unusual sights; excellent reading. Traveled through Suez, Cairo and Alexandria. “To be at Cairo without doing the Pyramids would be like paying a visit to Niagara without seeing the Cataract, or being a month in London and never seeing St. Paul’s,” p. 111. Note: Caption title: From India to the Crimea and home. One chapter appeared in All the year round, another, and part of a third, in the United service magazine.

0495 Wharncliffe, John Stuart-Wortley, 2d baron, 1801–1855

0496 Fiske, Samuel Wheelock, 1828–1864

Date of Travel: 1855–56  Nationality: American

A humorous account of Alexandria and Cairo: “Rather romantic, writing you from the top of Cheops, amidst a picturesque group of Bedouins, Englishmen, and Yankees, who are noisily engaged in all the different occupations that can possibly be carried on in such circumstances,” p. 127.
0497 Prime, William Cowper, 1825–1905

Date of Travel: 1855–56 Nationality: American

One of the best books on Egyptian travel by an American, Prime traveled from Alexandria deep into Nubia. In his very detailed account, he sometimes drifts into the poetic: “Sometimes we rode hour after hour around the streets of Cairo, looking at old lattices, quaintly and elaborately carved, catching once in a while the vision of a beautiful face through some small opening, and carried away with us the blessings of smiles from dark eyes,” p. 63.

Date of Travel: 1855–56 Nationality: British

In this journal of a British official edited by his daughter, we get a very detailed description of Senior’s meeting with other officials, Turkish, French (including Ferdinand de Lesseps) and British. Including transcripts of his conversations, the reading can get a bit tedious, though some interesting facts do come out.

“On Tuesday, we made our first trial of an Egyptian railroad, which promised to take us to Cairo in seven hours, but, owning to various delays, mismanagement, and a strong Khasein wind, we were nearly twelve in reaching our destination,” p. 11. A good, descriptive account of Alexandria and Cairo, before the anonymous traveler continued on to the Holy Land.

0501 Bonar, Horatius, 1808–1889

Date of Travel: 1856  Nationality: British

An excellent account of the trip to the Sinai from Cairo via Alexandria. Traveled with Thomas Wright, Mr. Poyndes, and Mr. Beddome. “Moslemism has had its era of grandeur, but old Egypt still towers above it. All the days of the last two thousand years are but a modern addition to an old temple, which after time moulders away and leaves the ancient structure more venerable and more marvelous than before,” p. 60.

Train, the young American, tells of his travels from Boston to Australia, including a trip to Egypt (Suez area, Alexandria, and Cairo). An interesting book, written for a British audience. Includes an excellent account of the overland trip from Suez to Cairo by stage. “Shepherd’s [sic] Hotel, I believe, is the only decent one in Cairo—where you have to pay New York prices for Oregon comforts: The proprietor has been catering for the traveling public some fifteen years, but his ideas of living do not seem to profit by the experience,” p. 254.

0508 Sopwith, Thomas, 1803–1879

Date of Travel: 1856–57  Nationality: British

Entries from Sopwith’s private journal printed in at the request of friends. Sopwith, who traveled with Robert Stephenson and Frederick Richard Lee, gives a brief account of Alexandria and Cairo. They visit the usual sights, including the Pyramids and Saqqara, staying about two weeks. Impressed with the Alexandria-Cairo railway, Sopwith and company also meet up with a number of other English travelers. Overall, a good, though brief account. “The railway from Alexandria to Cairo is the first railway that has been made in a Mussulman country; and if it is considered how vast a change the railroad system has produced in the most highly civilized countries, it may safely be concluded that still greater comparative amelioration must result from its introduction into a country so semi-barbarous as Egypt undoubtedly is,” p. 114. After a detailed description of Alexandria, Ditson continues his account up the Nile to Wadi Halfa. Includes a description of Mariette’s work at the Pyramids, and on up the Nile, he transcribes the graffiti he finds on the tombs and temples. A rather good account; “Para” is the smallest denomination of Egyptian currency, a “penny.” “Cairo, like Constantinople, when first seen in the distance, breaks upon the vision like a bright mirage: Mohammed Ali’s mausoleum, reminds one of Cole’s, airy temple in ‘The Voyage of Life,’ ” p. 141.

0528 Jones, John Fulkes, 1826–1880

Date of Travel: 1859(?)  Nationality: British

Jones' object was to illustrate the connections between Egypt and the Bible. As well as mentioning the sights from the Bible, he also gives a basic description of the people and sights. There are long digressions on subjects such as Biblical chronology and Moses. “Nile travelers, generally, are little attracted by the religious aspect of Egypt; and thus it is that in most books of travel, but little attention is paid to the religious uses of Egyptology,” p. iii.

0530 Fairholt, Frederick William, 1814–1866

Date of Travel: 1859–60 Nationality: British

In search of health, Fairholt saw the usual sights from Alexandria to Abu Simbel. His account is quite basic, sounding at times like a tour book. He does include some smaller towns on his itinerary (El-Minya, Keneh), and a chapter on the “Sanitary Aspect” of the Nile: “Of late years, the Nile has been the favoured resort of invalids, whose transit has been rendered easy by the extraordinary facilities offered by steam-boats and railway, all under European control. English medical men have greatly favoured this new influx of travelers; and many a Nile boat may now be looked upon as a floating sanatorium,” p. 437.

Illustrated with engravings.

0534 Herbert, Mary Elizabeth (A’Court), 1822–1911

Date of Travel: 186– Nationality: British

An interesting book that takes a look at a narrow part of the Middle East, the Christian monasteries. Traveling through Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan and then on to Jerusalem, Herbert traveled with a group of Catholics visiting the various Coptic monasteries in Egypt and the Orthodox ones in the Sinai. “To the Catholic traveler in this country, nothing can be more melancholy than the utterly degraded condition of the people, who are really very little removed from brute creation. Years of ill-usage, hardship, and wrong have ground down the fellah to the abject condition of a slave; and the utter extinction of Christianity among them seems to preclude all hope of their ever rising again,” p. 50. Herbert also visits the still unfinished Suez Canal as well as Catholic missions in Cairo and elsewhere in Egypt.

b. Governess to Ibrahim, son of Ismail Pasha (and who later compiled a bibliography of books relating to Egypt—see HILMY), Lott tells of her adventures in the courts of Egypt and Turkey. Has nothing but good things to say of Ismail. “I returned the salaam of the men in the boats, who all placed their oars upright and salaamed me. This afforded the Princesses great amusement, as they enjoyed the sport amazingly, and every now and then kept asking me if I did not think it great fun, as they were sure that these officials would go back and report that they had seen their Highnesses the Princesses, when they had only been salaamed by the Grand Pacha’s governess,” p. 163, v.2. A good, easily read account of Forsyth's trip to Alexandria, the Red Sea, Suez, and Cairo. Though he sees the usual sights, he takes an unusual route of visiting the Red Sea before Cairo after stopping in Alexandria. "One day, I happened to take a luncheon in the tomb lately discovered near the great pyramid of Cheops, and was moralizing on the very inconsistent use made of that splendid mausoleum, with its beautiful pillars and proportions, yet spacious enough to make a magnificent dining-room," pp. 58-59. Date of Travel: 1860–61 Nationality: British Overwritten account of Beaumont’s trip from Alexandria to Cairo, the Sinai, Aswan and back. Warning travelers of the dangers of Egypt, he also includes digressions on the Exodus, the desert, the Bedouins, and camels. A small, entertaining segment is his description of the camel: “You may sit like a lady on a pillion, or a lady on a side-saddle, with either both legs before you on the same side, or one leg crossed over the pommel-like an Arab with your legs doubled under you, or like a Turk with your knees in your mouth. You may recline at full length on his back if you are lazy, or if there be a sand-storm, and you dislike facing it, you may turn round and face his tail,” p. 174. Date of Travel: 1860-61  Nationality: British

First visiting Egypt in 1832-33 to see the sights, Hoskins came again in 1859-60, and again in 1860-61 from his health. This volume concerns this last trip, though he does make comparisons to his earlier visits. Visiting the sights from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, Hoskins gives a basic account: "We were above a week in Cairo before we decided upon servants. A new race of dragomen has sprung up; attractive certainly in their gay costumes, but, from all we heard, a most untrustworthy set," p. 92.

0545 Lansing, Gulian, 1825–1892

Date of Travel: 1860-61  Nationality: American

Lansing, an American missionary in Cairo, traveled from his religious bookstore in Cairo all through Upper Egypt in a Nile boat. Commenting on the slavery situation in Egypt, he draws a parallel to American slavery, and finds the Egyptian form less deplorable because there is no "prejudice of color," most slaves are servants (not field hands "crushed to the earth under the cumbrous wheels of King Cotton," and no fugitive slave law exists. After this digression, Lansing describes the convent and returns to his Cairo bookshop. A fascinating account of Egypt, with no mention of the antiquities, concentrating solely on the amazing present. Traveled with his wife. Illustrated with engravings.

0546 Baker, Samuel White, 1821–1893

Date of Travel: 1861  Nationality: British

Baker, one of the great explorers of central Africa in search of the source of the Nile, makes a brief mention of his stop in Cairo and the trip down the Nile to his base in Khartoum. Traveled with his wife, Florence (von Saas) Baker. Illustrated with engravings.

Date of Travel: 1861  Nationality: British

Taken from their journals, this brief account of the Pethericks’ travel down the Nile to their base in Central Africa is tantalizingly brief. John Petherick, who had been in the service of Mohammed Ali in the 1840’s married Katherine Harriet Edlman and took her with him when he was appointed Her Majesties’ Consul for Central Africa. The handwriting of God in Egypt, Sinai, and the Holy Land: the records of a journey from the great valley of the West to the sacred places of the East. Columbus, OH and New York: Randall and Aston Sheldon & Co., 1862. 2 v. in 1.

Date of Travel: 1861  Nationality: American

“... designed not only to present the interesting and exciting incidents of travel, but to connect with the scenes and places visited the most prominent and instructive historic events that have characterized them; drawing from them illustrations of scripture, events of history, sketches of biography, and, more especially, the more important moral lessons they are calculated to suggest, and as it is hoped will benefit the heart and life,” p. vi. The Reverend travels from Alexandria to Cairo, and then on to Suez and Mt. Sinai. He feels compelled to mention every name, sight and event of Egyptian history and comment on it. Though, in general, a dull and pedantic tale, there are parts (such as his trip to Mt. Sinai), where Randall’s enthusiasm for his subject and what it means to him breaks through his style. Illustrated with well-done engravings.

Visiting Alexandria to see friends, Power sees only the sights in Alexandria and Cairo. A friend of Charles Dickens, she writes a witty and readable account of Egypt: “I wish to explain to you that in going to Egypt I did not go as a traveler, in the proper sense of the word; my voyage was not with a view to study, to investigate, to obtain information for the purpose of conveying it to others, either by word of mouth or on paper; by this confession I wish to

0557 Adams, Andrew Leith, d. 1882
Notes of a naturalist in the Nile valley and Malta a narrative of exploration and research in connection with the natural history, geology, and archaeology of the lower Nile and Maltese Islands. Edinburgh: Edmonston and Douglas, 1870. 295 p.

Date of Travel: 1862–63 Nationality: British

Traveling from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, Adams gives an interesting account of the natural history of the Nile Valley. A good description of this aspect of Egypt in a detailed, but non-scientific manner. Most of the book is devoted to Malta.

0558 Duff Gordon, Lucie (Austin), 1821–1861

Date of Travel: 1862–69 Nationality: British

Author and translator of numerous works, Duff Gordon went to Egypt for her health in 1862 and stayed until her death in 1869. Her letters home from her house in Luxor were a huge success in her own lifetime and have continued to be one of the most popular and quoted sources on Egyptian travel. Showing a great concern for the common Egyptian, she was well aware of the problems facing Egypt: “The days of the beauty of Cairo are numbered. The mosques are falling to decay, the exquisite lattice windows rotting away and replaced by European glass and jalousies. Only the people and Government remain unchanged,” (25 May 1863, 1902 edition). The 1902 edition edited by Duff Gordon's daughter includes even more letters. The recent 1969 edition gathers letters from all three volumes into one convenient, well-edited text.

0559 Grant, James Augustus, 1827–1892
A walk across Africa; or, Domestic scenes from my Nile journal. Edinburgh; London: W. Blackwood and Sons, 1864. 452 p.

Date of Travel: 1863 Nationality: British

In this, one of the many accounts of the search for the source of the Nile by those involved, Grant (who was John Hanning Speke's companion when the source was discovered) devotes his last chapter to the trip from Khartoum to Cairo and the sights seen. Very brief. Illustrated.
0560 Saulcy, Louis Félcien Joseph Caignart de, 1807–1880
Voyage en Terre Sainte. Paris: Didier et Cie, 1865. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1863
Nationality: French

A brief account of Egypt (Alexandria and Cairo) before Saulcy, a French archaeologist, continued on to the Holy Land. Saulcy visited again in 1869. Illustrated with engravings.

0561 Clark, Edward Lord, 1838–1910

Date of Travel: 1863(?)
Nationality: American

Daleth, the Hebrew letter signifying “door,” is for Clark, also the symbol of Egypt. Concentrating on the historical aspects of Egypt to show how it is important from a Biblical/historical perspective, he tells a good story, though it is a bit light on the personal narrative side. “The city of Alexandria, with its monuments and its commerce, welcomed us to Egypt, and not far beyond the walls we saw the full, rich streams of the Nile, spreading fertility and beauty,” p. 288. Illustrated with engravings.

0562 Cobbe, Frances Power, 1822–1904

Date of Travel: 1863(?)
Nationality: British

Cairo, “The City of Victory,” is the only Egyptian city to make it into Cobbe’s account of old cities. A delightful account of Cairo, with some description of the rest of Egypt included. First appeared in Fraser’s Magazine.

0564 Du Bisson, Raoul

Date of Travel: 1863–65 Nationality: French

Traveling down the Nile from Alexandria into the Sudan, Du Bisson gives an interesting and readable account, including a good description of the annual flooding of the Nile. Most of the book is concerned with Nubia and the Sudan, but he does give some fascinating anecdotes on the Egyptian court.

0565 Klunzinger, Karl Benjamin, 1834–1914

Date of Travel: 1863–69 Nationality: German

1876–78

a. A sanitary physician at Cossier from 1862–69 and 1876 on, Klunzinger gives an excellent account of the Egyptian people, observing their customs and seeing all the sights. Includes a preface by Georg Schweinfurth (q.v.): “The author’s chief endeavour was that the facts should speak. A soul overflowing with poetry will perhaps miss the descriptions of nature which are usually employed as the setting for a picture of manners, and if so also the idyllic atmosphere with which our writers, often infect with the “world-pain,” or some other superstitions, think they enliven their descriptions,” p. xii.

0566 Kusel, Samuel Selig de, (baron), 1848–
Date of Travel: 1863–87 Nationality: British

Kusel, an Englishman in the government of the Khedive, traveled all throughout Egypt and served in many positions including that of American consul in Alexandria (1885). He tells a good story, and includes numerous anecdotes of business and politics in Egypt. Illustrated with engravings.

0567 Schweinfurth, Georg August, 1836–1925

Date of Travel: 1863–89 Nationality: German

Botanist and traveler, Schweinfurth visited Egypt regularly after 1863 and lived in Cairo after 1875. Founder of the Geography Society in Cairo, he traveled throughout the country. This account, a memoir of his years in Egypt, is an excellent, though sometimes technical, record of his years in Egypt. Illustrated with photographs and sketches.

0568 Allen, Harriet Trowbridge, d.1877

Date of Travel: 1864 Nationality: American

A brief account of Suez, Cairo and Alexandria as Allen travels around the world. Good account of the Pyramids and Sphinx.

A hundred days in the East; a diary of a journey to Egypt, Palestine, Turkey in Europe, Greece, the isles of the archipelago, and Italy. London: J.F. Shaw & Co., 1865. 615 p.

Date of Travel: 1864 Nationality: British

“Seeing about everybody donkey-riding, I proceeded à la Balaam from the Customhouse to ‘Cleopatra’s Needle,’ or the Heliopolitan obelisk of Thothmose III,” p. 27. A well-written, diary-style account. Made only a brief stop in Alexandria and Cairo before continuing on to the Levant.
0570 Macleod, Norman, 1812–1872

Date of Travel: 1864  Nationality: British

Interesting, but basic account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Red Sea, with some good descriptive accounts. Illustrated by engravings by Joseph Swain.

0571 Wace, Henry T.
Palm leaves from the Nile Being a portion of the diary of a wanderer in Egypt. Shrewsbury: Leake and Evans, Printers, 1865. 85 p.

Date of Travel: 1864  Nationality: British

An entertaining, brief account. A simple, unaffected transcription of what he saw and did; while at the Pyramids: "I began my letters to my distant friends, but of course began them only, by dating them, 'Top of Pyramid of Geezah, 25th November, 1864,' to be completed at leisure," pp. 33–34.

0577 B., Comtesse Elisabeth

Date of Travel: 1864–65 Nationality: French

A fascinating, detailed account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Nile to Luxor. The Comtesse, who spent a number of months in Cairo gives short shift to all but the social side of Cairo. “Avant d’arriver au Caire, on voit les pyramides très-distinctement. Vers une heure, nous descendîmes à la gare; notre drogoman, Mahomed-Omar, nous attendait avec l’omnibus pour nous conduire à Shephards-Hôtel, où notre appartement avait été arrêté.” p. 13.

0578 Lynch, Thomas Kerr, 1818–1891
A visit to the Suez Canal. London: Day and Son, Limited, 1866. 72 p.
Date of Travel: 1864-65 Nationality: British

Though the primary purpose of Lynch’s visit was to see the construction of the Suez Canal, he also visited and described Alexandria and Cairo. At Suez, he meets with de Lesseps and gives a good account of the Canal and its construction. “I walked towards that famous pier, the practicability of which interests the intellects of Europe and the world; and which the Canal, if successful, will, it is said, revolutionise the trade of the East, and the Empires based on its commerce,” p. 51. Illustrated with engravings.

0579 Rhoné, Arthur, 1836–1910

Date of Travel: 1864–65(?) Nationality: French

An interesting book, but one that comes near to being a guidebook. Rhoné gives a good description of Alexandria and Cairo, with side-trips to Heliopolis and Saqqara (where he visits with Mariette). Illustrated with engravings.

0580 Smyshliaev, Dmitrii Dmitrievich, 1828–1893
Na puti k Sinaiu. Perm, Russia 1877. 46 p.

Date of Travel: 1865 Nationality: Russian

Smyshliaev visited Alexandria and the Sinai.

0581 Charles, Elizabeth Rundle, 1828–1896

Date of Travel: 1865(?) Nationality: American

A brief account of Alexandria and Cairo, with a description of the Pyramids. Illustrated with engravings.

0582 Thornbury, Walter, 1828–1876
Criss-cross journeys. London: Hurst and Clackett, 1873. 2 v.
Date of Travel: 1865(?) Nationality: British

A friend of Dickens and minor English man of letters, Thornbury contributed regularly to a number of Dickens' periodical efforts, including All the Year Round from which this collection of travel sketches were taken. Interesting, well-written accounts.

0583 Coffin, Charles Carleton, 1823–1896

Date of Travel: 1866 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Coffin gives a very detailed account of Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, the Suez area). Well written and entertaining. "But in the streets there is a mixture of the East and West,—the East the more numerous, the West the mightier," p. 25.

0584 Palgrave, William Gifford, 1826–1888

Date of Travel: 1866 Nationality: British

A short, journalistic account, primarily of Luxor and Thebes. Originally published in the MacMillan Magazine, January 1867. William was the brother of Francis Turner Palgrave (who edited The Golden Treasury of the Best Songs and Lyrical Poems in the English Language), a Jesuit missionary and later diplomat. His more famous work dealt with his travels in Arabia (Narrative of a Year's Journey through Central and Eastern Arabia, 1865).

0587 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne, 1835–1910
The innocents abroad; or, The new Pilgrim’s progress; being some account of the steamship Quaker City’s pleasure excursion to Europe and the Holy land; with descriptions of countries, nations, incidents, and adventures as they appeared to the author. Hartford, CT: American Publishing Company, 1869. 651 p.

Date of Travel: 1866–67 Nationality: American

Innocents Abroad made Clemens’ literary and financial fortunes. Published in 1869, it was a huge success. Leaving Europe behind, Clemens sailed for Egypt, landing in Alexandria. Many before and after would describe the scene that was to follow—donkey boys, crowds of tourists, the climb up the Great Pyramid, the baksheesh demanding masses, Oriental Cairo, but few would do it so lightly and with so much humor. Clemens’ description of a guide’s offer to climb down Cheops’ pyramid and up Chephren’s for a dollar is probably the most entertaining episode from Egyptian travel literature (and repeated by nearly every travel writer on Egypt down to the present). With Alexandria, Cairo, and the Pyramids, Clemens had seen enough of Egypt for his purposes and skipped a trip up the Nile, leaving for home and fame.

0588 Leech, Harry Harewood

Date of Travel: 1866–67 Nationality: American

A very good account full of both humor and seriousness. The “Idler,” as Leech calls himself, paid a visit to Lucy Duff Gordon (q.v.) on his trip from Alexandria to Luxor (on Duff Gordon): "I took my way down to the Nile banks, ruminating on this strange life, this human destiny—a brilliant woman buried in the desert, with no companions but an Arab slave, dependant upon the strangers' boats for all news of the stirring life of the outer world—slowly dying of disease, and, worse than all, perhaps—rust of the soul," p. 281. Illustrated with engravings.

b. A very basic, guidebookish account of Egypt written for private circulation in its first edition, and to be handed out by American bankers in Paris in its second edition. Numerous illustrations.

0590 Swift, John Franklin

Date of Travel: 1866–67(?) Nationality: British

Coming to Egypt from Spain across North Africa, Swift gives an interesting account of the usual sights. First appeared in a San Francisco newspaper.

0591 Severance, Emily (Allen), 1840–1921

Date of Travel: 1867 Nationality: American

Traveling with her father, Severance sees the usual sights in Alexandria and Cairo.
0592 Siegfried, Jacques, 1840–

Date of Travel: 1867 Nationality: French

On an around-the-world trip, Siegfried visits Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan, and across to the Suez area. A brief account, but with good detail.

0593 Vetromile, Eugene, 1819–1881

Date of Travel: 1867 Nationality: American

"I desired to celebrate Mass in the subterranean chapel, the house of the Holy Family. But could I do it in a schismatic and heretical church?" v.2, p. 72. Well, yes ... Vetromile, a Catholic priest did celebrate Mass in Cairo, as well as traveling through Alexandria, and up the Nile through Luxor to Aswan, and across the desert via Port Said to the Sinai. He visited the usual sights, as well as a number of Christian missions. Illustrated with engravings. A good account.

0594 Wallace, Alexander, 1816–1893

Date of Travel: 1867(?) Nationality: British

A good, basic account of Alexandria, Cairo, the Suez area, and the Sinai. Illustrated with engravings.

0595 Southworth, Alvan S.
Date of Travel: 1867-68  Nationality: American

Traveling from Alexandria into the Sudan, Southworth gives a good sketch of modern Egypt. A reporter for the New York Herald, the idea of traveling to Egypt came from his reading of the exploits of the great explorer Sir Samuel Baker. Written in a lively style, there is a good description of Cairo, but not much else on Egypt. Illustrated with engravings and maps.

0596 Smith, Alfred Charles, 1822–1898
The Nile and its banks: a journal of travels in Egypt and Nubia showing their attractions to the archeologist, the naturalist and general tourist. London: J. Murray, 1868. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1867-68(?)  Nationality: British

In telling the story of the daily life of travelers in Egypt as well as describing the birds of the valley of the Nile as a "loyal member of that most select and learned Society, the British Ornithologists Union," Smith creates an interesting and fun account of his trip up the Nile from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa. Smith traveled with Alfred Smith (his father), and Leveson Russell Hamilton (all three travelers were Oxonian clergymen). Illustrated with engravings.

0597 Bellows, Henry Whitney, 1814–1907

Date of Travel: 1868  Nationality: American

A basic description of the usual sights told by Bellows in letters to his parishioners in Minnesota. Bellows traveled to Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, the Nile to Aswan, and the Suez area.

0600 MacGregor, John, 1825-1892

Date of Travel: 1868  Nationality: British

“My tent at Boulak, the bustling port of Cairo, was placed close to the water and the Rob Roy was launched into the Yellow Nile. Long lines of native boats were here with lofty yards pointing up into the blue sky. Splendid ‘dahabeehas’ for European traveller’s use vied in their brightest paint and gaudy flags,” p. 44. A good, although brief account of Egypt (the Nile around Cairo, Alexandria, and the Suez area) before MacGregor takes his fourteen-foot canoe by camel over the desert to the Jordan. Illustrated with engravings. MacGregor traveled to other lands (Scandinavia) with the Rob Roy, writing of these voyages.

0602 Hopley, Howard

Date of Travel: 1868(?)  Nationality: British

Not a great lover of antiquities, Hopley concentrates on the people and their customs. After a quick trip through Cairo, he rents a boat and goes up Nile to Aswan, with many stories of his crew along the way: "We dismounted in the midst of a little Nubian hamlet, where the huts, half buried in drifted sand from the tawny desert, were nestled among black beetling rocks at the head of the cataract—a village hot as a furnace, and swarming with children," p. 280. A good book, full of interesting reading, illustrated with engravings. Parts appeared in Leisure Hours and Chambers Journal.

0605 About, Edmond Françoise Valentin, 1828–1885

Date of Travel: 1868–69 Nationality: French

About visited Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, the Sinai) in 1868–69, seeing the usual sights. From his visit came the novel, Le Fellah, a best-seller both in France and the English-speaking world which was an interesting novel from an historical point of view. It first appeared in Revue des deux mondes, February–April 1869 as "Ahmed le fellah."

0606 Ely, Jane (Hope-Vere) Loftus, 1821–1890
Mafeesh, or, Nothing new: the journal of a tour in Greece, Turkey, Egypt, the Sinai-Desert, Petra, Palestine, Syria, and Russia. London: Printed by William Clower, 1870. 2 v.
Date of Travel: 1868–69 Nationality: British

Ely's diary of her trip to Port Said, Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, up the Nile to Aswan and Ismailia (where she visited the still unfinished Canal). Interesting account. Traveled with Dr. Coulthard and Mr. Robbins.

0607 De Leon, Edwin, 1828–1891
The Khedive's Egypt; or, The old house of bondage under new masters. London: S. Low, Marston, Searle & Rivington, 1877. 435 p.

Date of Travel: 1869 Nationality: American

The American Consul-General in Egypt from 1854 to 1860 (leaving to work for the Confederacy in Europe), De Leon returned for a visit in 1869 and traveled all throughout the country, from Alexandria to Aswan and up the Suez Canal. Critical of Ismail Khedive (thinking he should spend less time at parties), and including a lot of Egyptian history, De Leon gives a good account that is quite entertaining. In 1881 he returned to Egypt to assist in the installation of a telephone system. Illustrated.

0608 Dicey, Edward, 1832–1911

Date of Travel: 1869 Nationality: British

A brief, and uninteresting account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez area. Includes a long section on the Suez Canal. Of Alexandria Dicey says: "So the East and West are shaken up together in a strange olla podrida; and the result is the port of Egypt," v.2, p. 7. Dicey was the correspondent for the Daily Telegraph.

0609 Fouché, Catharina Thérèse Lovisa Fredrika Élisabeth (von Stedingk) Grey, 1837–1901
Private journal of a visit to Egypt, Constantinople, Greece, &c, in the suite of the prince and princess of Wales. London: Smith, Elder & Co., 1869. 203 p.

Date of Travel: 1869 Nationality: British

Traveling with the Prince and Princess of Wales, Fouché (Mrs William Grey) sailed aboard the Ariadne from Alexandria to the Second Cataract. Her journal is filled with Court gossip and goings-on, with elaborate descriptions of the clothes worn (“Dined at seven, and after dinner the Princess and I again changed our dresses and put on the not very graceful, but very comfortable and sensible costumes, made of flannel which we always wear upon these riding expeditions,” p. 56). Part of a large entourage, Fouché, the Prince and Princess sailed to Luxor (where they saw a special fireworks display), and on to Esna, Philae, Abu Simbel and Wadi Halfa. Returning, they saw the Pyramids and Sphinx. Stopping at Suez, they met with M. de Lesseps, builder of the Canal. While in Luxor, Fouché tells us, the Prince paid a visit to Lady Duff-Gordon (q.v.). A competent narrative full of interesting people. (Library of Congress copy has original letters tipped in).

0610 Friedrich III, German Emperor, 1831–1888

Date of Travel: 1869 Nationality: German

Traveling to Egypt to witness the opening of the Suez Canal, Friedrich III continued on to take a Nile cruise from Cairo to Aswan. A fascinating account of royalty up the Nile.

Fromentin, a French writer/artist, was an official guest at the opening of the Suez Canal. He also sailed up the Nile.
1860–1869

0612 Gautier, Théophile, 1811–1872

Date of Travel: 1869  Nationality: French

Gautier, the French writer, visited the Near East a number of times, but first came to Egypt for the opening of the Suez Canal. While in Egypt, he saw Cairo, Suez, Alexandria, the Fayyum, and the Sinai, writing an entertaining, fact-filled account, but with little personal narrative. "La curiosité irritée de venait febrile et l'on faisait tourner la momie un peu vivement sur elle-même. Hoffmann ou Edgar Poë auraient pu trouver là point départ d'un de leurs contes terribles," v.2 p. 102.

0613 Harman, Henry Martyn, 1822–1897

Date of Travel: 1869  Nationality: American

A brief account of Alexandria and Cairo with Harman describing the usual sights. "The first thing that strikes the traveler upon landing in Egypt is the filth he everywhere sees," p. 69.

0614 Lenoir, Paul, 1826–

Date of Travel: 1869  Nationality: French

Lenoir, a student of Jean Louis Gérôme, gives an account of the travels of an unnamed group including himself and Gérôme. Visiting the mosques of Cairo, and the sights from Alexandria to Aswan, the Fayyum, and the Sinai, before traveling across the desert to Arabia Petra. A good account, but Lenoir is vague about people and dates: "Mon ami G——s'offrit deux crânes en mauvais état, qui font aujourd'hui le plus bel ornement de son petit Sérapéum de Chatou. Je me contentai de bourrer mes poches de baudellettes assez bien conservées, et dont le tissu fin et serré pouvait donner une idée de ces étoffes aussi anciennes qui le Traveling from Alexandria to Aswan in addition to the Suez Canal, he comments on the people and places he sees. This account was edited by Peter Sulzer from the diaries and letters of Sulzer-Rieter. Illustrated with engravings from other sources.

0621 Thomson, Andrew

Date of Travel: 1869  Nationality: British

A good account with some interesting comments on the new Suez Canal. Thomson visited Alexandria, Cairo, the Suez area before continuing on to the Holy Land. “The design of these notes is not archeological, but it seems scarcely possible to name Alexandria without referring to Cleopatra’s Needle, forming, with its twin obelisk, a reflected gift to England,” p. 19. This account first appeared in various magazines. Illustrated with engravings.

0626 Eden, Frederic Augustus Morton
Date of Travel: 1869-70        Nationality: British

Eden and his wife, seeking a warmer climate, traveled to Egypt, despite their fears it would be overrun with people visiting the recently opened Suez Canal. A wonderful, detailed account (Eden includes lists of supplies and expenses for others who may wish to travel without a dragoman). “Living in Egypt is exceedingly cheap; that is to say, it should be so, but the price per head, per day charged by the dragoman, or the estimate made of the cost per month, is always absurdly high and often exorbitant,” p. 27. The costs to the Edens for their trip, including renting their dahabeah, the Lotus, came to £60 per month.

0627 Pharaon, Florian, 1827-1887

Date of Travel: 1869-70        Nationality: French

A good personal account with numerous astute observations: “Le Caire, certes, est beau lorsque le soleil l'éclaire; ses rayons puissants dorent les coupoles fauves et marbrent les terrasses grises,” p. 50. Excellent engravings by A. Darjou.

0628 Ebers, Georg Moritz, 1837-1898

Date of Travel: 1869-70        Nationality: German
1872-73

Ebers, Egyptologist and novelist, wrote some of the more popular books on Egypt. In addition to his popular works on Egyptology and his scientific papers on his discoveries, he wrote a number of best-selling historical romances set in Egypt. Among these are (the English titles): An Egyptian Princess, 1864; Uarda, 1877; Homo Sum, 1878; The Sisters, 1880; The Emperor, 1881; Serapis, 1885; and The Bride of the Nile, 1887.
a. This work, more of a guidebook, is a good introduction to Ebers’ work on Egypt. Illustrated with engravings.

b. Translated by Clara Bell.

0629 Brassey, Thomas Brassey, 1st earl of Brassey, 1836–1918
Voyages and travels of Lord Brassey . . . from 1862 to 1894. Edited by Sydney Marow Eardley-Wilmot. London and New York: Longmans, Green, 1895. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1869; 1876–77 Nationality: British

Edited by S. Eardley-Wilmot from the papers of Lord Brassey, two sections include Egypt: “A visit to the Suez Canal in 1869” originally delivered as a lecture in 1870; and “A cruise around the world in 1876–77,” a work not nearly as well done as his wife’s account of their adventures aboard the Sunbeam (See Brassey, Annie).

0630 Dye, William McEntyre, 1831–1899
Moslem Egypt and Christian Abyssinia; or, Military service under the khedive, in his provinces and beyond their borders, as experienced by the American staff. New York: Atkin & Prout, Printers, 1880. 500 p.

Date of Travel: 1869–78 Nationality: American

Between 1869 and 1878, the Khedive of Egypt enlisted many American Civil War veterans in his army. Recruited by Generals Sherman and Stone (the later became the Khedive’s chief military advisor) and fresh from the War of Rebellion, they served well and won numerous decorations as they served in many positions. Dye, a colonel of the Egyptian army, gives a general account of these men as well as his own service. His descriptions include the daily life of these Americans in Egypt (“When the American officers first arrived in Egypt, they were affably received by the Khedive and his courteous son, Prince Hussein, at that time Minister of War. The glitter and show were so overwhelming that some of these officers soon became demoralized—the tutor became the scholar—and affected the indolence, the extravagance, the manners generally of the country,” p. 452), as well as the battles they took part in. A fascinating bit of history well told. Includes appendix of those who served. Illustrated with engravings.
0631 Loring, William Wing, 1818–1886

Date of Travel: 1869–78 Nationality: American

Loring, a member of the contingent of American officers serving in the Khedive’s army, writes a lively account of his time in service. Traveling throughout Egypt from Alexandria (where he was in charge of its defenses) to Abu Simbel and Ethiopia, he gives a vivid account of Egypt. The first part of the book is devoted to the history of Egypt and life in modern Egypt. The second is about his specific military adventures and duties. “The first impression of every traveler who lands in Egypt is that the country is strangely unlike any other in the world; and he who tarries long, making Egypt his home for years, as the present writer did, finds that impression strengthened with every day’s increased knowledge,” p. 3. Illustrated with engravings.
0632 Andrews, Emerson

Date of Travel: 1870     Nationality: American

Andrews, a minister, made only a brief stop in Alexandria and Cairo before going off to the Holy lands. Sees the usual sights and includes the texts of sermons given along the way. Illustrated with engravings of Biblical scenes.

0633 Antonin, archmandrite, 1817–1894
a. [Notes of a pilgrim to Sinai], Kiev, 1872.

Date of Travel: 1870     Nationality: Russian

b. Antonin visited the Holy Land, stopping in at the monasteries of the Sinai as well as Port Said and the Suez Canal, on his trip.

0634 Bost, Jean Augustin, b. 1815

Date of Travel: 1870     Nationality: Swiss

Filled with Biblical quotations and guidebook descriptions, Bost gives a basic account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and Port Said.

0635 Carlisle, Arthur Drummond
Round the world in 1870: an account of a brief tour made through
"Modern Egypt seems to have no respect for, and no desire to imitate, its mighty ancestor: it is a slatternly decadent, reckless of the family name, and kicking about its heirlooms as if they were as worthless as itself," p. 18. Not really liking Egypt, Carlisle visited mostly just Alexandria and the Suez area before continuing on with his around-the-world trip.

A good, though short account of Alexandria, Cairo and Port Said by a South American. First appeared in El Porvenir.

0637 Ebers, Georg Moritz, 1837–1898
Durch Gosen zum Sinai Aus dem Wanderbuche und der Bibliothek.

Ebers visited Alexandria, Cairo and the Suez area before going on to the Sinai. Most of this account is devoted to the sights he saw there. See also his other trips. Illustrated with engravings and maps.

0638 Knipe, H. M.

A brief account of Alexandria and Cairo. Illustrated by sketches by the travelers.

0639 Lacour, Raoul, 1845–1870
Date of Travel: 1870  Nationality: French

“Après le Nil, nous traversons le chemin de fer. Le chemin de fer! quand on va voir les pyramides et qu’on a la tête pleine des noms des Sekeneferke, Choufou, Menkora et autres pharaons des premières dynasties; il y à la contraste, l’antithèse que présente si souvent le terre d’Egypte et sur laquelle nous ne nous appesantirons pas.—Tant d’autres déjà l’ont fait,” p. 195. A good, well-written account of Egypt from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa. Includes a long section on the history of Egypt. Lacour traveled with Abel Giraudeau, Ambroise Giraudeau, Leon Giraudeau, Fernand de Lisle, Pierre Destombes, and Francoise Roussel. Illustrated with engravings.

0640 Newton, Richard, 1813–1887

0654 Weppner, Margaretha
The North Star and the Southern Cross: being the personal experiences, impressions, and observations of Margaretha Weppner in two years’ journey round the world. London: S. Low, Marston, Low, and Searle, 1875. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1871 Nationality: German

On an around-the-world trip, Weppner visits Alexandria, Cairo and the Suez area. While in Egypt, she is the nurse to a young mental patient, Miss Cosserat. Visits hospitals in Egypt. A strange book that includes a biography of Weppner.

0655 Zincke, Foster Barham, 1817–1893
Date of Travel: 1871  Nationality: British

"Egypt was the Japan of the Old World. While Nature had sequestered it from other cultures, she had given it within its own borders the means for satisfying all the wants felt by its inhabitants," p. 40. Traveling from Alexandria to Luxor, and visiting the Fayyum and Suez Canal, Zincke includes numerous ruminations on history and religion, both of which, along with the antiquities, are seen as an example for Britain to not be vain and fall as Egypt did.

0656 Adams, William Henry Davenport, 1828–1891

Date of Travel: 1871(?)  Nationality: British

Mostly a history book, includes the basic sights and a bit of personal description.

b. NOT SEEN. Text by Brehm and Johannes Dümichen, sketches by Carl Werner. The book covers the area from Cairo to Aswan. A basic descriptive text of all the sights, meant to accompany plates.

0658 Wallner, Franz, 1810–1876

Date of Travel: 1871–72  Nationality: German

A detailed account of Egypt from Cairo to Abu Simbel, with long accounts of each temple along the way. In letter form.
0659 Chennells, Ellen
Recollections of an Egyptian princess, by her English governess; being a record of five years' residence at the court of Ismael Pasha, khédive. Edinburgh and London: W. Blackwood and Sons, 1893. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1871-76 Nationality: British

Chennells, the English governess to the children of Ismail was able to see much of Egypt and Egyptian court life unknown to most Europeans. Visiting and traveling through most of Egypt, she sees the usual sights as well as attending court balls and other functions. An interesting and well-written book. “When first Ismael Pasha became Viceroy, and European fashions were introduced into the harem, several English, French, and Italian women were engaged to live there as parlour-maids, ironers, dressmakers, and hairdressers. The pay was high, but the terms of their contract were generally rather stringent,” p. 66. Illustrated.

0660 Cook, Thomas, 1808–1892
Letters from the sea and from foreign lands; descriptive of a tour round the world. London and New York: T. Cook and Son, 1873. 124 p.

Date of Travel: 1872 Nationality: British

NOT SEEN. CITED IN LC. On an around-the-world trip, Cook—whose name became an institution in Egypt as well as the world of travel—stopped briefly in Egypt.

0661 Maughan, William Charles, d.1914

Date of Travel: 1872 Nationality: British

An entertaining, well-written account of Alexandria, Cairo, the Nile to Aswan, and the Sinai. “It is extremely easy to fall into the lazy dolce far niente life of so many travelers, who come to Cairo to lounge away the winter months,” pp. 22–23.

0662 Skalon, D.A., 1843–1905
Date of Travel: 1872 Nationality: Russian

Skalon visited Cairo and the major sights in the area. Illustrated by E.K. Makarov.

0663 Applegate, Thomas

Date of Travel: 1872(?) Nationality: American

Originally delivered as lectures, the Rev. Thomas Applegate (known at the time for his works such as Sacred Geography and History and The Fruits of the Spirit) describes the land, history, monuments, natural history of Egypt with references to only the Bible and Herodotus. A brief section on mummification (whose origins he attributes to Joseph of the Old Testament) and Arab marriage ceremonies are interesting, if somewhat fanciful. Unclear exactly when Applegate traveled to Egypt, if in fact he made the trip.

0664 Freese, Jacob R., 1826–1885

Date of Travel: 1872(?) Nationality: American

0665 Leland, Charles Godfrey, 1824–1903

Date of Travel: 1872(?) Nationality: British

A readable, often witty, account, interspersed with history and snippets of street talk. An excellent account of travels in Egypt: “I believe I said before that there are only some twenty names in all Islam, an astonishing proportion being Mahomets and Owlies. But they have a way of varying these rations, so as to make them go as far as possible,” p. 169.

0666 Merewether, Henry Alworth, 1813–1877
By sea and by land; being a trip through Egypt, India, Ceylon, Australia, New Zealand, and America, all round the world. London: Macmillan, 1874. 343 p.

Date of Travel: 1872(?) Nationality: British

On an around-the-world trip, Merewether visits Alexandria, Cairo and the Suez area. A member of Parliament, he made only a brief visit. Illustrated with engravings.

0667 Obligado, Pastor Servado, 1841–1874

Date of Travel: 1872(?) Nationality: Argentinean

A very detailed account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez Canal.

0668 Emerson, Ralph Waldo, 1803–1882

Date of Travel: 1872–73 Nationality: American

Emerson, the American philosopher and poet, visited Egypt with friends and his daughter Ellen in December 1872/January 1873. They traveled up the Nile to Luxor.

a. "We enjoy heartily this watery journey, & have spent the last two days in the colossal temples on the two sides of the river here. Every day is clear & hot, the sky rich, the shores lined with palm groves, the birds innumerable, the ibis, the penguin, the hawk & the eagle, with vast flights of geese & ducks & flocks of little birds of sparrow size who fly in a rolling globe, whirl round & return again every minute," v.6, p. 233 (January 1873).

b. "Nothing has struck me more in the streets here than the erect carriage & walking of the Copts (I suppose them), better & nobler in figure & movement than any passenger in our cities at home," v.16, p. 284 (30 December 1872).
0669 Anonymous

Date of Travel: 1873          Nationality: French

The account by an anonymous member of a group of Frenchmen who visited Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said before going on to the Holy Land. Illustrated with engravings.

0670 Bliss, Orville Justus, 1848–1875

Date of Travel: 1873          Nationality: American

A brief account of Cairo with a description of the Pyramids. First appeared as letters in the Chicago Inter-Ocean under the signature of “Pendennis.”

0671 Knox, Thomas W., 1835–1896

Date of Travel: 1873          Nationality: American

An excellent, detailed account of Port Said, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan. Filled with jokes. “The beast par excellence of Egypt is the donkey; he ought to have a place on the national coat-of-arms, as much so as the llama has on that of Peru,” p. 490. Illustrated with engravings. Knox was a writer of boys’ tales including Boy travellers in the Far East, Part 4 (New York, 1883).

0672 Peebles, James Martin, 1822–1922

Date of Travel: 1873          Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Peebles, a spiritualist, visits Alexandria, Cairo and the Suez area. On top of the Great Pyramid he takes part in a seance (and includes a transcription of the “spirit’s” communication). An interesting account, full of nineteenth-century spiritualism theories. First appeared as letters in the Banner of Light.

0673 Smith, George Albert, 1817–1875, et alia
Correspondence of Palestine tourists; comprising a series of letters

A brief account of Egypt as Warren traveled on to the Holy Land.
He gives only a short account of Alexandria. Illustrated with engravings.
0677 Bartlett, Samuel Colcord, 1817–1898

Date of Travel: 1873–74 Nationality: American

President of Dartmouth College and a professor of Theology, Bartlett went to Egypt and Palestine to trace the route of the Exodus. Arriving in Alexandria in December of 1873, his plan was to set out “primarily to see the historic scenes of the old Covenant People: the country of their bondage, the track of their exodus, the mount of their law-giving, the desert of their wanderings, and the land of their hope and promise,” p. 13. In addition to discussing possible routes for the Exodus through the desert, he documents contacts between the Israelites and Egyptians, and a thorough natural history of Egypt as well as a political history from the pharaohs to the present. A fascinating book, very “scientific” and learned. Travelled with Jacob Chamberlain, E.M. Williams, and Edwin J. Bartlett. Illustrations and maps.

0678 Edwards, Amelia Ann Blanford, 1831–1892

Date of Travel: 1873–74 Nationality: British

a. “The truth is, however, that the mere sight-seeing of the Nile demands some little reading and organizing, if only to be enjoyed. We cannot all be profoundly learned; but we can at least do our best to understand what we see—to get rid of obstacles—to put the right thing in the right place,” p. 106. This notion of setting Egypt straight for the average tourist as well as the scholar pervades Edwards' book. Seeing numerous reprints (and reprinted as recently as 1983), A thousand miles up the Nile was one of the most popular and influential travel books on Egypt. Edwards, who began her career as a popular novelist, became so fascinated during her trip to Egypt that she dedicated her life to Egyptology. Throughout A thousand miles, she calls for the preservation of the antiquities and proper excavation. She later founded the Egypt Exploration Fund (1882) and a chair of Egyptology at the University College, London. Traveling the entire length of Egypt, almost every anecdote and descriptive passage is worth quoting.
Illustrated with engravings by G. Pearson after drawings made by Edwards on the spot.

b. The substance of Edwards' lectures on Egypt delivered in America in 1890. Primarily an account of the excavations and explorations being done on behalf of the Egypt Exploration Fund, they are not nearly as interesting as A thousand miles up the Nile. Edwards died soon after her lecture tour. Illustrated with photographs.

0679 Rohlfs, Freidrich Gerhard, 1831–1896

Date of Travel: 1873–74   Nationality: German

A detailed account of a scientific expedition to Egypt. Traveling from Alexandria to Luxor and into the desert, Rohlfs was accompanied by P. Ascherson, W. Jordan, K. Zittel. Rohlfs visited before in 1869. Illustrated with photographs by Ph. Remelé.

0680 Hoppin, Augustus, 1828–1896

Date of Travel: 1873–74(?)   Nationality: American

Primarily the author's sketches with a small bit of narrative. Interesting, but not great drawings. Traveled from Alexandria to Aswan.

0681 Warren, Edward, 1828–1893

A doctor's experiences in three continents. Baltimore: Cushings and Bailey, 1885. 613 p.

Date of Travel: 1873–75   Nationality: American

Warren, a doctor who had already led an adventurous life in the America as a Confederate medical officer during the Civil War and as a witness in a notorious trial in Baltimore, decided Egypt would be the perfect change of scenery. Contacting General Sherman about the possibilities of joining the other Union and Confederate soldiers under the Khedive, Warren was commissioned as a colonel and spent nearly three years in Egypt, leaving for health reasons
(he contracted ophthalmia)—but not before having a number of adventures. Warren traveled with his wife. "He [Col. Walter Jenifer] gave me such a glowing account of the country [Egypt], and of the manner in which the American officers had been treated there, that I became immediately imbued with the desire to follow his example and enter the service of the Khedive," p. 396. His autobiography consists of letters to John Morris, M.D. Illustrated with engravings.

0682 Vanderslice, John, 1801–

Date of Travel: 1873 & 1875 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Vanderslice visits Alexandria, Cairo and the Suez area. This is an account of two separate trips taken in 1873 and 1875.

0683 Augé-de Lassus, Lucien, 1846–1914

Date of Travel: 1874 Nationality: French

Visiting the remains of the Seven Wonders of the World, Augé-de Lassus stops in Egypt to see the Lighthouse of Alexandria and the Pyramids. Describing the sights and illustrating them with quotations from various sources, it makes for interesting reading. Illustrated with engravings by Sidney Barclay.

0684 Courtney, Henry Nicholas, 1849–

Date of Travel: 1874 Nationality: British

In his brief tour of Upper Egypt, Courtney visited Alexandria, Cairo, Heliopolis, Saqqara, Memphis, Suez, and Ismailia. At Heliopolis he visited the obelisk where Plato was said to have sat and in Cairo the tree of the Holy Family: "On our drive home we made a detour, so as to visit a fine old fig tree, which, tradition has it, is one beneath whose boughs the Holy Family found shelter. It is a fine specimen of the sycamore fig, but this can scarcely be the original tree," p. 14.
0685 Fogg, William Perry, 1826–

Date of Travel: 1874 Nationality: American

"Before I had been long in Cairo, I deemed that it would be a matter of economy as well as comfort to invest in a fez. My friends at home will not understand that to wear a fez in the East, does not necessarily make one a Turk; but it will save by about one-half what you have to pay in the bazaars," p. 46. Entertaining, if brief, account of Fogg’s trip to Alexandria, Cairo, the Red Sea and Port Said before continuing on through the East. Includes an interesting introduction by Bayard Taylor (q.v.). Illustrated with engravings from photographs.

0686 Hamilton, Charles F.A.S.L.

Date of Travel: 1874 Nationality: British

With only short stops in the ports of Alexandria, Port Said, and Suez, Hamilton gives only a brief account of each of these places. Illustrated.

0687 Leighton, William Henry, 1826–1883

Date of Travel: 1874 Nationality: British

A brief description of Egypt (Port Said, Cairo and Alexandria) by a member of a Thomas Cook and Son's tour. Illustrated with photographs.

0688 Ridgaway, Henry Bascom, 1830–1895
Date of Travel: 1874  Nationality: American

Traveling in a large group, Ridgaway gives a basic and brief account of Cairo and the Suez area before going on to the Sinai and Holy Land. Illustrated with engravings.

0689 Taylor, Bayard, 1825–1878

Date of Travel: 1874  Nationality: American

First visiting Egypt in 1851 (q.v.), Taylor returns nearly a quarter of a century later to see how things have changed. A good account, full of reminiscences of his earlier trip, including meeting up with his previous guide, Achmet. Travels through Alexandria, Cairo and the Fayyum before returning to Alexandria to go on to Iceland. "No!—you might pack billiard-rooms, lager-beer saloons, cafés chantants, stock-brokers’ offices, and Free-Trade Leagues, around the pyramids, hold political meetings with a speaker standing on the Sphinx’s head, or make the adytum of the old temple below resound with revival hymns, and you could not diminish the impression which these wonderful monuments exact and compel you to feel,” p. 50.

0690 Manning, Samuel, 1822–1881

Date of Travel: 1874  Nationality: British

A basic account of the trip from Alexandria to Abu Simbel with a side trip to the Sinai. With many references to previous travelers and Biblical quotations, this book serves primarily to present its numerous illustrations engraved by the author. Includes a description of the Suez Canal, but is mostly a 19th century “coffee table” book. Also appeared under the title Egypt illustrated with pen and pencil (1891).

0693 Appleton, Thomas Gold, 1812–1884

Date of Travel: 1874–75       Nationality: American

An effusive account of Appleton’s trip up the Nile from Cairo to Wadi Halfa. Includes some good descriptions and colorful prose: “The first intercourse with a camel had long been looked forward to and was very interesting. The camel is a creature unique in its merits and defects, and I should suppose Mr. Darwin would consider it a favorite proof of natural selection and the struggle for life,” p. 192–93. Includes engraving by Eugene Benson and poems on Egypt by the author.

0694 Warner, Charles Dudley, 1829–1900

Date of Travel: 1874–75       Nationality: American

“I suppose that volumes enough have been written about Egypt to cover every foot of its arable soil if they were spread out, or to dam the Nile if they were dumped into it.” p. 18. Leaving Italy to steam to Alexandria, Warner (a friend of Samuel Clemens and popular 19th century writer) gives a good description of his fellow travelers. After training to Cairo, he stays at the Shepheard’s Hotel. Engaging William Prime’s (q.v.) dragoman, he visits the bazaars, mosques, and Pyramids before sailing in the dahabeeya Rip Van Winkle up the Nile. Visiting the usual sights, “we have come to have a singular contempt for anything so modern as the work of the Greeks or Romans.” Like other travelers, he mocks the cataracts with a Niagara comparison, continuing south past Philae and the Nubian temples. Warner makes a good attempt to visit with the people of Egypt, spending time at a mission school in Asyut and has an honest liking of the fellaheen and dislike for the "Europeanization" of the city dwellers in Cairo. Leaves Egypt via rail through Ismailia to Syria. Also published under the title
Mummies and Moslems.

0695 Miéville, Walter Frederick, 1855–
Under queen and khedive; the autobiography of an Anglo-Egyptian

Date of Travel: 1874–97 Nationality: British

Beginning his career as a clerk in the British consul office in Alexandria, Miéville retired as the President of the Quarantine Board. Rising steadily, he describes his duties in various offices, and ends with his knighthood in 1898. "It must not be thought that during those years of probation it was 'All work and no play.' On the contrary, I think that by reason of my work being hard I enjoyed play as much, if not more, than most men," p. 35.

0696 Field, Henry Martyn, 1822–1907
From Egypt to Japan. New York: Scribner's, 1877. 424 p. 3d ed.
"This volume is . . . the second part of a journey round the world of which the first part was published a year ago [1877] with the title
From the lakes of Killarney to the Golden Horn."

Date of Travel: 1875 Nationality: American

Field includes a short section on Egypt in his book, traveling from Alexandria to Cairo, up the Nile to Luxor, and across to the Suez Canal and Red Sea. A good account with comments on Islam and Mohammed Ali. Also mentions the American Army officers in Egypt and their meeting at the New Hotel. Field visited again in 1882.

Date of Travel: 1875  Nationality: Austrian

a. A brief account of Alexandria and Cairo before Junker continues on an expedition into the Sudan. Also includes a side trip to the Siwa Oasis. Very detailed with scientific references. Illustrated with engravings by Richard Buchta.

b. English translation by H.A. Keane has fewer illustrations.

0698 Russell, William Howard, 1820–1907
The Prince of Wales' tour in India; with some account of the visits of His Royal Highness to the courts of Greece, Egypt, Spain and Portugal. With illustrations by Sydney P. Hall. London: S. Low, Marston, Searle & Rivington, 1877. 617 p.

Date of Travel: 1875  Nationality: British

"First the Great Pyramid was illuminated by rows of blue lights along the layers of the masonry; next, flights of rockets were let off from the sides and summit, and from the base, many of which flew high above it, and let fall a rain of stars; then came red and blue lights, then pans of saltpetre at the angles of the Pyramid were ignited and threw up a peculiar bluish flame upon the faces of the Arabs who superintended the feux d'artifice, causing the most extraordinary contrasts," p. 64. Visiting Port Said, Ismailia, Cairo, the Suez Canal and the Sinai, the Prince and Princess of Wales were treated to spectacles such as described by Russell above all along their route. A fascinating account. Illustrated with engravings by Sydney P. Hall. See 1869 for an earlier trip of the Prince and Princess of Wales' to Egypt.

A missionary for the Association of Reformed Presbyterians, Giffen’s story is told by her brother. A good account of missionary life in Alexandria and Cairo.

Date of Travel: 1876 Nationality: American/British

Brief, basic account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez area.

0704 Curtis, Benjamin Robbins, 1855–1891
Date of Travel: 1876 Nationality: American

“At diner at Shepheard’s one may see a most varied and cosmopolitan gathering. The English are largely in the majority, but close by a lord or duke a ‘free American citizen’ is often located, while Frenchmen, Italians, and Germans are scattered in various directions,” p. 299. Curtis makes a brief stop in Alexandria, Cairo, and Suez as part of his around-the-world trip. In diary style entries. Illustrated with photographs.

0705 Francis, Harriet Elizabeth (Tucker), 1828–1889

Date of Travel: 1876 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Francis and her husband, John M. Francis, make a brief visit to Alexandria and Cairo, visiting the usual sights. An entertaining account of Cairo. Illustrated with photographs.

0706 Gray, John Henry, 1828–1890

Date of Travel: 1876 Nationality: British

Basic account with lots of history. Visited Alexandria, Cairo, Suez on an Egyptian stop of an around-the-world trip.

0707 Hanly, Henry

Date of Travel: 1876 Nationality: French

Most of this account is concerned with Tunisia. The Egyptian part of his account takes in Alexandria and Cairo. Includes a bit of history, things to do and the like. Not much personal. Author was living in Turkey at the time of authorship.

0708 Lane, L. C. Mrs.
Date of Travel: 1876  Nationality: American

After a trip through Europe, Mrs. Lane stopped off in Cairo. Staying at the Hotel Abbat, she visited the Pyramids, "Mary's Well," shopped in the bazaars and was quite impressed with the Citadel and mosques. Her letters are a pleasant, simple account of an unadventurous trip to a small corner of Egypt.

0709 Stoddard, Charles Warner, 1843–1909

Date of Travel: 1876  Nationality: American

Colorfully written account of the usual sights from Alexandria to Aswan. Interspersed with self-penned poems and fanciful descriptions: "Dove-eyed and dimpled, with supple joints that yield to every attitude, the ghazeeeyeh is trained from her cradle in all the arts of seduction. She has nothing to lose, for she is one of the tribes already lost. If she marries, her husband is her slave; he thrums on the ood or plays on the one-stringed rahab, and sees his beloved making enormous eyes at the young bloods who ogle her impudently," p. 184.

0716 Walworth, Ellen Hardin, 1858–1922
An old world, as seen through young eyes, or, Travels around the world. New York and Montreal: D. & J. Sadlier, 1877. 316 p.
Date of Travel: 1876(?)  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Walworth writes a chatty, brief account of her travels in Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan. Travelled with her aunt and uncle, this account first appeared as letters in the Albany Sunday Press. Illustrated with engravings.

0717 Loftie, William John, 1839–1911
_A ride in Egypt, from Sioot to Luxor in 1879: with notes on the present state and ancient history of the Nile Valley, and some account of the various ways of making the voyage out and home._ London and New York: Macmillan, 1886. 399 p.

Date of Travel: 1876–79  Nationality: British

Visiting Egypt each winter for three years, Loftie writes an account verging on the guidebook-ish. Though an excellent factual narrative, it lacks in personality and his manner of being in the know can be off-putting, though there are some moments of humor: “My sentiments received a rude shock another day. I remarked to an American friend that the Sphinx grew on me. ‘Well,’ he replied, mockingly, ‘I’m glad it doesn’t grow on me. It’s too heavy,’” p. 169. Includes an appendix of letters written by the author to the _London Times_ on the famine in Egypt and is illustrated with photographs and drawings.

0718 Caillard, Mabel

Date of Travel: 1876–1935  Nationality: British

Moving to Egypt at age five with her parents (her father was in the Post Office), Caillard lived through many interesting events in Egypt’s history, tells a few good stories, meets Thomas Cook, but doesn’t write a great book. Illustrated with photograph of the author. “In Egypt one had a house; one’s home was forever England,” p. 63.

0719 Allsopp, G. H.
1870-1879

Date of Travel: 1877 Nationality: British

After sailing from Southampton and through the Mediterranean, Allsopp begins his Egyptian trip in Ismailia with a trip through the fairly new (1869) Suez Canal to Suez. Finding both the food and room at the Suez Hotel “excretable,” Allsopp observes the Mecca pilgrimage caravan leaving Suez and then leaves himself, traveling by land to Cairo and Shepheard’s Hotel. Traveling with “Murray’s Guide” in hand, Allsopp sees the sights of Cairo and hires the dahabeeya Hope. Sailing up the Nile as far as Philae, Allsopp sees the usual sights and comments throughout with a John Bull voice. At times, however, he slips into a genuine tone of sympathy for the common Egyptian. Of particular interest is Allsopp’s daily log from the Hope which he appends to his narrative. From the log, (if Allsopp’s fellow passengers were typical) one can see that the average traveler on the Nile spent as much time shooting snipe, pigeons, and ducks as visiting antiquities.

0720 Brassey, Annie (Allnutt), 1839–1887
A voyage in the ‘Sunbeam’; our home on the ocean for eleven months. London, 1878. 504 p.

Date of Travel: 1877 Nationality: British

Brassey, who would turn her trips in the Sunbeam into a cottage industry, took an around-the-world trip in 1876–77 with her husband, Thomas Brassey and their children. After going through the Suez Canal, they make a trip to Cairo to see the Pyramids and the Sphinx, and also Alexandria. “For the capitalist or resident, Cairo may be improved, but for the traveler, the artist, the lover of the picturesque, the quaint, and the beautiful, the place is ruined,” p. 469. Illustrated with engravings by G. Powers after drawings by A. Y. Bingham. Published in the United States as Around the world in the Sunbeam (New York, 1878).

0721 Burt, George
Notes of a three months’ trip to Egypt, Greece, Constantinople, and the eastern shores of the Mediterranean Sea, etc., etc. London: Printed by M. Singer & Co., 1878. 47 p.

Date of Travel: 1877 Nationality: British

Burt, the Sheriff of London and Middlesex took a Mediterranean cruise at age 61, stopping off in Port Said, Suez, Cairo, and Alexandria. A basic account. “We went to see and hear the Dancing and Howling Dervishes. Oh! the stupidity and madness of such worship! Still, are there not some in our own country who go a long way towards such folly?” p. 20.

0722 Hendrix, Eugene Russell, 1847–1927

Date of Travel: 1877 Nationality: American

“Cairo proved to be a larger, busier, and cleaner city, and having fewer dogs, than I expected. The dogs have certainly improved in appearance and lessened in numbers, thus illustrating ‘the survival of the fittest,’ ” p. 323. A minister, Hendrix sees the usual sights in Suez, Port Said, Cairo, and Alexandria as he visits Egypt on an around-the-world trip. First appeared as letters in the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

0723 Marvin, Enoch Mather, 1823–1877

Date of Travel: 1877 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Marvin visits Suez and Cairo. A Protestant Bishop traveling on behalf of the Missionary Society, Marvin spent time visiting the missions in Cairo as well as the other sights. A detailed, interesting account. “In Egypt everything is decidedly Frenchy,” p. 300. First appeared as letters in the Christian Advocate. Illustrated with engravings.

0724 Schaff, Philip, 1819–1893

Date of Travel: 1877 Nationality: American

Feeling that every minister should travel to Egypt and the Holy Land, Schaff sees all the sights in Alexandria, Cairo, and the Nile to Aswan. He continues on to the Sinai and then to the Holy Land. Taking all the common guidebooks, he also stops at various American missions along the way. Well-done work interspersed with some comic remarks: "By-and-by some enterprising Yankee will build an elevator or lift (or as they say in England) to the top of the pyramid, and charge a dollar a head," p. 49. Illustrated with engravings.

0725 Potter, Henry Codman, 1834–1908

Date of Travel: 1877(?) Nationality: British

"It is an ignominious approach to Cairo to find your way into it by means of an English railway carriage," p. 30. An excellent, brief account of Alexandria and Cairo before Potter continues on to the Holy Land.

0726 Bridges, F. D.

Date of Travel: 1878 Nationality: British

Extracts from Bridges' journal from a trip around-the-world, a very brief account of Egypt, primarily the Pyramids. Bridges did find Egypt's antiquity to far outstrip that of Greece: "Antiquity is decidedly a relative term; or, rather Egypt extremely upsets ones ideas on the subject," p. 19. Illustrated.

0727 Farman, Elbert Eli, 1831–1911

Date of Travel: 1878 Nationality: American

Farman, the American Consul General at Cairo, gave ex-President Grant and his entourage (including Julia Grant and their son Jesse; John Russell Young; a Mr. Borie; and a Dr. Keating) a royal tour. While in Cairo, Grant visited with the Khedive, William Loring (q.v.), and Henry Stanley. After a brief stop in Alexandria, the Grants saw all the sights of Cairo (including the Pyramids which the General declined to climb) before sailing up the Nile to Luxor, all along which he was hailed by the natives as the "King of America." Even with all this attention, however, Grant seemed a bit grouchy: "On another occasion, just after we had started out, the General on a horse and Mrs. Grant and myself on donkeys, Mrs. Grant, looking back and not seeing her son asked, ‘Where is Jesse?’ The General quickly replied, ‘If we wait for stragglers, we shall never get there,’ ” pp. 72-73. In between his narrative, Farman fills in the gaps with the basic travel facts on Egypt, taking away from his real story. The Grants stopped briefly again in Alexandria in January, 1879 on the return leg of their around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs of the Grants in pith helmets around Egypt.

0728 Grant, Jesse Root, 1858–1934

Date of Travel: 1878  Nationality: American

Jesse, who accompanied his mother and father (Ulysses and Julia Grant) on the General’s famous around-the-world trip, writes a brief, but entertaining account of the stop in Egypt: “All of the older American officers in the Khedive’s army proved to be old friends. General Loring and most of the others had fought on the side of the Confederacy, but their greeting of father showed only genuine friendship and admiration,” p. 267. Illustrated with photographs.

0729 Hicks, William H.
General Grant’s tour around the world: with a sketch of his life. Chicago: Rand, McNally, 1879. 288 p.

Date of Travel: 1878  Nationality: American

A newspaperman’s account of Grant’s tour. Very little about Grant’s thoughts or feelings. Reportorial. Illustrated with engravings.

0730 Keating, John M.

Date of Travel: 1878  Nationality: American

Keating, a physician to a member of Grant’s party, gives only a brief account of the General’s stop in Egypt, concentrating instead on India and China. First appeared in the Philadelphia Evening Telegram. Illustrated with engravings.

0731 Ludwig, Salvator, Archduke of Austria, 1812–1915

Date of Travel: 1878
Nationality: Austrian

Ludwig, an Archduke of the Austro-Hungarian Empire gives a good account of the caravan route from Egypt to Syria. Most of the book is devoted to Syria. Both the English and German editions are illustrated with engravings. English edition translated by Hesse-Wargegg.

0732 McCabe, James Dabney, 1842–1883

Date of Travel: 1878
Nationality: American

Another reportorial account of Grant’s tour. Illustrated. Compiled from other sources.

0733 Moore, Joseph, Jr.

Date of Travel: 1878
Nationality: American

A good, basic account of the sights in Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, the Nile to Aswan, and Port Said. Includes a lengthy portion on Egyptian history. First appeared in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

0734 Packard, J. F.

Grant’s tour around the world; with incidents of his journey through England, Ireland, Scotland. Cincinnati: Forshee & McMakin, 1880. 802 p.
Date of Travel: 1878  Nationality: American

Compiled from John Russell Young’s (q.v.) letters about Grant’s tour. Not as good as the real thing.

0735 Palmer, Loomis T.
General U. S. Grant’s tour around the world, embracing his speeches, receptions, and description of his travels With a biographical sketch of his life. Chicago: W. M. Farrar, 1830. 437 p.

Date of Travel: 1878  Nationality: American

Drawn from Jesse Grant’s (q.v.) letters to the New York Herald and Chicago Inter-Ocean and John Russell Young’s (q.v.) letters to the New York Herald. Told in a narrative form. Illustrated with engravings.

0736 Young, John Russell, 1841–1899
Around the world with General Grant: a narrative of the visit of General U.S. Grant, ex-president of the United States, to various countries in Europe, Asia, and Africa, in 1877, 1878, 1879. To which are added certain conversations with General Grant on questions connected with American politics and history. New York: The American News Co., 1879. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1878  Nationality: American

Young’s (a well-known reporter/writer and later Librarian of Congress) is the best of many accounts of Grant’s tour around the world and visit to Egypt. “The General is an early or late riser, according as we have an engagement for the day. If there are ruins to be seen in the morning he is generally first on the deck with his India helmet swathed in silk, and as he never waits we are off on military time,” v.1, p. 246. Illustrated with engravings.

0737 Farley, James Lewis, 1823–1885

Date of Travel: 1878(?)  Nationality: British

Includes only a brief chapter on Egypt as a winter resort. Describes the weather and facilities of Alexandria, Luxor and Suez. “The climate of Egypt is salubrious during the greater part of the year, and in Alexandria, even the heat of summer is seldom oppressive, being tempered by a fresh northerly breeze,” pp. 3–4.

0740 Pullan, Richard Popplwell, 1825–1888

Date of Travel: 1878(?) Nationality: British

A good description of Alexandria and Cairo.

0741 Stuart, Villiers, 1827–1895

Date of Travel: 1878–79 Nationality: British

“The school master, an intelligent-looking young man, in a white turban and blue dress, was much pleased at the interest we took in his school, but our dragoman cut short our stay, whispering the single word—‘Fleas!’ We did not go, however, till the boys had sung us a hymn,” p. 227. Stuart’s account is punctuated with stories like this, but the mass of the book is basic facts and history of Egypt that makes for dull reading. His trip takes him from Port Said to Cairo, Alexandria, Luxor, and Aswan. Illustrated with colored plates and others.
0742 Beaman, Ardern George Hulme

Date of Travel: 1878–98  Nationality: British

Beaman, who served in the British consular service traveled all over the Near East and visited Egypt on a number of occasions over a twenty-year period. His account is heavy on diplomatic service goings-ons, and can be quite dull.

0743 Butcher, Edith Louisa (Floyer)

Date of Travel: 1878–1908  Nationality: British

a. "It took me some time to realise how thin a plank separated this gay foreign civilisation from the dumb misery of a half-starved people," p. 5. Butcher, who went to Egypt for health reasons, tells many fascinating stories of life in Egypt, including the events of 1882, in an overall excellent book. Her husband was a Church of England minister in Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

b. More of a guidebook. Butcher’s account of “things seen” from Alexandria to Abu Simbel. Includes photographs.

0744 Carnegie, Andrew, 1835–1919

Date of Travel: 1879  Nationality: American

a. NOT SEEN

b. Carnegie, the great industrialist/philanthropist, visited Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said as part of his around-the-world trip of 1879. Visiting the usual sights, Carnegie had some harsh words about the Khedive and his poor management of Egypt. In Alexandria, he meditates on the great Library there, a variety of institution he was to later become strongly associated with: “When in Alexandria we visited with deep interest the site of the famous Alexandrian library, in which lay stored the most precious treasures of the world. Had it escaped destruction, how many questions which have vexed scholars would never have arisen, and how much ground which it has been necessary for genius to reconquer would have come to us as our heritage!,” p. 272. An excellent short account of Egypt.

0745 Samuel, Sydney Montague, 1848–1884

Date of Travel: 1879 Nationality: British

A fascinating account of Jewish life in the nineteenth century. Samuel visited only Cairo and Port Said before continuing on to the Holy Land. Of Cairo: “It must be said that, in spite of the prevailing dirt a squalor, and the all-pervading influence of a vast variety of evil smells, the Jewish streets show a marked superiority over those inhabited by a remainder of the poorer population,” p. 4.

0746 M’Collester, Sullivan Holman, 1826–1921

Date of Travel: 1879(?) Nationality: American

“The course of civilization has been, Egypt, Greece, Rome, Modern Europe, America. Man is the heir of all ages; and step by step, his progress has been from the far East to the far West. If the sum of his fortunes rose in beauty, it promises to set in glory,” p. 331. A good, if brief account of Alexandria and Cairo, filled with metaphysical, purple prose such as that above. First edition published in Boston, 1880. M’Collester visited again in 1888. Illustrated.

0747 Arnold, Julian T. Biddulph
Palms and temples; being notes of a four months’ voyage upon the Nile. London: Tinsley Brothers, 1882. 371 p.

Date of Travel: 1879–80 Nationality: British

After a brief stop in Alexandria and a quick tour through the sights of Cairo, Arnold, his father, mother and sister go up the Nile in the
Nile Notes of a Howadji

Bedowin. A basic account of life for the well-to-do in a dahabeah. Includes an account of the wreck of the Bedowin off Gebel Tukh where all are saved, but have to continue in another boat. A well-intentioned, if not original account. Illustrated.

0748 Gorringe, Henry H., 1841–1885

Date of Travel: 1879–80 Nationality: American

An excellent account of the removal and erection of “Cleopatra’s Needle” from Alexandria to New York’s Central Park (where it was erected in 1881). Lt. Commander Henry H. Gorringe, the man who supervised the work, tells a good story in an interesting way. Includes some description of Alexandria as well as his correspondence with the American delegate to Egypt, Eli Farham (q.v.), and others. Illustrated with photographs and other illustrations.

0749 Ninet, John, 1815–95

Date of Travel: 1879–82 Nationality: Swiss

Traveling to Egypt in 1839 to work for the Egyptian government at improving the cotton crop, Ninet stayed on and eventually became involved in the nationalistic Arabi uprising of 1879—the period covered in these letters. A fascinating account of an insider during this unsettled time in Egypt. Edited with a good introduction by Anouar Louca.
1880–1889

0750 Krafft, Édouard Hugues

Date of Travel: 188–
Nationality: French

A brief stop in Alexandria and Suez is described as Krafft goes on an around-the-world trip. He traveled with Charles Kessler, and Louis Borchard. Illustrated with photographs.

0751 Montbard, Georges (Charles Auguste Loyes, 1841–1905)

Date of Travel: 188–
Nationality: French

a. Montbard, an illustrator and caricaturist, was exiled from his native France after 1871 and resided in England until his death. This book is a humorous account interspersed with serious commentary on the state of Egypt. Including some wicked portraits of his fellow travellers (“Un entendit un froissement fébrile de pages; c’étaient des colis vivants expédiés par Cook et Cie, ‘nationalités diverses, destination du Caire, ports payés assurés en cas d’accidents,’ feuille tant leurs guides pour y trouver la note descriptive qui, légèrement mutilée, et augmentée de leurs impressions personnelles, fut inscrite avec recueillement, d’un air pensif, sur les notes-books,” p. 28), Montbard travels only in Alexandria and the Cairo area.

0752 Bainbridge, Lucy S. (Lucy Seaman), 1842–
Round the world letters: five hundred and forty-two pages of charming pen pictures by the way, a graphic portrayal of scenes, incidents and adventures of a two years' tour of the world; beautifully illustrated with fine full page engravings. New York: C.R. Blackall, 1882. 542 p.

Date of Travel: 1880   Nationality: American

On an around-the-world tour, Bainbridge finds Cairo much improved since her previous visit in 1867. Stops only in Alexandria and Cairo. “A minute description of the four hundred mosques of Cairo could be made to fill a volume, but when done I, for one, should have to be made to read it,” p. 338. Illustrated.

0753 Charmes, Gabriel, 1850–1886

Date of Travel: 1880   Nationality: French

a. “Lorsqu’on quitte le Caire après un séjour de plusieurs mois, on éprouve une impression de profonde tristesse,” p. 355. An excellent, detailed account of Cairo; Charmes also includes Alexandria, Ismailia, and Port Said in his account.

b. NOT SEEN

0754 Davis, William Potter, 1846–1917

Date of Travel: 1880   Nationality: American

A Methodist minister, Davis visited Alexandria and Cairo before continuing his trip to the Holy Land. His text, which includes both a narrative written later interspersed with his letters is interesting since in his narrative he praises Egypt, but in the letters he cannot wait to leave: “We were there long enough to see the chief objects of interest, and that was quite long enough,” p. 109. Illustrated with photographs.
0755 Middleton, William C.
A collection of letters written home during a tour to and from Egypt, up the Nile to First cataract. London: Printed for private circulation by W. Clowes and Sons, Limited, 1883. 199 p.

Date of Travel: 1880  Nationality: British

In a staccato, journal/letter-style Middleton describes his journey from Alexandria to Luxor. Sailing up the Nile in the Behera, he gives a basic account of the sights ("Our chief annoyance here is the howling of the dogs, always a large colony at these Arab places, making a hideous noise. They shoot about half-a-dozen every night near the hotel just as a precaution, but as nobody owns them, nobody's toes are trodden on," pp. 88–89).

0761 Wilbour, Charles Edwin, 1833–1896

Date of Travel: 1880–91  Nationality: American

Wilbour, an amateur Egyptologist whose collections later founded the great collection of Egyptian antiquities in the Brooklyn Museum, traveled throughout Egypt on numerous expeditions for over a decade. Meeting with famous personages from Egyptology (Masparo, Brugsch), he gives an intimate account of life in Egypt for the archaeologist, told in letters to his family in the United States. Includes the stories of his adventures in buying the antiquities as well as other going-ons of the men and women who uncovered Egypt’s past in the late nineteenth century as well as the others who came just to visit: “I have been to the hotel where they are preparing to receive the real sovereign of Egypt, Lord Dufferin. He is expected at seven to-night and the hotel entrance will be brilliant with colored lanterns. Mustapha has a line of palm branches planted and he can use the same framework he had for the little Prince-of-Wales-boys last year” (21 March 1883), p. 236.

0762 Petrie, William Matthew Flinders, 1853–1942

Date of Travel: 1880–1926 Nationality: British

One of the great Egyptian archaeologists, early member of the Egyptian Exploration Society, and professor of Egyptology at University of London, Petrie helped define modern Egyptology.

a. Includes a biography. Excellent account of the great archaeologist’s life in Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

b. A scholarly approach to the work Petrie was doing in Egypt in the years 1881–91.

Date of Travel: 1880–? Nationality: British

Going to Egypt as the tutor to the sons of the Khedive, Butler saw all the usual sights from the unusual angle of a member of the Egyptian court. Butler includes—or so he claims—transcriptions of his conversations with the Khedive in which Butler seems to have been an important factor in the foreign policy of Egypt. “But my time in Cairo was drawing to a close.... The Khedive’s farewell to me was most touching in its heartfelt kindness: and to me it was a real sorrow to part from him and from the little princes. Like all who have ever been in the personal service of the Khedive, I retain for him a feeling of loyal devotion, and I have no patience with the ignorant malice of those in England who slander him,” p. 297. Illustrated with photographs.

Date of Travel: 1881  Nationality: American/Hawaiian

Armstrong, a member of King Kalakaua's—the last king of Hawaii—entourage, visited Egypt on the King's around-the-world tour. Traveling in great comfort with a large retinue, they met with royalty, and were greeted by the Khedive and General Charles F. Stone (the American officer in charge of the Khedive's army). "The large frame of the King, with his clothing, so covered his donkey that its identity was lost; the King's legs nearly touched the ground; it appeared at a short distance as if a new and queer animal, more of man than beast, was moving about, supplied with two heads, six legs, and a tail," p. 182-83. A truth seeker around the world A series of letters written while making a tour of the globe. New York: D. M. Bennett, 1882. 4 v.

Date of Travel: 1881  Nationality: American

A very detailed account of Bennett's trip around-the-world. A Free Thinker, Bennett was sent on this trip by a subscription by other Free Thinkers. This is a collection of letters about his adventures that he wrote to The Truth Seeker. It includes a history of Egypt and a description of his visits to Cairo, Luxor and the temples in-between. "There are nearly five hundred mosques in Cairo, and I am thankful beyond expression that I am not compelled to visit all of them, for I am almost sure I would rather drown in the Jordan," p. 495.

0772 Oliphant, Laurence, 1829–1888

Date of Travel: 1881. Nationality: British

First visiting Egypt in 1841, Oliphant visited seven more times before his trip in 1881. This account is an attempt to popularize a few sights in Cairo and the Fayyum, describing little else. “We could not leave the Fayoum without wondering at the neglect of the tourist who has done Thebes, and Luxor, and the Second Cataract, and in looking for more worlds to conquer—of a region with so many attractions, and so accessible. The sportsman, the artist, and the archeologist will all find their tastes gratified in this charming oasis,” p. 103. Originally published in Blackwood’s Magazine. Illustrated.

0781 Goodall, Walter Ralph
Warm corners in Egypt, by one who was in them. London: Remington, 1886. 276 p.

Date of Travel: 1881–82 Nationality: British

The “warm corners” are “tight spots” and not the tombs in the Valley of the Kings in August. Goodall, in Her Majesty’s service, got into and out of “warm corners” in Alexandria, Cairo, the Fayyum during the troubles of 1881–82. “During my sojourn in Egypt it was my destiny to see the grave close over the calm faces of my, many friends, both Moslem and Christian, whose names I shall cherish as long as I live,” p. 255.

Date of Travel: 1881–82 Nationality: British

A Scotchman who joined the Black Watch regiment in 1881, was immediately sent to Egypt. Describing the events of 1882–83 when a much more well-known (General) Gordon was in so much trouble in the Sudan, with great detail and vigor from a common soldier's viewpoint, Gordon writes a good book. Though he includes the necessary battle scenes, there is much pure description: "In Egypt, it will be remembered, the interval between day and night is so brief that there is scarcely any dawn or twilight," p. 51. Illustrated with photographs.

0783 Meyer, Hans, 1858–

Date of Travel: 1881–82 Nationality: German

On an around-the-world trip, Meyer visited Suez, Cairo, the Nile to Aswan, and the Red Sea. A detailed account of the basic sights. Illustrated.

0784 Wolf, Simon, 1836–1923

Date of Travel: 1881–82 Nationality: American

Wolf, the American consul in Egypt during the time of the Arabi Revolt, writes an excellent and entertaining account of his time there. Being Jewish provided him with a famous bon mot: "Prior to one of the contemplated uprisings by the Egyptians, while seated one day on the veranda of the Shepherd [sic] Hotel, talking with General Stone, and drinking a cup of coffee, the acting Consul-General of England came up to me in great excitement and said, 'My dear colleague, there is going to be an uprising among the natives tonight and they are going to slaughter all the Christians and Europeans.' I drink my coffee very complacently, and receiving no response from me, he reiterated his statement, and I replied, 'How does that concern me; I am neither a European nor a Christian,' " pp. 14–15. Illustrated with photographs.

0785 Masparo, Gaston Camille Charles, 1846–1916

a. Masparo, the great archaeologist wrote a number of popular works on Egypt as well as countless scientific treatises on Egyptology. This account is full of descriptions of the antiquities and people he saw during his time in Egypt. For modern tastes, however, his account can sometimes be a bit boring; he is able to pull out an interesting anecdote now and then as in “Les Pharoans éclairés a la luminièr-électrique” (chapter 17) where he describes bringing in electric lights to the tombs in the Valley of the Kings to keep out the tourists’ torches and magnesium flashes. Reprinted from a collection of articles that appeared in Le Temps, La Revue d’Orient and Le Grande revue.

b. The English edition is illustrated with photographs.

0786 Gayet, Albert Jean, 1856–1916

Date of Travel: 1881–1916 Nationality: French
Visiting out of the way places in Egypt, Gayet, an archaeologist, sees such sights as convents and monasteries not usually seen by tourists. Unfortunately, they are not visited for a reason, they are a bit dull.

0787 Boll, Joseph A.

Date of Travel: 1882 Nationality: American
First appearing in the Gettysburg Compiler, Boll has written a good account of Egypt in the genre of “letters to the home paper.” Visits Alexandria, Cairo and Luxor. Includes much on the history of Egypt.

0788 Field, Henry Martyn, 1822–1907

Date of Travel: 1882 Nationality: American
A good description of Cairo in 1882 and the desert trip to the Sinai. Field also visited Alexandria. Field had visited before in 1875.
0789 Harriman, Walter, 1817–1884

Date of Travel: 1882  Nationality: American

A brief account (mostly of the Pyramids), of Harriman’s trip to Alexandria, Cairo, and Suez, before continuing on to the Holy Land. Traveled with William D. Chandler.

0797 Poole, Reginald Stuart, 1832–1895

Date of Travel: 1882(?)  Nationality: British

Poole, the son of Sophia Poole (q.v.) and nephew of Edward William Lane (q.v.), spent many years in Egypt as a boy and returned regularly. This account covers a period of around 1882. A basic description of the Egyptian cities mentioned in the Bible, including Memphis, On, Sin, Pithom, Goshen, Alexandria and a few others. Poole gives the Biblical account, and then a present description of the city or sight. Modern scholarship will probably find some of Poole’s assumptions dubious, but the book gives fascinating insight into the nineteenth century’s outlook on archaeology. Poole was also the Keeper of Coins at the British Museum.

0801 H., William
Letters from Egypt and the Soudan. Manchester, Eng., 1891.

Date of Travel: 1882–85
Nationality: British

A collection of letters written to his father by a member of the British forces in Egypt and the Sudan. A bit jingoistic, some appeared in British newspapers. “The natives of Cairo who have hitherto drawn their impressions of the average Englishman from Cook’s tourists and the dolce par niente gentlemen who lounge up the Nile, must be rather astonished at the swarms of bronzed and travel-stained warriors who are now crowding their streets,” p. 16 (17 September 1882).

0802 Salisbury, George Robert
Date of Travel: 1882–85 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world cruise, the US Warship Juanita visited Egypt. Parts 4 and 5 cover Egypt and the Suez Canal area.

0803 Haggard, Andrew Charles Parker, 1854–1923

Date of Travel: 1882–87 Nationality: British

A lieutenant-colonel, Haggard gives the officer’s point of view of Gordon’s rescue in 1882–83. Filled with army talk and military matters, Haggard’s is often a dull book. “It was indeed very gratifying to us English officers, who had been serving for three years or so with Egyptian troops, during which time we had been so accustomed to hear them continually abused as scoundrels of the deepest dye, that our men had at last been able to obtain from an English General of so high a character as General Stephenson the recognition that they were indeed well worthy of the name soldiers,” p. 385.

0804 Ballou, Maturin Murray, 1820–1895
_a._ _Due west; or, Round the world in ten months_. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1884. 387 p.

Date of Travel: 1883 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Ballou makes a stop of a week in Cairo. The usual sights, but with some interesting observations: “There is no genius evinced in the design or execution of the pyramids. Neither art, taste, nor religion are in any way subserved by these unequaled follies. Nothing could be ruder: there is no architectural excellence exhibited in them; they are merely enormous piles of stone,” pp. 265–66 (b). NOTE: _Footprints of Travel_ is essentially the same text as _Due West_, with engravings added.

Date of Travel: 1883  Nationality: American

Rector of Trinity Church of Oshkosh, Greenwood, coming to Egypt from the Holy Land, makes a brief stop in Port Said, Cairo and Alexandria. Basic account.

0807 Hull, Edward, 1829-1917

Date of Travel: 1883  Nationality: British

“Next in interest to the Pyramids we may place the Museum of Antiquities at Cairo, a collection of surpassing interest and variety, illustrative of ancient Egyptian art, collected mainly through the instrumentality of Mariette Bey,” p. 23. A good account of Egypt. Mostly concerned with the Sinai, but some on Egypt proper. Hull, working for the Palestine Exploration Fund, visited Port Said, Alexandria, and Cairo in addition to the Sinai.

0808 Sartorius, Ernestine

Date of Travel: 1883  Nationality: British

Traveling with her step-daughter to visit her husband stationed in Egypt and thence on to the Sudan, Sartorius gives a brief account of Suez and Cairo. Illustrated with plates. Mostly concerned with the Sudan.

0815 Burt, John Mowlem, 1845–1918

Date of Travel: 1883–84 Nationality: British

Very matter-of-fact diary account filled with daily facts such as temperatures and travel times. Burt carefully measured his cabin on the dahabea and includes this along with numerous other mundane facts. He was very interested in measuring the antiquities also. While shopping in Aswan, he “bought a Soudan ebony club, some short grey ostrich feathers, a Nubian matron’s entire costume which, when rolled up, looks like a gigantic shining brush, a courbash or riding or hiding whip made of rhinoceros hide, and some shells for necklaces,” p. 54.

0816 Kelly, Robert Talbot, 1861–1934

Date of Travel: 1883–1902(?) Nationality: British

a. An illustrator for Century Magazine among others, Kelly describes, through both words and several reproductions of his own paintings, the entire length of Egypt. A compilation of experiences from several trips by Kelly, this is an entertaining book as he picks out scenes of local color as well as the obligatory antiquities. Includes a final chapter on the conditions of the people of Egypt.

b. A less detailed and interesting book than Kelly’s earlier effort. Not a repetition of the earlier work, but it is unclear if it is describing another trip. Illustrated with paintings.
0817 Cowderoy, Benjamin
Notes of a holiday tour round the world in 1883–4. Melbourne: Mason, Firth & M'Cutcheon, Printers, 1884. 114 p.

Date of Travel: 1884 Nationality: Australian

A short description of Alexandria and Suez as Cowderoy stops in Egypt on an around-the-world trip. Mentions the troubles in Sudan at the time.

0818 Fairbanks, Hiram Francis, 1835–

Date of Travel: 1884 Nationality: American

Traveling with two other Roman Catholic priests (Thomas Fagan and Joseph Keenan), Fairbanks visited Alexandria and Cairo before continuing on to the Holy Land. A good, well-written account. “All over the East, although they may sometimes possess considerable bigotry and bitterness, the schismatic priests usually manifest a genuine respect, not unlike a deep feeling of brotherly kindness, toward their Western brethren who acknowledge the supremacy of the great Patriarch of Rome,” pp. 104–05. Illustrated.

0819 Gorman, John B.

Date of Travel: 1884 Nationality: American

A very descriptive and well-written account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez Canal as part of Gorman’s around-the-world trip. “A spell of antiquity gathers about us. We are overwhelmed; but who can think, who can contemplate this picture of life and death, or muse over the boundless past for these thirsty, torturous cries for backshish?,” p. 150. Illustrated.

0826 Reddall, Henry Frederic, 1856–1921

Date of Travel: 1884(?) Nationality: American

Brief account of Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan by Reddall who was on an around-the-world trip. Illustrated with engravings.

0827 Andreevskii, Vladimir Mikhailovich

Date of Travel: 1884–85 Nationality: Russian

a. Andreevskii visited Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan. Illustrated with photographs and others.

b. A simple tourist out to see the sights of Egypt, Andreevskii visited Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan. A personal, sight-filled account of the basic tourist type.

0828 Gleichen, Albert Edward Wilfred, 1863–

Date of Travel: 1884–85 Nationality: British

Organized to relieve Gordon’s forces at Khartoum, the camel corps left Dublin and received their mounts at a camp at the Pyramids. Gleichen gives an entertaining account of this odd outfit. The men and their camels left the Pyramids and sailed to Aswan where they visited Philae before continuing on into the Sudan. A good account of this strange little interlude in the disaster Gordon created.

0829 Labat, Gaston P.
Les Voyageurs canadiens à l’expedition du Soudan; ou, Quatre-vingt-dix jours avec les crocodiles Lettres revues, corrigées et augmentées de notes inédites sur l’expédition du Soudan; d’un résumé des us et coutumes de l’Egypte; contenant un autographe du

Date of Travel: 1884-85 Nationality: Canadian

A fascinating account of Canadians coming to the support of the British in Africa during Gordon’s campaign. A collection of letters by Labat and others (a list of those who served is included); Labat also includes an introduction that describes the conditions they met with in Egypt. “... Luxor... Beaucoup de choses à voir, mais peu à noter. Il fait nuit. Les souvenirs historiques aidant, imitons cuvier reconstituant un mastodonte par la découverte d’un os minuscule,” p. 94.

0830 Stacey, Charles Perry

Date of Travel: 1884–85 Nationality: Canadian

An account of the Canadian Voyageurs who came to the defense of Gordon in 1884-85. Most of the book is a transcription of the diary kept by Frederick Charles Denison (1846–1896), a member of the Expedition. Stacey also includes other documents relating to the Voyageurs. An interesting account. Illustrated with photographs.

0831 Ternan, Trevor, 1860–

Date of Travel: 1884–85 Nationality: British

Brigadier Ternan gives us his experiences in Egypt fighting the Turk in the best style of the old British war veteran. He goes into great detail on the troop movement, long-forgotten regiments and their leaders, all with a liberal dose of British military lingo and soldierly good humor. A bit heavy going. Includes a photo of the author.

Date of Travel: 1884(?)   Nationality: American

A book that appeals to all tastes. In this curious account of Egypt Wallace, a popular writer of the nineteenth century, intersperses her own description of things: she introduces Biblical stories, fictionalized accounts of Egyptian history, a description of the antiquities, along with a straightforward account of recent Egyptian history. Her travels took her to Alexandria, Cairo, Suez, and the Siwa oasis.

0833 Butler, Elizabeth Southerden (Thompson)

Date of Travel: 1884–93(?)   Nationality: British

a. Traveling from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, Butler gives a good, colorful account of Egypt. “... in my progress through this land of Arabs, I protested more or less successfully against burrowing into sepulchers, shuffling in thick gloom through pungent and uncanny mummy dust, in bat-scented atmosphere, while above-ground the blessed light of that matchless sky and the uplifting air of the desert were being wasted,” p. 49. Illustrated with sketches by the author, some in color.

b. In the form of letters to the author’s mother. Begins with Butler’s leaving Alexandria on her way out of Egypt. Includes a description of Port Said (“What a hideous place is this! And this is the Venice that modern commerce has conjured out of the sea. Truly typical! As I look at the deep ranks of steamers lining the Canal mouth, begrimed with coal-dust and besmirched with brown smoke, I might be at the Liverpool Docks, so much is the light of the Land of Light obscured by their fires,” p. 243. A few more scattered remarks about Egypt, and the rest of the book deals with the Holy Land.

0834 Escher, J.J.
Date of Travel: 1885  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Escher sees the usual sights in Alexandria, Cairo and Port Said before going off to the Holy Land. Numerous Biblical references. Illustrated.

0851 Stewart, Milton

Date of Travel: 1887  Nationality: American

“The natives remind me forcibly of our American Indians, particularly the Sioux tribe. They are tall, lithe, and muscular, and in passing through crowds of them I felt that peculiar, flesh-creeping sensation that one cannot resist when surrounded by either Indians or Chinese," p. 345. Stewart's basic account of the usual sights of Alexandria, Port Said, Ismailia, and Cairo first appeared in the Wichita Daily Eagle. Illustrated.

0852 Sweeney, Zachary Taylor, 1849–

Date of Travel: 1887 Nationality: American

A basic account of the usual sights with an instructional, Biblical slant; written for children. Sweeney visited Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said. Illustrated.

0853 Bell, Charles Frederic Moberly, 1847–1911

Date of Travel: 1887 (?) Nationality: British

" 'You shall sketch with the pencil, and I with the pen; you shall depict the Fellah, and I propound the Pharaoh; you sometimes travelling into my domain and I into your, we shall together find the happy mean.' 'And the result?' 'That we shall amuse and instruct ourselves if no one else, and add one more book on Egypt,' " p. 4. So the self-named Scribbler Charles F. Bell proposes to the Sketcher, Georges Montbard (q.v.) that they take a trip to Egypt. Traveling from Cairo to Aswan, together they give an amusing, and often tongue-in-cheek account of a trip up the Nile. Great reading, with excellent illustrations engraved by Charles Barbant.

0856 Bell, Charles Dent

Date of Travel: 1887–88 Nationality: British

Taking in the usual sights from Alexandria to Aswan, Bell finds in them reasons for digressions on Egyptian history, the Exodus, as well as reasons to quote sources such as Wilkinson and Lane. The last chapter, a refutation of Evolution is perhaps the most interesting: “Man I believe to be directly God-created, not ape-descended. His origin is sublime, and his destiny glorious; and I summon the very stones in the temple-walls of Egypt to cry out against a theory which appears incompatible with a belief in the Christian Scripture, and opposed to the statements of the Christian creeds,” pp. 315–16.

0857 Edwards, S.C.

Date of Travel: 1888 Nationality: British

Miss Edwards and an unnamed niece (perhaps a Miss Mounsey) travel up the Nile as far as Aswan in high Victorian style, visiting Cairo, Memphis, Luxor, Aswan, before bearing off to Jerusalem. To pass the time, their party tries to make good use of their free time: “Miss Mounsey and I have been trying to draw up a Bible-lesson from Palm-trees,” p. 13. The book was sold for one shilling for the benefit of the Missionary School at Bethlehem.

0858 Harrison, Carter Henry, 1825–1893
A race with the sun; or, A sixteen months’ tour from Chicago around the world. New York: G. P. Putnam’s Sons; Chicago: W. E. Dibble & Co., 1889. 569 p.
On an around-the-world trip, Harrison visits Suez, Cairo and Luxor. He sees the usual sights, but gives a good description. He meets Heinrich Schliemann when sailing for Alexandria. “By the way, another of the old acquaintances of the Nile traveler, the crocodile, has entirely disappeared below the first cataract, and almost entirely up to the second or third. The keen love of sport of the English have been too much for him,” p. 312. Illustrated with photographs.

0859 Herboso, Francisco José, 1861–

Date of Travel: 1888 Nationality: Venezuelan

A detailed account of Egypt, from Alexandria to Cairo, and then across to the Suez Canal area. Herboso was a state minister and saw the usual sights. Egypt is covered in Volume 2.

0860 M’Collester, Sullivan Holman, 1826–1921

Date of Travel: 1888 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, M’Collester visited Suez, Cairo and Alexandria. M’Collester had visited before in 1879(?). Illustrated with photographs.

0861 Nikanor, abp. 1847–

Date of Travel: 1888 Nationality: Russian

Date of Travel: 1888(?)  Nationality: French

NOT SEEN. CITED IN WILBOUR (visited Cairo, Luxor, Ismailia).

0863 Green, Lenamay, 1869–1952

Date of Travel: 1888(?)  Nationality: American

“We girls were wild to climb to the top, as we had gotten along so nicely thus far; but then wiser heads thought it not prudent, so we reluctantly came down,” p. 104. A fun, well-done account by an eighteen-year old girl who visited Alexandria and Cairo. Traveled with Robert A. and Anna Young (her uncle and aunt), as well as her two cousins, Mary Green and Susie Hunter Young. Illustrated.

0864 Herbruck, Edward

Date of Travel: 1888(?)  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Herbruck stopped in Alexandria, Cairo and Suez. “I could not help but feel sad as I saw thousands of poor, half-clad people laying about the streets, and especially was my sympathy aroused for the poor children,” p. 58. Good, basic account. Illustrated.

0865 Rockley, Evelyn Cecil

Date of Travel: 1888(?)  Nationality: British

On an around-the-world trip, Rockley visits Suez, Cairo and Alexandria. Very brief account. “Cairo has nowadays become so fashionable and familiar that anything more than a passing notice of it will soon be as superfluous as a description of Paris,” p. 195.

0869 Fullerton, William Morton, 1865–

_In Cairo._ London and New York: Macmillan, 1891. 70 p.

Date of Travel: 1889  Nationality: British

A pleasant little remembrance of life in Cairo. Not much to it, but Fullerton's account makes for enjoyable reading. "For every one makes Cairo the point of vantage; and the mingling of Oriental dainties called by that name in the menu of the nations is for a time the most indigestible dish in the world," p. 3.

0870 Hubbell, Nathan

_My journey to Jerusalem: including travels in England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Belgium, Germany, Holland, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Palestine, and Egypt._ New York: Hunt & Eaton, 1890. 311 p.

St. Louis: Nixon-Jones Printing Company, 1893. 816 p.
Date of Travel: 1889  Nationality: American

An enthusiastic, basic account of the usual sights, illustrated with a number of Biblical quotes. "The camels were coming down the narrow streets. Turkish soldiers line the docks; the minarets of mosques were seen in all parts of the city; Bible pictures represented life in Egypt more than thirty-five hundred years ago seemed to have risen into life from out of the dead past," p. 231. Illustrated.

0875 Donisthorpe, Wordsworth, 1847-

Date of Travel: 1889(?)  Nationality: British

A cute account of Alexandria, Cairo and the Nile to Aswan. The author gives his fellow travelers names such as "Rich Banker," "Jacko," and "Literary Failure."

0876 Hugonnet, Léon, 1842-

Date of Travel: 1889(?)  Nationality: French

NOT SEEN. CITED IN WILBOUR (visited Alexandria, Cairo and Suez).

0877 Reeve, Charles McCormick, 1847-

Date of Travel: 1889(?)  Nationality: American

A good, readable, descriptive, and fun account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor and the Nile to Aswan. Chatty, but informative. Of Cairo: "Among the relics of antiquity we find are the telephone, electric light, gas, sewers, water-works, cheap cabs, pin-pool, and the American bar," p. 43.

0878 Whittle, Walter Andrew
A Baptist abroad; or travels and adventures in Europe and all Bible lands. New York: J. A. Hill, 1890. 572 p.

A brief, basic account of the Rev. Whittle’s trip to Port Said, Suez, and Cairo. Illustrated.

0879 Lynch, Jeremiah, 1848–1917

Date of Travel: 1889–90 Nationality: British

Living in Cairo for a few months, Lynch believes himself an expert on things Egyptian. Including a long account of life in Cairo (weddings, the English presence—of which he has a good opinion), and his trip up the Nile to Luxor. A good account of an American in Cairo in the late nineteenth century (“My principal business between midday and three o’clock was to try and keep cool. Every native sleeps during those hours, but it is impossible for the stranger,” p. 4. Illustrated with photographs.

0880 Talmage, Thomas de Witt, 1832–1902
From the pyramids to the Acropolis; sacred places seen through Biblical spectacles. Philadelphia: Historical Publishing Company, 1892. 288 p.

Date of Travel: 1889–90 Nationality: American

Beginning each chapter with a Biblical quote, Talmage then sermonizes on the quotation as it relates to what he did in Egypt that day. He visited Cairo and the Pyramids (“After looking around for a while, and a Kodak had pictured the group, we descended. The descent was more trying than the ascent, for climbing you need not see the depths beneath, but coming down it was impossible not to see the abysms below,” p. 32), but there is no clear itinerary of him going elsewhere.

0881 Vedder, Elihu, 1836–1923
The digressions of V written for his own fun and that of his friend; containing the quaint legends of his infancy, an account of his stay in Florence, the garden of lost opportunities, return home on the track of Columbus, his struggle in New York in war-time coinciding with that of the nation, his prolonged stay in Rome, and likewise his prattlings upon art, tamperings with literature, struggles with verse, and many other things, being a portrait of himself from youth to age.

Date of Travel: 1889–90 Nationality: American

Elihu Vedder, the American painter well-known for his murals and the painting “The Secret of the Sphinx,” took a trip up the Nile in 1889–90. In his sort-of autobiography, he devotes about four pages to the subject of Egypt. In this brief sketch, he gives a good, concise account of his impressions of Egypt.

0900 Oxford and Asquith, Margot Asquith, countess of, 1864–1945

Date of Travel: 1891–92 Nationality: British

Traveling with her parents, Margot writes a chatty account of her trip through Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan. Much of the book describes the other English she meets, and is full of unabashed pride in her Englishness: “I never go abroad without feeling pride in my country. We are honest and trusted; we are brave and inspire courage, and we are cultivated and clean . . . I never saw a country that did not tempt me to say, ‘Thank God I am English,’ ” p. 48. Full name: Emma Alice Margaret (Tennant) Asquith.

0901 Keppler, Paul Wilhelm von, 1852–1926

Date of Travel: 1892 Nationality: German

A basic account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez area. Keppler was the bishop of Rottenburg. Illustrated with photographs.
0902 Palmer, Harry Clay
Sights around the world with the base ball boys Comprising most interesting sketches of the famous sights of the world as they were seen by the gay travelers on the “round-the-world” tour of American base ball teams. Philadelphia: Edgewood Publishing Company, 1892. 288 p.

Date of Travel: 1892
Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip to promote baseball, the Chicago team and an All-Star team, the All-Americans played exhibition games all over the world. In Egypt, they visited Suez and Cairo, where they played a game at the Pyramids. “That evening, in the hotel office the following bulletin was posted: ‘Baseball at the Pyramids.—The Chicago and All-America teams, comprising the Spaulding American Baseball party, will please report in the hotel office, in uniform, promptly at ten o’clock to-morrow morning. We shall leave the hotel at that hour, camels having been provided for the All-America players and donkeys for the Chicago players, with carriages for the rest of the party. The Pyramids will be inspected, the Sphinx visited, and a game played upon the desert near by, beginning at two o’clock,’” p. 171. A fascinating account with some great photographs of the players on donkeys. Palmer covered the event for the New York Herald. Illustrated with photographs and drawings.

0903 Rawnsley, Hardwicke Drummond, 1851–1920
Notes for the Nile: together with a metrical rendering of the hymns of ancient Egypt and of the precepts of Ptah-hotep (the oldest book in the world). New York: G. P. Putnam’s Sons; London: W. Heinemann, 1892. 324 p.

Date of Travel: 1892
Nationality: British

Beginning his account with some precepts for potential travelers, Rawnsley continues his trip up the Nile, seeing the usual sights and visiting with Flinders Petrie and Emile Brugsch. A good account by a traveler who visited nothing but the antiquities. “But, thought I, surely this is not the Theban plan. ‘The City of the Hundred Gates’ that Homer sang of, was, surely, set round by hills; and here, though it is true that the mountain ranges are visible right and left, there is no circling barrier to keep the world of foes without, the might of wealth within,” p. 163. Rawnsley ends the book with a translation of some Egyptian hymns.
0904 Thompson, Frederick Diodati, 1850–1906
In the track of the sun; readings from the diary of a globe trotter.

Date of Travel: 1892 Nationality: American/British

0907 McMillan, Eliza

Date of Travel: 1893 Nationality: American

In these letters to her father and husband, McMillan gives a good, basic account of her group tour to Egypt, through Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor and the Nile to Aswan. On her way back, she stayed in Cairo for a month and then continued on to Alexandria.

0908 Miller, Daniel Long, 1841–1921
Wandering in Bible lands: notes of travel in Italy, Greece,

Date of Travel: 1893  Nationality: American

Brief account of Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan. Miller visited again in 1895. Illustrated with sketches by the author.

0909 Read, Edward Griffin

Date of Travel: 1893  Nationality: American

“But while doubting then the prophetic character ascribed to the Great Pyramid, we may grant its scientific value; it is a monument to the wisdom of those ancient Egyptians. And because it is in a sense a monument to Him who gives men the faculties to acquire such wisdom. Pointing towards the unclouded sky, it points to Him who lives and reigns above the sky,” p. 26. Visiting Alexandria, Cairo, the Pyramids and Sphinx, Luxor and other sights up the Nile, the Rev. Read gives an adequate account of his travels, including a brief section on the fad of Pyramidology (still with us today), as well as American missions in Egypt and a history of the Copts. Illustrated with photographs.

0910 Carpenter, Mary Thorn

Date of Travel: 1893(?)  Nationality: American

A chatty, informal account, with a long description of Cairo. In addition to her trip to the Pyramids and Sphinx, Heliopolis and Saqqara, Carpenter made a side trip to the oasis of the Fayyum (“... it was from a casual remark made at a Cairo dinner that we went a-wandering to the Fayûm’s ancient patch of green oasis,” p. 62). Carpenter continued on to the Holy Land. Illustrated with photographs.

Our journey around the world; an illustrated record of a year's

Date of Travel: 1894(?) Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Clark gives a full account of his first visit to Egypt when he visited Alexandria and Cairo. Good account of the Pyramids. Traveled with wife, Harriet Elizabeth (Abbot) Clark. Illustrated.

0912 Buxton, Hannah Maude; Buxton, Clare Emily; Buxton, Theresa; Buxton, Edward North, 1840–, joint author

Date of Travel: 1893–94 Nationality: British

A collection of letters written by three sisters (Hannah, etc.), and introduced and edited by their father and fellow traveler, E.N. Buxton. They were printed primarily to illustrate the photographs, “taken with an ordinary Kodak,” and reproduced by the Swan Electric Engraving Company. Traveling from Cairo to Luxor, with a side trip to the Sinai, they see the usual sights in the typical British manner. The letters have a very “young girl” sound to them: “I think the monks must have thought us most flippant and disrespectful. We peered at them through the doors, and climbed the garden walls to have a look in,” p. 129.

0913 Hogarth, David George, 1862–1927

Date of Travel: 1893–96 Nationality: British

a. Hogarth, an Oxford professor, visited Egypt, traveling throughout the country, each winter for three years.

b. A brief account only of the area around Alexandria. Mostly concerned with other parts of the East.

0914 Traill, Henry Duff, 1842–1900
Date of Travel: 1893–96    Nationality: British

Traveling to every corner of Egypt, Traill writes a readable, but not very interesting account of Egypt, that does have some interesting moments: [Concerning the Whirling Dervishes] “Soberly devout Mohammedans no doubt look askance at both. To question what such followers of Islam think of wild fanatics a venerable Moslem replied the other day to a friend of mine, ‘We think of them, sir, precisely as a sober member of your Church of England thinks of the Salvation Army,’” p. 254. Appeared serially in the Daily Telegraph.

0915 Penfield, Frederick Courtland, 1855–1922

Date of Travel: 1893–97    Nationality: American

A well-illustrated (with photographs, and paintings and drawings by Robert Talbot Kelly and Paul Philippoteaux) account of Egypt by the diplomatic agent and Consul-General to Egypt for the United States. Includes a history of Egypt and an excellent description of Cairo and story of the Suez Canal. A good book by someone who really knew and loved Egypt, but was not blind to its faults: “No picture of Cairo that does not include the soldier can be considered complete, for the military aspect of the city is in almost aggressive evidence,” p. 52.

0916 Floyd, John F.
Our tour around the world containing a description in brief letters of a tour around the world, through America, Hawaiian Islands, New Zealand, Tasmania, Australia, Ceylon, Egypt, Palestine, Italy, France and England, including ten years residence in New Zealand and Australia. Chicago: C.H. Kerr, 1896. 268 p.

Date of Travel: 1894    Nationality: American

0917 Godbey, William Baxter, b. 1833

Date of Travel: 1894
Nationality: American

a. An Evangelical minister, Godbey visited Alexandria and Cairo in a brief visit, writing a touristical account.

b. A much enlarged and detailed version of the above account, illustrated with photographs.

NOTE: Godbey visited Egypt again later in 1905.

0918 Jackson, William Henry, 1843–1942

Date of Travel: 1894
Nationality: American

William Henry Jackson, the great pioneer photographer of the American West, visited Egypt as part of his world tour in 1894. Stopping in Egypt, he traveled up the Nile to Memphis, and then overland to the Suez area before continuing on to Ceylon. In his autobiography, Egypt gets only a brief mention. The original glass plate negatives of the Egyptian trip may be found at the Library of Congress.

0919 Talmage, Thomas De Witt, 1832–1902

Date of Travel: 1894
Nationality: American

0920 Wilson, Edward Stansbury, 1841–

0924 Attfield, Donald Henry, 1866–

Date of Travel: 1894–95  Nationality: British

A physician under the Sanitary and Quarantine Medical Officer at Port Suez, Attfield was responsible (along with an Austrian and a Frenchman) for boarding each vessel at Suez and checking it out. In this private journal circulated amongst friends in England, he also includes a brief biographical sketch of himself. Visiting most of Egypt during his stay there, he includes descriptions of the people, customs, and costumes; a history of the Suez Canal; and an account of the Canal’s operations. Much of the book is taken up with descriptions of European expatriate community’s social life (“After dinner to-night came a moonlight donkey picnic, to which I had been invited by Mrs. Baglehole, the wife of the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company’s agent here. At nine o’clock, under a glorious moon, about five-and-twenty of us—ladies and gentlemen—met at the French hospital, and at the word of command scurried off en route for the Pontoon Bridge, some five or six miles from Suez up the Canal,” p. 135).

0925 Breasted, James Henry, 1865–1935
_Egypt through the stereoscope; a journey through the land of the Pharaohs._ New York: Underwood & Underwood, 1905. 360 p.

Date of Travel: 1895 Nationality: French

An overwritten account of Alexandria, Cairo, Suez, and the Nile to Aswan. Basic description of the sights. Illustrated.

0928 Deschamps, Philippe, 1848–

Date of Travel: 1895 Nationality: French

On an around-the-world trip, Deschamps visited Alexandria, Cairo, Suez and Aswan. Good, journalistic account, visiting the usual sights. “Alexandrie possède de jolis types de femmes; c’est surtout à la sortie de la messe grecque que l’on peut admirer ces visages d’une perfection accomplie,” p. 165.
0929 Lambert, George
Around the globe and through Bible lands. Elkhart, IN: Mennonite Publishing Company, 1896. 432 p.

Date of Travel: 1895  Nationality: American

Lambert, on an around-the-world trip gives a basic description of Suez and Cairo. Illustrated with photographs.

0930 MacArthur, Robert Stuart, 1841–1923
Around the world due west to the far east. Philadelphia: Griffith & Rowland Press, 1900. 532 p.

Date of Travel: 1895  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, MacArthur visited the Suez Canal, Cairo and Alexandria. Basic description of the sights.

0931 McLean, Archibald, 1850–1920
A circuit of the globe: a series of letters of travel across the American continent, through the Hawaiian Republic, Japan, China, the Straits Settlements, Burma, India, Ceylon, Australia, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Turkey, Greece, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Scandinavia, France and England. St. Louis: Christian Pub. Co., 1897. 384 p.

Date of Travel: 1895  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, McLean, a Protestant minister, visited Alexandria, Ismailia, Suez, and Cairo. Visits the United Presbyterian of America missions and schools. Excellent reading. Tells and praises the story of Miss Whately (q.v.). Illustrated with photographs.

0932 Miller, Daniel Long, 1841–1921
Girdling the globe From the land of the midnight sun to the Golden Gate. A record of a tour around the world. Mount Morris, IL: The Brethren Publishing House, 1898. 602 p.

Date of Travel: 1895  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Miller visits Port Said, Cairo and Suez. Good, but brief description. Visited once before in 1893.
0933 Parsons, Charles, 1878–

Date of Travel: 1895 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Parsons visits Suez, and went up the Nile from Cairo to Aswan. Visited Emile Brugsch (q.v.) and saw the funeral of Ismail Pasha. Had visited once before in 1868. Illustrated with photographs.

0934 Stoddard, Seneca Roy

Date of Travel: 1895 Nationality: American

"The streets of old Cairo are like a kaleidoscope, a wonderful combination of changing forms and color, of writhing hues of picturesque humanity," p. 73. A good account of the usual sights (in Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said) with some history. Illustrated with photographs.

0935 Underhill, Anthony S.
_Foreign letters._ n. p., 1902?. 1 v.

Date of Travel: 1895 Nationality: American

Underhill, a well-known newspaperman was the editor of the _Steu ben Farmers' Advocate_ (as well as the paper under its various other incarnations). This volume is a collection of his letters cut from the paper and mounted on sheets, written to the paper during his trip to Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan). An interesting account.

0936 Flers, Robert, 1872–1927

a. NOT SEEN.
b. "En descendant vers le Nil, les maisons prennent une apparence moins misérable, quoique réellement elles abritent toujours la même population; elles se dominent les unes le autres par des terrasses taillées en équerre, d'une blancheur éblouissante dans cette nuit d'un bleu sombre," p. 996. Flers, who was a fellow student of Marcel Proust's at Condorcet, gives a good account of Egypt.

0937 Pollard, Joseph

Date of Travel: 1895(?) Nationality: British

Pollard visits, in addition to all the usual sights, Missionary schools and the sights where Mariette worked. Gives a very basic account with quotations from earlier travelers and many lists. Travels from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa and the Suez Canal. Illustrated with lithographs.

0938 Loyson, Emilie Jane (Butterfield) Meriman, 1833–

Date of Travel: 1895–96 Nationality: American

The wife of the controversial French churchman Hyacinthe Loyson (excommunicated for his radical views in 1869), Loyson and her husband traveled throughout North Africa and the Middle East in the years 1895–96. Meeting with Christians, Jews, Moslems, and Copts, the Loysons found them all to be the children of God. The Loysons are among the few travelers with something good to say about the Islamic religion ("As to Moslems,—happily their sublime faith and innate sobriety make them proof against our influence," p. 256). Evangelical in tone, but a very good book. Illustrated with photographs.

0939 Wilkin, Anthony, d. 1901

Date of Travel: 1895–96 Nationality: British

Taking the full tour, from Port Said through the Suez Canal and thence on to Cairo, Fayyum, and up the Nile to Wadi Halfa, Wilkin covers most of Egypt. Besides the usual tombs and temples, he also covers an ostrich farm near Heliopolis and the recent excavations of Deir el Bahri. The photos are basic, but do include some interesting sights, such as Egyptian gunboats. "... though a large number of tourists pursue the black art in the Nile valley, comparatively few are lucky enough to preserve tolerable photographs of the places they have visited. The vicissitudes of the climate are a sure trial even to the most perfectly constructed of cameras," p. v.

0940 Lewis, Agnes Smith, 1843–1926

Date of Travel: 1895–97 Nationality: British

A brief mention of Cairo, before Lewis continues on to the Sinai for almost two years. Illustrated with photographs.

0941 Allen, Mary S.
From west to east, or, The Old world as I saw it: being a description of a journey from California to the Holy Land and Egypt, by the way of England, France, Switzerland and Italy. Chicago, IL: Free Methodist Pub. House, 1898. 114 p.

Date of Travel: 1896 Nationality: American

Traveling from the Holy Land, Allen made a stop in Port Said and Cairo, giving a basic account. Illustrated with photographs.

0942 Clark, Francis Edward, 1851–1927

Date of Travel: 1896 Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Clark, president of the World's Endeavor Union, visited Egypt. Gives description of the World's Endeavor Union missions in Egypt. "The oldest civilization in the world and the youngest Christian organization in the world have met together; Egypt and Christian Endeavor have kissed each other, to accept the Oriental imagery of this country," p. 85.
0943 Barrows, John Henry, 1847–1902

Date of Travel: 1896(?) Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Barrows stopped in Alexandria and Cairo. Having visited before in 1874, he saw less of the usual sights and instead visited schools, and, being a minister, did some preaching. A very detailed account. “By comparison with Constantinople, Cairo, especially during the British occupation, is bright, clean, and decent.” p. 301. Edited by his daughter, Mary Eleanor Barrows. First appeared as letters in the Chicago Record.

0944 Bottome, Margaret (McDonald), 1827–1906

Date of Travel: 1896(?) Nationality: American

A brief account of Alexandria and Cairo. Bottome quotes copiously from other writers.

0945 Palmer, Lucia A. Chapman

Date of Travel: 1897(?) Nationality: American

Doctor and Mrs. Palmer traveled to Egypt in the time of Abas Pasha, and Mrs. Palmer, in a well-told narrative, describes their trip from Alexandria and Cairo. It being too late in the season to go south, they go to Ismailia and then on to the Holy Land. Critical of the English presence in Egypt (“The English came to Egypt first with the Prayerbook, then they came with their shot-gun. The shot-gun has the call now and the poor Egyptians sigh amid the ruins of their past greatness, and must wait even for their pin-money until the English have fingered it and taken out England’s interest; then the Egyptian can have the rest.” p. 28–29), Palmer takes an interest in the hardships of the people. She also includes a reminiscence of meeting Cleopatra’s Needle when it arrived in Central Park and was set up behind the Metropolitan Museum of Art in 1881.
0946 Soler, Mariano, 1846–1908
Viaje por los países bíblicos. Montevideo: Uruguaya de M. Martinez, 1897. 319 p.

Date of Travel: 1896(?)   Nationality: Uruguayan

Soler, the archbishop of Montevideo, made a brief trip to Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said) before continuing on to the Holy Land. Illustrated.

0947 Tjernagel, Nehemias, 1868–
a. Fodture i Ægypten og Palastina. Randall, IA: [s.n.], 1897. 204 p.

Date of Travel: 1896(?)   Nationality: American?

a. Visited Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said. Illustrated with photographs. UNREAD.

b. UNREAD. Includes more illustrations.

0948 Chaudoir, Puc

Date of Travel: 1896–97   Nationality: Belgium

On an around-the-world trip, Chaudoir traveled up the Nile from Alexandria to Aswan. Told in letter form with many comments on the antiquities. “Visitant ensemble les curiosités du pays, nous avons début par une excursion à Philae,” p. 15. Illustrated with photographs.

0949 Geere, H. Valentine

Date of Travel: 1896–97   Nationality: British

While working for the University of Pennsylvania, Geere did excavations in Mesopotamia as well as Egypt. A rather dull account of his work. Very technical with few anecdotes. Deals more with Mesopotamia than Egypt, and one gets the impression that Geere feels Egyptian antiquities are of less interest to the true scientist and more for the masses. Illustrated with photographs.

0950 Gardiner, Sarah Diodati and Quincy, Mary Perkins
Pages in azure and gold; the letters of Miss Gardiner and Miss Quincy. New Haven, CT: The Tuttle, Morehouse & Taylor Company, 1915. 293 p.

Date of Travel: 1896, 1902, 1905-06

Gardiner and Quincy, both members of the Colonial Dames Society, visited Egypt on three occasions. During their first trip, in 1896, they only visited Cairo; in 1902, they traveled from Alexandria to Aswan; and in 1905–06, they traveled from Cairo to Wadi Halfa. Their letters are an entertaining account with many comments on the social life of their fellow travelers.

0951 Peebles, James M., 1822–1922

Date of Travel: 1897

On an around-the-world trip, Peebles made a brief visit to Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

0952 Zypen, Ferdinand van der
Um die Erde: Reisebriefe und Aufzeichnungen. Cologne: [s.n.], 1898. 98 p.

Date of travel: 1897

On an around-the-world trip, Zypen visits Port Said, Suez, Cairo, Luxor and the Nile to Aswan. A brief, basic account. Illustrated with photographs.

0953 Bell, Lillian Lida, 1867–1929
Date of Travel: 1897(?)  Nationality: American

Bell spent two years traveling through Europe, Russia, Greece, Italy, and Egypt. Two chapters and 32 pages of this work are devoted to Egypt. Bell spent some time in Cairo, describing with innocence, wonder and sympathy the sights, sounds and smells she found there. A true American, she could praise the English for civilizing Egypt and admire the English soldier as second only to the American. Sailing up the Nile aboard the Mayflower, Bell and her shipmates made daily donkey excursions to the tombs and temples along the river as far south as Philae.

0954 Perry, Walter Scott, 1855–1934

Date of Travel: 1897(?)  Nationality: American

A very travel-bookish work as Perry describes the area from Alexandria to Aswan. Very little personal narrative. Illustrated.

0955 Reynolds-Ball, Eustace Alfred, 1857–

Date of Travel: 1897(?)  Nationality: British

A sort of “hints on what to expect and see in Egypt.” A very detailed, historical account of Egypt from Cairo to Aswan, including the Suez Canal. “It seems, perhaps, strange to include what to Western minds is a purely private and domestic function in this chapter; but a native wedding seems to be considered, at all events by lady travellers, one of the recognized sights of Cairo,” p. 198. Illustrated with photographs.

0956 Sweetser, Delight
One way round the world. Indianapolis, IN: Bobbs-Merrill, 1898. 270 p.

Date of Travel: 1897(?)  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Sweetser visited Port Said and Cairo. A good, chatty account by a young girl. Traveled with her parents. Illustrated with photographs.
0957 Underwood & Underwood

Nationality: American(?)

The key to a set of stereoscopic views of a step-by-step tour of Egypt from the Suez Canal to Luxor. “Who does not wish to see the quaint and peculiar Arab life in its various phases along the beautiful valley of the Nile and upon the Sahara desert of death?” p. 3. Good descriptions of sights. Unclear who the photographers were or when they traveled.

0958 Gibson, Charles Dana, 1867–1944

Nationality: American

The creator of the Gibson Girl, Gibson’s trip to Egypt carried him from Alexandria to Abu Simbel. In addition to his descriptions, he includes numerous illustrations of the people of Egypt. Good book, filled with witty remarks (“Cairo is the foyer of Egypt. To go to Egypt and not go up the Nile is very much like standing outside a theater and watching the audience go in, and then waiting until they come out, to glean from their conversation some idea of the play,” p. 28) and marvelous illustrations (and yes, the Gibson Girl does show up in Egypt!).

0959 Steevens, George Warrington, 1869–1900

Nationality: British

“The nominal suzerain of Egypt is the Sultan; its real suzerain is Lord Cromer. Its nominal Governor is the Khedive; its real Governor for a final touch of comic opera, is Thomas Cook & Son. Cook’s representative is the first person you meet in Egypt, and you go on meeting him,” p. 68. With mixed feelings about the English presence in Egypt, Steevens gives an account of Egypt from Ismailia and the Suez, and Alexandria to Wadi Halfa. An interesting account.
0960 Harrison, Thomas Skelton, 1832–1919

Date of Travel: 1897–99 Nationality: American

Diplomatic agent and Consul-general of the United States in Cairo, Harrison gives a good description of an American’s life in turn-of-the-century Egypt. Written in a diary format, he gives many descriptions of court life, including seating diagrams of state dinners. “In the evening we went to the opera house to see some amateurs acting for the benefit of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and were afflicted beyond measure by the ‘awful rot’ that was impudently displayed,” pp. 243–44. Traveled with his wife Louise. Good reading. Illustrated with portraits of the principals.

0961 Adams, Henry, 1838–1918

a. NOT SEEN

b. In his brilliant Education, Adams makes a passing comment on Egypt which he visited at the age of 60, after years of a life filled with travel and contemplation. The following short passage (less than a page) is a good example of Adams’ elegiac tone (as well as some looseness with the facts, since Karnak is actually hundreds of miles from the Sphinx): “One leant on a fragment of column in the great hall at Karnak and watched a jackal creep down the débris of ruin. The jackal’s ancestors had surely crept up the same wall when it was building. What was his view about the value of silence? One lay in the sands and watched the expression of the Sphinx,” p. 360. Adams had visited Egypt before in 1872 with his wife.

0962 McMahon, William
Date of Travel: 1898   Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, McMahon, a Catholic priest, visits Suez and Cairo. Visits with other priests in Egypt. An interesting, detailed account. Illustrated with photographs.

0963 Minnaert, E.

Date of Travel: 1898(?)   Nationality: Belgian

The “Ancien Conseiller a la cour d’appel du Caire,” Minnaert gives a very detailed account of the justice system of Egypt. Good account of the Europeans and their lifestyle in Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

0964 Worsfold, William Basil, 1858–1939

Date of Travel: 1898–99   Nationality: British

Written to show the state of Egypt and how its politics, government, educational system and various public works operate. Filled with the history of Egypt. Worsfold travels to Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Fayyum. Illustrated with photographs.

0965 Acker, Finley

Date of Travel: 1899   Nationality: American

0966 Beckman, Nellie Sims

Date of Travel: 1899   Nationality: American

“The air was hot and stifling, almost as hot as I found it once in a mine in Virginia City, thirty-two hundred feet below the surface,”
p. 171. A brief, but well-done account of Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor. Illustrated with photographs.

0967 Charley, William Thomas, 1833–1904

Date of Travel: 1899 Nationality: British

Traveling with a tour group, the “Palestine Pilgrims,” Charley visited Alexandria and Cairo. Devotes a good part of his account to the historical lectures the group received on the trip.

0968 Honeyman, Abraham Van Doren, 1849–1936
From America to the Orient. Plainfield, NJ: Honeyman, 1899. 280 p. Includes 34 articles signed by various contributors.

Date of Travel: 1899 Nationality: American

A large party of Americans, over 20, traveling under Honeyman, toured throughout Europe and Egypt. This volume is composed of their accounts. Part of a series Honeyman put out after his tours (“The contributors to the volume are not as a rule professional writers, but, perhaps, all the more will it be found that their style has a refreshing directness and individuality not always met with in similar books,” p. i), and thus the quality of each chapter varies with the talent of the writer who wrote it. Chapters 25–31 cover Egypt and are written by Honeyman, Finley Acker (q.v.), and Rev. William R. Richards. Covering topics such as “The Streets of Cairo,” by Acker; “At Ancient On,” by Honeyman; “The Tomb of Tih,” by Richards; and “A Bedouin Festival,” by Acker, the subjects are quite varied. An interesting book primarily for its format. Includes photos of the travelers at the various sights.

0969 Sharp, Arthur H. and Grogan, Ewart S.
From the Cape to Cairo. The first travers of Africa from South to North. London: Hurst & Blackett, Ltd., 1900. 377 p.

Date of Travel: 1899 Nationality: British

A brief mention of Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.
0970 Wenger, Amos Daniel, 1867–
Six months in Bible lands and around the world in fourteen months with fifty illustrations. Doylestown, PA: J.B. Steiner, 1902. 550 p.

Date of Travel: 1899 Nationality: American

A bit overdone account of the usual sights in Port Said, Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor.

0971 Blom, A.
Min resa jorden rundt. [s.l: s.n; 1900]. 382 p.

Date of Travel: 1899(?) Nationality: Swedish

Visited Port Said, Cairo, Luxor, and Alexandria as part of an around-the-world trip. UNREAD.

0972 International Engraving and Publishing Co.

Date of Travel: 1899(?) Nationality: American

0973 Ward, John, 1832–1912

Date of Travel: 1899(?) Nationality: British

More of a guidebook. Includes descriptions of the usual antiquities as well as some interesting accounts of the modern wonders such as the Aswan Dam. Illustrated with numerous photographs and paintings.

0974 Bacon, Lee, Mrs.
Date of Travel: 1899–1900(?)  Nationality: American

Beginning the account in media res (in the middle of things) with the renting of the dahabeah in Cairo, Bacon describes the various troubles getting the boat, engaging the cook, and starting the trip. Along the Nile, the Bacons (Henry and Lee), see all the usual sights, traveling from Cairo to Wadi Halfa. Bacon includes quite a bit of "boat talk" as well as descriptions of the crew: "Our crew wear blue jeans trousers drawn on a string, with a loose shirt of blue outside, and a waistcoat of stripped silk is allowed to hang from the shoulders," p. 34. Bacon apparently had a copy of Amelia Edwards (q.v.) with her as she makes constant references to A thousand miles up the Nile. Illustrated with watercolors by Henry Bacon.

0975 Dunning, Harry Westbrook, 1871–

Date of Travel: 1899–1905(?)  Nationality: American

A compilation of the experiences of the author's six trips to Egypt, it is a very guidebook-like account, full of travelers' hints and listings of facts. Illustrated with photographs.
1900–1907

0976 Mathews, Isabella H.
Spring days in two hemispheres. New York: P. Steger, 1908. 98 p.

Date of Travel: 190– Nationality: American

A brief account of Mathews' visit to Port Said, Cairo, Luxor, and Aswan as part of her around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs.

0977 Ross, Minnie Stuart Crawford, 1857–

Date of Travel: 190– Nationality: American

“Cairo! This is a wonderful city, and I am wild to explore it. An hour ago I went with a lady from Evanston to buy some collars for her doctor son. She wanted me as explaining financier!” p. 97. An exhilarating, detailed account of Alexandria, Cairo, the Nile to Aswan, and Port Said.

0978 Coleman, Suemma

Date of Travel: 1900 Nationality: American

Coleman visited Egypt as part of an around-the-world trip, seeing Port Said, Cairo, and Luxor. A basic account by Coleman, who was a young girl at the time. “We arrived in Luxor, there were no vacant rooms in the Grand Luxor Hotel so we were given a bungalow in the yard,” p. 74. Traveled with her parents, William H. and Sallie E. Coleman, and Fanny Morrison, a friend. Illustrated with photographs.
0979 Felberman, Lajos, 1861–1927

Date of Travel: 1900  Nationality: Hungarian(?)

Filled with purple prose describing all the sights from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa (and on to Khartoum), Felberman includes sections on the past history of Egypt, present life there, as well as Nile sights and animals. “At Cairo it is very easy to get about. There is an excellent service of electric trams connecting the town with all the suburbs, and running as far as the Pyramids,” p. 20. Illustrated with many photographs.

0980 Vivekananda, swami, 1863–1902
The complete works of the Swami Vivekananda. Calcutta: Mazumdar, Printer, 1927. 2d edition. 7 v. plus index.

Date of Travel: 1900  Nationality: Indian

Traveling from India to Europe, the well-known swami traveled through the Suez Canal, commenting on the spirituality of Egypt. He never landed, however.

0981 Capart, Jean

NOT SEEN. CITED IN MET. CAT.

0982 Gotz, Hermann, 1848–1901

Date of Travel: 1900(?)  Nationality: German

Visiting Port Said, Cairo, Luxor, the Nile to Aswan and Alexandria, Gotz gives a basic description of the usual sights. Illustrated with photographs and colored pictures.

0983 Hoenshel, Elmer Ulysses, 1864–
Date of Travel: 1900(?)  Nationality: American

Hoenshel sees only a bit of Egypt, Port Said and the Cairo area, for which he gives a rather basic description. He also includes a history of Egypt. He travels with Abraham Lot whom he met in Palestine. “At Luxor I lingered awhile at sunset and in the fading after-glow by the ruins of its famous Temples, and then I return to wander in a dream-vision through a land whose Elysian plains and fair hillsides are not marked with a single tome,” p. 119. Illustrated with poorly reproduced photographs.

0984 Riya Salima, pseud of Mme. Rachil Paika

Date of Travel: 1900(?)  Nationality: French

A detailed description of the Harem in Egypt at the turn of the century.

0985 Anderson, John Fisher, 1872–

Date of Travel: 1900–01  Nationality: American

Working his way around the world, Anderson, a Christian Endeavorer, stopped in Egypt where he worked on the docks in Alexandria. He also made a brief visit to Cairo and saw the Pyramids. A fascinating, though brief account. Illustrated with photographs.

0986 Barreda, Ernesto Mario, 1883–

Date of Travel: 1900–01  Nationality: Argentinean

“Por mucho que el Egito halaque la fantasía son las exquisitas visiones que ofrece á la mirada asomaquel misterio porticular que de la Palestina, conmoviendo las más desconacidas, las más ocultas fibras que nunca habian vibrado y que tenían un secreto de dulzura nuevo . . .” p. 465. Basic account of the sights in Port Said and Cairo.
0987 Cecil, Edward, 1867–1918

Date of Travel: 1900–18  Nationality: British

Cecil spent eighteen years in Egypt in various governmental capacities for the British; serving, by most accounts, as a relatively easy taskmaster. In these letters, written for the amusement of his family at home, he gives the lighter side—for the British at least—of British rule in Egypt.

0988 Quibell, Annie Abernethe, 1862–1927

Date of Travel: 1900–1927  Nationality: British

Quibell, the wife of James Edward Quibell, an important Egyptian archaeologist, assisted her husband with his researches. She writes a good account of Egypt from Alexandria to Abu Simbel. Illustrated with photographs.

0989 Babcock, Maltbie Davenport, 1858–1901

Date of Travel: 1901  Nationality: American

“Cairo is tinsel and tawdriness after the majesty of Thebes, and her most enduring works seem like the painted flies and pasteboard properties of a passing show,” p. 41. Visiting Port Said, Cairo, and Luxor, Babcock made just a brief stop in Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

0990 Harwood, Nahum
A trip around the world. Leominster, MA, 1906. 163 p.

Date of Travel: 1901  Nationality: American

“All the rain that falls in Egypt is not over one inch in a year, while we have more than that in Leominster in one good shower. In Cairo it was a standing joke with us each morning whether we should need an umbrella or rain coat,” p. 49. A basic description of Cairo and Port Said as part of an around-the-world trip. Brief, but Harwood seemed interested in what he saw. Illustrated with photographs. First appeared in the Leominster Daily Enterprise.

0991 Maule, Francis I.

Date of Travel: 1901
Nationality: American

Amusing and colorful letters from throughout Europe and Egypt. Spending about ten days and seven letters on Egypt, Maule stayed at Shepheard's Hotel in Cairo, finding the city to be a "shop-worn slice of stale Paris" except for the bazaars which were quite interesting. He takes a Cook's tour to Memphis and Saqqara, and finds it a typical "Cookie" with its "usual quota of absent men; obvious aunts, and of peradventure nieces." Fearing the Pyramids might be boring, he is certain to take a set of golf clubs.

0992 Mellander, A.

Date of travel: 1901
Nationality: American

Mellander made a brief stop in Egypt (Cairo), before continuing on to Europe after a trip to the Holy Land. Traveled with A.E. Karlson. UNREAD. In Swedish. Illustrated with photographs.

Nationality: American

Page, in the pages of his journal, describes a mix of the social life of the tourist and the antiquities passing by him. Traveling from Cairo to Wadi Halfa, Page, a local color writer of some note and later ambassador to Italy (1913–19), gives a basic account of the usual sights: "Having made such good time we were all in good spirits, which were a little dampened by the presence of a tourist boat at the wharf, which meant poor donkeys for us, and a crowded temple," p. 41. Illustrated with photographs.
0994 Pennock, Arthur Francis

Date of Travel: 1901
Nationality: American

A highly overwritten and overwrought account of Egypt, filled with facts and history. Pennock visited Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan. Illustrated with photographs.

0995 Simmons, John Collinson*, 1827–

Date of Travel: 1901
Nationality: American

At the age of 75, Simmons gives a well-written, awe-filled account of Cairo and Alexandria. Brief. Illustrated with photographs.

0996 Barton, William Eleazar, 1861–1930
The Old world in the new century; being the narrative of a tour of the Mediterranean, Egypt and the Holy Land, with some information about the voyage and places visited. Boston and Chicago: The Pilgrim Press, 1902. 487 p.

Date of Travel: 1901(?)
Nationality: American

“Cairo is the greatest winter resort on Earth. It is thronged with tourists and with winter guests. The presence of the latter gives the hotels their habit of ease and luxury, and make it difficult to serve an early breakfast,” p. 322. Visiting Alexandria, Cairo and the Nile to Aswan, Barton gives a basic account of Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

0997 Krausz, Sigmund

b. Towards the rising sun; a story of travel and adventure. Chicago: Laird & Lee, 1903. 302 p. Note: Published in German under the title: Zu land und see im Orient.
Date of Travel: 1901(?)  Nationality: American

Visiting Cairo, Luxor, and the Suez, Krausz gives a basic account of the usual sights. "There is no better educator for the inexperienced and no greater pleasure for the intellectual than travel," p. 6(b).

0998 Morrill, Gulian Lansing, 1857–1928

Date of Travel: 1901(?)  Nationality: American

An attempt at a humorous account of traveling through Egypt that sometimes works. Morrill visited Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor. "I’ve been to Egypt and feel that anything less than a mile high and a million years old is not worth looking at," p. 49. Morrill visited Egypt again in 1912(?).

0999 Agate, Margaret M.

Date of Travel: 1901–02  Nationality: British

A fun, chatty account illustrated with marvelous photographs taken by William Agate. Told in the form of journal entries, Agate tells of their trip from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, and then of the trip on to the Holy Land. Filled with the daily goings-on back in England and wondering as to what is going-on with their children: "This is the sixteenth anniversary of our wedding day, and I am sure we little dreamed, even twelve short months ago, that this year would see us in Egypt, starting early in the morning under the bluest of blue skies, clad in the thinnest of thin things, from Assouan to Philae, there to get the boat for Wadi Halfa!," p. 87. Also includes Agate’s account of their visit to the Heliopolis ostrich farm.

1000 McPherson, Joseph William, 1866–1946
Date of Travel: 1901–46  Nationality: British

These letters from McPherson to his family, written over 45 years from Egypt, offer an interesting insight into the life of a British official in Egypt. Well-edited and annotated, the volume includes a foreword by Lawrence Durrell. Illustrated with photographs.

1001 Loring, James M.
The old world through new world eyes; the development of the Orient & central Europe & Great Britain traced on chronological & geographical lines. St. Louis: Crossman, 1904. 110 p.

Date of Travel: 1902  Nationality: American

A very brief account of Alexandria and Cairo with a long section on the history of Egypt. Loring traveled with his wife, Anna P. Loring. Illustrated with photographs.

1002 Schaeck, Ivan de

Date of Travel: 1902  Nationality: Russian

The author, Grand Duc Boris, and a large entourage travel around the world, stopping in Egypt (Port Said, Cairo to Aswan), seeing the usual sights. A fascinating account of the Grand Duke’s trip, with many court stories and comments on their Cook’s tour. Illustrated with photographs.

1003 Morrison, Harry Steele, 1880–

Date of Travel: 1902(?)  Nationality: American

Working his way around the world on a ship, Morrison stops in Egypt and visits Suez and Cairo. Includes a long description of Cairo. Illustrated with photographs.

1004 Salmon, Percy R., 1872–
Date of Travel: 1902(?)  Nationality: British

A brief account of Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said), illustrated with photographs. Simplistic description of the antiquities.

1005 Zurbonsen, Anthony, 1860–
Rambles through Europe, the Holy Land and Egypt. St. Louis: B. Herder, 1903. 234 p.

Date of Travel: 1902(?)  Nationality: American

A brief account of Port Said, Cairo, and Alexandria that covers mostly historical subjects.

1006 Fuller, Henry, 1846–

Date of Travel: 1902–03  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world tour, Fuller made a brief stop in Egypt, visiting Port Said, Cairo, and the Nile as far south as Aswan. “Over undulating ridges of sand our course lay. Some stretches were drifted hard where our donkeys could gallop as well as California mustangs,” p. 235. Fuller was at the opening of the Aswan Dam and gives a detailed account. Illustrated with photographs. Appeared first as letters in the Redlands (California) Daily Review.

1007 Barton, George Aaron, 1859–1942

Date of Travel: 1903  Nationality: American

Barton, a Bryn Mawr professor, gives a brief, basic account of the usual sights of Port Said, Cairo, Luxor, and Alexandria. Illustrated with photographs.

Date of Travel: 1903  Nationality: Chilean

A basic account of the usual sights in Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan.
1009 Guerville, Amédée Baillot de, 1869–

a. NOT SEEN

b. Entertaining, highly professional account of Egypt by a seasoned travel writer. "To understand Egypt, to describe in a single volume its past glorious but in ruins, its present full of energy and work, its future of hope and promise, is humanly impossible. 'New Egypt' has not been written for my Egyptian friends, for those who know the land," p. xiv. Illustrated with photographs taken from other sources.

1010 Moore, Charles Chilton

Date of Travel: 1903 Nationality: American

“We may live without food; we may live without books, But civilized man cannot live without Cooks,” p. 11

The above couplet is a good example of Moore’s irreverent account of his brief tour through Alexandria and Cairo. A fun-filled and lively telling of the usual sights.

1011 Rosengarten, Mary D. (Richardson), 1846–1913

Date of Travel: 1903 Nationality: American

A native of Philadelphia, Rosengarten wrote a number of chatty letters to her family from Egypt. Her output was your basic letters from Egypt, unadorned with fancy prose or thoughts. The best part of the book are the "snapshot" photographs of Rosengarten at various sights in Europe and Egypt.
1012 Blatter, George John, 1861–

Date of Travel: 1903(?) Nationality: American

“We were accordingly not a little disgusted to find, that these ancient monuments [the Pyramids] are now in the hands of speculators, who have erected a ticket office near by and force the tourists to engage three guides apiece,” p. 193. Blatter, a priest who wrote these travel tales under the pseudonym Fiscar Marison to raise money to publish an English translation of Cuidad de Dios, gives a good account of the Pyramids. He also visited the Suez Canal area while on an around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs.

1013 Horn, Edward C.
Around the world; a narrative of a tour of the earth, setting forth the experiences of one who recently made the trip alone, with historical and descriptive data. Cincinnati, OH: Press of Jennings and Pye, 1904. 351 p.

Date of Travel: 1903(?) Nationality: American

“In Egypt a person is pestered day and night by natives, who are forever trying to sell something or to get a person to ride their donkeys or camels or ride in their carriages,” p. 239. As part of an around-the-world trip, Horn stopped in Egypt, traveling from Port Said to Cairo, and thence up the Nile to Aswan. Brief account; however, he does include a detailed description of the excavations of L. Dow Covington. Illustrated with photographs.

1014 Beaugé, Charles

Date of Travel: 1903–23 Nationality: French

Beaugé describes his adventures living in Upper Egypt. A good account of life in Egypt.

1015 Brooks, William Sampson, 1865–
Date of Travel: 1904  Nationality: American

A fascinating account by visitor to the Worlds' Fourth Sunday School Convention in Jerusalem. In Egypt, Brooks visited Alexandria, Cairo, the Sinai and Luxor. Illustrated with photographs.

1016 Byrum, Enoch Edwin, 1861–

Date of Travel: 1904  Nationality: American

“Although the leading religion is Mohammedanism, the way seems to be opening the gospel of Jesus Christ, and doubtless a good work can be done there by gospel workers who are filled with the Holy Spirit, and who preach and practice the full gospel,” p. 193. A brief trip to Alexandria and Cairo, where Byrum stays just long enough to see the Pyramids. Includes many Biblical quotations. Egypt was a stop on his around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs.

1017 Chamberlin, Frederick Carleton, 1870–

Date of Travel: 1904  Nationality: American

Traveling with his wife and daughter, Chamberlin visits only the Suez Canal area on an around-the-world trip. Illustrated with many good photographs.

1018 Iden, Thomas Medary, 1856–1933

Date of Travel: 1904  Nationality: American

“On this interesting spot [Heliopolis] I found my first live scarab, the sacred beetle of Egypt, and am bringing it home to one of the naturalists among you,” p. 72. A well done, interesting account in letter form, by Iden to the Upper Room Bible Class of Emporia, Kansas. Illustrated with photographs.
1019 Rew, Henry Cunningham
Wonders of the world abroad; being some reminiscences of a trip around the world. Buffalo and Cleveland: The Matthews-Northrup Works, 1907. 281 p.

Date of Travel: 1904
Nationality: American

Basic account of Egypt from Cairo to Luxor, and the Suez Canal. Includes little travel poems by the author; a fun book. Egypt was a stop on Rew's around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs.

1020 Studley, Elliott Francis, 1865–

Date of Travel: 1904
Nationality: American

A basic account, illustrated with Biblical quotations; visited Alexandria and Cairo. Attending the Worlds' Fourth Sunday School Convention. Illustrated with photographs.

1021 Trumbull, Charles Gallaudet, 1872–1941

Nationality: American

One of many visitors to the Holy Land as part of the Worlds' Fourth Sunday School Convention, Trumbull visited Alexandria and Cairo. An interesting account. On the heat: "We all lived through it, of course. You are sure you are not going to, but you do. Everyone does. That is the beauty of this dry heat of Egypt. But the sight of the Mayflower in the distance, resting placidly on the waters of the Nile, was like a benediction. And the number of scores of bottles of iced lemon soda that were sold on board the little boat that afternoon was all out of proportion to the number of passengers she carried," p. 340. A fellow pilgrim, Junius W. Millard, supplied Trumbull with an account of Luxor printed in the volume. Illustrated with photographs.

1022 Van Schoick, Robert William, 1843–
Nationality: American

Attending the Worlds' Fourth Sunday School Convention in Jerusalem, Van Schoick avoided all the side trips made in Egypt except for the Pyramids. "Our Saviour's brief sojourn in Egypt was long enough to make that land forever attractive to all lovers of the Bible and of Him Whom the Bible exalts as King of kings and Lord of lords," p. 183.

1023 Wiborg, Thomas Miller, 1835–1918

Date of Travel: 1904
Nationality: Swedish?

Visited Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and Nile to Aswan. UNREAD. Illustrated with photographs.

1024 Cuervo M®rquez, Emilio, 1873–1937

Date of Travel: 1904(?)
Nationality: Colombian

a. NOT SEEN

b. A detailed account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez area. Illustrated with photographs.

1025 Curtis, William Eleroy, 1850–1911
Egypt, Burma and British Malaysia. Chicago: F. H. Revell, 1905. 399 p.

Date of Travel: 1904(?)
Nationality: American

A not very personal, though very detailed account of the author's trip from Port Said to Cairo and up the Nile to Wadi Halfa and on to the Sudan before continuing on to the Far East. "There are disappointments in store for everybody who visits Egypt. For example, there are no crocodiles in the Nile," p. 139.
1026 Humières, Robert vicomte d’, 1868–1915

Date of Travel: 1904 (?) Nationality: French

The isle is Britain and the Empire British. D’Humières attempts to get at what makes the British British in a very good book. The brief section on Egypt (approximately 31 pages) is mostly impressionistic. This edition is prefaced with a letter from Rudyard Kipling dated August 1904.

1027 Falcao de Sommer, Branca and Fernanda Falcao de Sommer
Égypte, Palestine, Syrie, Turquie, Grèce, Italie. Davos: Impr. de Davos s.-a, 1908. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1904–05 Nationality: Portuguese

An excellent, simple account of Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan via the Suez Canal. In French. Illustrated with photographs by Luiz Falcao de Sommer.

1028 Franck, Harry Alverson, 1881–

Date of Travel: 1905 Nationality: American

Both of these are nearly the same, though the later edition was “rewritten” by Lena M. Franck. Both are Franck’s chatty account of his around-the-world trip. A brief stop in Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

1029 Godbey, William Baxter, 1833–1920

Date of Travel: 1905 Nationality: American

Traveling around the world with Allie Irick (q.v.), and Edward and John Roberts, Godbey writes a much less interesting account than Irick. Godbey had visited Egypt twice before: once in 1894 where he wrote an account, and again in 1899 when he spent much of his time watching the others visit places (no account written).

1030 Hart, Jerome Alfred, 1854–

Date of Travel: 1905 Nationality: American

A slick, professional account by Hart, a travel writer, of Port Said and the Nile from Cairo to Wadi Halfa.

1031 Howe, Edgar Watson, 1854–
Daily notes of a trip around the world. Topeka, KS: Crane & Company, 1907. 2 v.

Date of Travel: 1905 Nationality: American

“One sees queer sights in the dining-room of a big tourist hotel. At dinner this evening, at the Ghezirah Palace, a girl came into the dining-room dressed as a child of three, with a very short dress, and bare legs. She was fat, and certainly fifteen years old,” p. 185–86. Howe, editor of the Atchinson Globe, visits the sights around Cairo, Port Said and the Suez Canal, giving a very readable, entertaining account, much of which is the description of his fellow tourists.

1032 Irick, Allie
A journey 'round the world. Louisville, KY: Pentecostal Herald, 1907. 306 p.

Date of Travel: 1905 Nationality: American

“There are a number of earnest, persistent, active and loyal Christian workers in the cities of Egypt, who are doing most practical and efficient work for the Master, and on the other hand, there are others, who appear just to have a mere profession and the spirit and character of the world seem to add another plague to Egypt,” pp. 94–95. Irick, a Southern Evangelist on a missionary tour around the world, stopped briefly in Egypt, visiting Cairo and Memphis, giving a quite good account of the Pyramids. Traveled with Edward and John Roberts and W.B. Godbey (q.v.). Illustrated with photographs.
1033 Straus, Flora Stieglitz
Aegypten 1905. [Album of original photographs taken by Flora Straus' mother on a trip to Egypt]. n.p. n.d. 1 v.

Date of Travel: 1905 Nationality: UNKNOWN

NOT SEEN. CITED IN MET. CAT.

1034 Wheeler, William Webb, 1845–1925

Date of Travel: 1905 Nationality: American

A wholesale dealer in dry goods, Wheeler circulated his letters to family and friends and was persuaded to publish them. Wheeler tells of the Wheeler family's (Mr., Mrs., and son Webb) two-week stay in Egypt with a proper measure of middle-class scorn and humor ("On arrival at Cairo we went directly to the hotel Continental... At breakfast we asked for bacon and eggs, our usual breakfast, but the waiter said, 'No, will you have an omelet and coffee?' As we had to have that or nothing, we cheerfully took what we could get, and complied with the ways of the land" p. 55). Wheeler does make some gross factual errors, placing the discovery of the Rosetta Stone at Philae for example, a bit of information probably related him by an overzealous guide. Illustrated with photographs of the Wheeler family in suits and long skirts in the blazing heat with pith helmets firmly on head. The Wheelers traveled to Egypt again in 1910 (q.v.).

1035 Barry, John Patrick

Date of Travel: 1905(?) Nationality: British

As part of a Mediterranean cruise, Barry made a stop in Alexandria. A dull account. Includes a great deal of history. Illustrated with photographs.

1036 Chautard, E.
Au pays des pyramides. Tours: Mame, 1906. 224 p.

Date of Travel: 1905(?) Nationality: French

NOT SEEN. CITED IN NUC.
1037 Oehler, James C., 1857–

Date of Travel: 1905 (?) Nationality: American

A rather dull, Biblically-oriented account of Alexandria and Cairo. Illustrated with photographs.

1038 Falls, J. C. Ewald, 1885–

Date of Travel: 1905–07 Nationality: German

A detailed, though dry account of Falls’ trip with a scientific expedition (the Menas Expedition or Carl Maria Kaufmann Expedition) through the Libyan Desert. Also visits Alexandria, the Natrum Lake area, and Siwa. Illustrated with photographs.

1039 Ade, George, 1866–1944

Date of Travel: 1906 Nationality: American

Ade, a humorist and playwright, gives a very humorous account of an American’s adventures in Egypt. Full of stories about his fellow travelers (“By the way, when a pious Englishman over here, say a bishop on vacation, wishes to relieve his feeling without the actual use of profanity he exclaims ‘Assouan!’ . . . ‘Assouan’ means the superlative of all dams . . . it takes the place of a whole row of these ———,” p. 155.). Ade visits Cairo, the Pyramids and Sphinx and sails up the Nile through Luxor to Aswan. Includes some very funny illustrations. Pages 135–309 are devoted to Egypt.

1040 Bertrand, Louis, 1866–1941

a. NOT SEEN.

1041 Brianchaninov, Nikolai

Date of Travel: 1906 Nationality: Russian

Brianchaninov describes his visit to Nubia in this account. Illustrated with photographs.

1042 Bryan, William Jennings, 1860-1925

Date of Travel: 1906 Nationality: American

Bryan, the "prairie populist", and several times candidate for U.S. President, visited Egypt (Alexandria to Luxor, and on to the Suez Canal) as part of his around-the-world trip. "We reached Egypt after the regular tourist season was over and could not visit all the ruins. We selected the most famous, those of the two ancient cities, Thebes, and Memphis, and they alone would repay a visit to Egypt," p. 316. Amazed by the antiquity of Egypt, Bryan gives an interesting account. Traveled with wife, Grace, and son, William Jr. Illustrated with photographs.

1043 Carlisle, George Lister, 1852-

Date of Travel: 1906 Nationality: American

A retired New York lawyer on an around-the-world trip with his wife and daughter, Carlisle gives a very detailed account of Egypt (Port Said, and Cairo to Aswan). Includes a history of Lord Crommer. Illustrated with photographs.

1044 Cudahy, Patrick
Experiences of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Cudahy on a journey to a portion of the oldest historical parts of the world during the first four months of 1906. Milwaukee, WI: privately printed, 1907. 151 p.

Date of Travel: 1906 Nationality: American

A basic, but endearing little account of Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and Port Said). Illustrated with photographs.

1045 Reinhart, Rudolf
Album of Egyptian and Turkish photographs assembled by Rudolf and Lula H. Reinhart in 1906 on their wedding trip. 2 v. 196 mounted plates.

NOT SEEN. CITED IN MET. CAT.

1046 Tyndale, Walter

Date of Travel: 1906(?) Nationality: British

"This book is a record of a painter who has spent some years of study and of work in the Nile valley. He has pondered long over the strange beauty of the Egyptian monuments; and if, either by illustration or description, he now succeeds in aiding others to an appreciation of the wonders and the mystery of these remains of the most ancient civilisation, and of the picturesqueness of life in Egypt to-day, he will not have parted nor written in vain," p. v. Good, basic descriptions of the sights from Alexandria to Luxor. Illustrated with 60 plates in color by the author.

1047 Forster, C. Henry

Date of Travel: 1907 Nationality: American

Traveling to the Worlds' Sunday School Convention of 1907 in Rome, Forster visited Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez area), giving a very brief, though very well done account, for a privately-printed book. "In a few hours we reach the hotel in Alexandria, Egypt, where a Mohammedan is praying in the hallway of the building. It was my first experience in a heathen land, and one long to be remembered," [p.6 of an unpaged book]. Illustrated with photographs taken by Forster.

1048 Peck, Ellen Mary (Hayes)

Date of Travel: 1907
Nationality: American

With just a brief stop in Port Said and Cairo before going on to India, Peck shops in Cairo, visits the mosques and Coptic churches, and the Egyptian museum. A short visit, told in letters to her daughter. Illustrated with photographs.

1049 Taylor, Horace A., 1837–

Date of Travel: 1907
Nationality: American

A former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Taylor stopped in Egypt, traveling from Alexandria to Aswan, on his around-the-world trip.

1050 Viaud, Julian, 1850–1923

Date of Travel: 1907
Nationality: French

a. Using the pseudonym Pierre Loti, Viaud wrote one of the more popular books on Egypt. Seeing all the sights from Cairo to Aswan, Viaud is highly critical of the British (the French title refers to the drowning of the temple of Philae by the British dam at Aswan). "Et, dès que notre barque a passé au-dessins du sevil sacré, les bateliers interrompant leur chanson, poussent en suprise le cri nouveau qu'on leur a appris à l'usage des touristes: Hip! hip!

b. First English edition was translated by W.P. Baines and illustrated by Augustus Lamplough (q.v.).

1051 Wilder, Marshall Pinckney, 1859–1915

Date of Travel: 1907  Nationality: American

Visiting Egypt (Port Said, Cairo) as part of an around-the-world tour, Wilder gives a brief, though entertaining and funny account of his stay. Illustrated with photographs.

1052 Sladen, Douglas Brooke Wheelton, 1856–1947

Date of Travel: 1907(?)  Nationality: British

a. A very jingoistic attempt to arouse fears of losing Egypt to the Germans (or worse). Traveled throughout Egypt, describing the usual sights as he traveled with Cook and Sons by train and steamer up the Nile. “One of the great charms of Egypt, and still more of the Sudan, consists in the type of Young Englishman you see carrying on the administration of the country,” p. xxiv.

b. Less shrill than the above, this is more of a guidebook by a professional writer. Ends with a chapter critical of Julian Viaud’s La Mort de Philae (q.v.). Illustrated with photographs.
c. A history of Cairo with all the sights described. Illustrated with poor photographs by the author.

1053 Stobl, Karl Hans, 1877–1946

Date of Travel: 1907(?)
Nationality: German

A basic account of Port Said, Cairo and Alexandria. Includes a trip to the Pyramids. Illustrated with photographs.

1054 Thackeray, Lance, d. 1916

Date of Travel: 1907(?)
Nationality: British

a. Traveling from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, Thackeray illustrated the trip with 36 humorous color sketches accompanied by text that is inseparable from the pictures themselves. Includes an introduction by George Ade (q.v.).

b. After an unsigned, brief, introduction in the third person, the rest of this book is more of Thackeray’s sketches of Europeans in Egypt.

1055 Carson, Blanche Mabury

Date of Travel: 1907–08
Nationality: American

Witty book, full of details and stories from Carson’s travels from Port Said, to Cairo and on to Aswan. She sees the usual sights, and comments on her fellow travelers: “Apropos of harems: An amusing incident happened to Mr. and Mrs. Gorham and their friend, Miss Cox, guests at our hotel. They were told that one passport would suffice for all three on their recent trip through Palestine. Later they discovered on examination that it was made out in the true Oriental fashion: ‘Gorham Pasha and harem,’ which resulted in somewhat mixed feelings in the whole trio as to just who was who,” p. 36. Illustrated with photographs.
1056 Finney, Frederick Norton, 1832–1916

Date of Travel: 1907–08 Nationality: American

Finney’s first trip to Egypt was in 1893 with his wife. This collection of letters written to his grown children is quite personal, with many references to matters at home and friends seen abroad. With Baedeker in hand, Finney takes a steamer up the Nile, visiting all the sights and commenting on how they have changed in the last fourteen years. Near Aswan, he gives a good account of the building (then still going on), of the first Aswan Dam. In Cairo, he visits mosques, the Islamic Museum, and the Zoo. An interesting account by the “average” nonliterary traveler writing with no apparent plan of publication.

1057 Lorimer, Norma Octavia, 1864–

Date of Travel: 1907–08 Nationality: British

A professional writer of travel tales, Lorimer writes in the form of letters home that seem to be simply a literary device. Her trip from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, with side trips to the Libyan oases, is a fairly common description. Includes some moments of humor: “By this time the different people in our ‘Cook party’ are beginning to mean something to me. I no longer think of them collectively as ‘Cook’s tourists’; they have names and many of them much individuality. One of them fell off her donkey to-day, but as she was of German nationality and build neither her nerves nor her limbs suffered,” p. 181. Illustrated by Benton Fletcher and also with photographs.

1058 Hichens, Robert Smythe, 1864–1950

Date of Travel: 1907–08(?) Nationality: American(?)

a. NOT SEEN
b. A well-written, but disengaged work. Covers all the details of Egypt from Alexandria to Aswan, but has neither energy nor spirit. "Why do you come to Egypt? Do you come to gain a dream, or to regain lost dreams of old; to gild your life with the dreamy gold of romance, to lose a creeping sorrow, to forget that too many of your hours are sullen, gray, bereft? What do you wish of Egypt?" p. 5. Illustrated with paintings by Jules Guérin and photographs. Note: First edition issued under the title Egypt and its monuments.

1059 Weigall, Arthur Edward Pearse Brome, 1880–1934

Date of Travel: 1907–09 Nationality: British

"The Upper Egyptian desert is a country known only to a very few," p. 3. Weigall, the Inspector General of Upper Egypt, Department of Antiquities, tries to make the area a little better known through this account of his travels. Includes a great deal of archaeological detail. Some chapters appeared in Blackwood's Magazine. Illustrated with photographs.
1908–1918

1060 Gardner, John Milton, 1858–

Date of Travel: 1908  Nationality: American

Basic account of Alexandria, Cairo and Luxor. Brief. Illustrated with pen drawings by Frederick M'Allister from photographs by the author.

1061 Hoffmeister, Edoard von, 1852–

Date of Travel: 1908  Nationality: German

A basic account of the Fayyum, Cairo, and Port Said on Hoffmeister’s trip through the Levant. Illustrated with photographs.

1062 Lamplough, Augustus Osborne, 1877–1930 and R. Francis

Date of Travel: 1908  Nationality: British

Lamplough, an English architectural painter, concentrated on North African scenes from early on in his career. Lamplough traveled from Alexandria to Aswan, but concentrates on Cairo in this book. The streets, shops, and Europeans in Egypt are his main subjects. “Everything along the road that leads to Old Cairo and Roda Island emphasizes the climax of destruction and modernity in Cairo,” p. 52. The illustrations by Lamplough (colored prints from paintings) are interesting, but the text only average. Lamplough also illustrated Julian Viaud’s La morte de Philae (q.v.); as well as a guidebook to Egypt, Egypt and How to See It (1907).
Mather, Amasa Stone

Date of Travel: 1908  Nationality: American

Traveling from Cairo to Aswan as part of his around-the-world trip, Mather gives a brief, disinterested, account of Egypt, told in letters home. Illustrated with photographs.

Stephens, Edwin William, 1849–

Date of Travel: 1908  Nationality: American

A brief, fact-filled description of Egypt, particularly the Suez Canal area and Cairo, which Stephens visited as part of an around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs. First appeared in his local paper (unnamed).

Young, Christopher C., 1873–

Date of Travel: 1908  Nationality: American

Brief account of Alexandria and Cairo. Mostly a history of Egypt.

Bierbaum, Otto Julius, 1865–1910

Date of Travel: 1908(?)  Nationality: German

Bierbaum, a German man-of-letters, visited Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor. This interesting account contains his journals as well as letters home. Illustrated with photographs and caricatures.

Bigger, Leander Adams, 1844–

Date of Travel: 1908(?)  Nationality: American

A detailed account of Egypt from Cairo to Aswan. Bigger, a friend of presidents (or so he claims) from Lincoln to Roosevelt, sees all the sights, and writes an entertaining account. "Egypt has no newspapers—that is, native newspapers. There may be a few in Cairo and Alexandria, but of the thousands of natives we have seen, not one had a newspaper or book in his hand, except the Koran, either in city or country. Neither have we seen a game of cards," p. 162. Illustrated with photographs.

1068 Matthews, Frances Elizabeth (Morgan), Mrs., 1842–

Date of Travel: 1908(?)  Nationality: 1908(?)

A basic, touristical account of Alexandria, Cairo, and the Nile to Luxor. Illustrated with photographs.

1069 Miethe, Adolf, 1862–1927
Unter der Sonne Oberägyptens, neben den Pfaden der Wissen-

Date of Travel: 1908(?)  Nationality: German

Port Said, Cairo, the Nile to Aswan and Wadi Halfa, and Alexandria are described by Miethe in this account of the usual sights. A bit guidebookish. Illustrated with photographs.

1070 Stein, Grace Maxine

Date of Travel: 1908(?)  Nationality: American

A pedantic (pronunciation guides are given for each country she visits), but brief, account of Egypt (Port Said, Cairo, Luxor) visited by Stein on her around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs.
1071 Withers, Percy, 1867–

Date of Travel: 1908(?)  Nationality: British

A good, basic account of the antiquities of Egypt (including a very good section on the temple at Philae: “All around, in every direction, is havoc and loss. The noble east and west colonnades, which formed the approach from the water-side to the entrance of the temple, are sunk nearly to their capitals; the gateway of the Emperor Hadrian with its sculptured records, is half submerged; and, further away, the temple of Augustus is buried to the roof,” p. 187). The book does not have much on the present; however, there is a chapter on the health benefits of Egypt. Withers traveled from Cairo to Wadi Halfa. Illustrated with photographs.

1072 Allen, Etheldred M.

Date of Travel: 1908; 1912  Nationality: British

On his first trip to Egypt, Allen visited Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, and the Nile to Aswan. On the second trip, in 1912, he made the same trip, but added Port Said, and traveled further into Nubia. A basic account. “We went to Gizah to-day to see the Pyramids. We went there by electric tram! An elderly American was in the car with us, one of those people who excite your wonder as to why they travel at all,” p. 41. Illustrated with photographs.

1073 Bidwell, Daniel Doane, 1865–
As far as the East is from the West: tales of a traveler who toured the world toward the rising sun. Hartford, CT: S.S. Scranton, 1910. 231 p.

Date of Travel: 1909  Nationality: American

“Do you wish to see a human omelette, one-half comic opera and the other half circus? Sit on the wide piazza of the Continental [in Cairo] and scrutinize the passing show as it mixes and disentangles beneath the splendid equestrian statue of Ibrahim Pasha on the Place Ezbekieh,” p. 55. A good, basic account of Cairo and the Pyramids by Bidwell—“A.B. Yale”—on his trip around the world. Illustrated with photographs.
1074 Fisher, Harriet White

Date of Travel: 1909  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip by car with her Boston bull terrier Honk-Honk, Fisher made a brief stop in Egypt (Port Said, Cairo), seeing the usual sights. “The sand and desert are impossible for motor-cars at this time, but I think it will be only a short time before they will have lovely rides all around Cairo,” p. 56. Illustrated with many fun photographs of Honk-Honk, Fisher and her car in curious spots.

1075 Gordon, Benjamin Lee, 1870–1965

Date of Travel: 1909  Nationality: American

Visiting Alexandria, Cairo, and the Pyramids before going off to the Holy Land, Gordon was exploring the Jewish presence in the Middle East. In addition to seeing all the usual sights, he visited Hebrew Schools in Cairo and commented on the political and economic condition of Jews in Egypt. Interesting account of Jewish life in turn-of-the-century Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

1076 Saveliev, Leon
a. [The country of the Southern sun]. Moscow, 1910

Date of Travel: 1909  Nationality: Russian

a. NOT SEEN

b. As a member of the Congrès International d'Archéologie, Savelieff attended their second meeting in Cairo in 1909. While in Egypt, he took the opportunity to travel up the Nile to Luxor and Aswan. An interesting account.

1077 Simmonds, Irene
Date of Travel: 1909  Nationality: American

Very brief account of Port Said and Cairo. Simmonds took a quick Cook’s tour.

1078 Smith, William Spooner, 1821–1916

Date of Travel: 1909  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Smith, at age 87, stops briefly in Alexandria and the Suez Canal area before going on to the Holy Land.

1079 Leuchs-Mack, Maximilian, 1878–

Date of Travel: 1909(?)  Nationality: German

Traveling from Cairo to Nubia, Leuchs-Mack’s account is more of a guidebook as he gives a detailed account of Egyptian history. Illustrated with photographs.

1080 Painter, Lydia Ethel Farmer, 1842–

Date of Travel: 1909(?)  Nationality: American

A very overwritten account, privately printed by Kenyon V. Painter. Traveling from Cairo to Abu Simbel, the author does show a great love for the Egypt of the antiquities: “There came a day when the Song of Memnon was finished, his voice silent; but over on the hills-of Eos the sunrise comes in undimmed glory, and over the plains of Thebes the dewy tears of Eos fall in glistening drops of refreshment upon the grateful clover round the spirit-forsaken Colossi,” p. 69.

1081 King, William Joseph Harding, 1869–
Traveling in a well-organized expedition to the Libyan desert to gather information for the Royal Geographic Society, King meets with the natives, has various adventures, all told in a style very reminiscent of the National Geographic Magazine. Illustrated by photographs taken by the author.

1082 Allen, George Hoyt, 1857–1938

“I didn’t know as there is anything particularly new and exciting to write about those pyramids, but I will say that they have held their own amazingly well,” p. 122. A flippant little account of Allen’s trip around the world, with a brief stop in Egypt. His account first appeared as letters in the magazine La Follette’s. Illustrated with photographs.

1083 Bush, George Tome, 1867–
40,000 miles around the world: a personal narrative of the experiences and impressions of an energetic traveller who crossed the Equator and the Arctic circle in the tour. Howard, PA: Howard Hustler Print, 1911. 190 p.

“We were accosted on every side in our walk about the city by an army of dragomen to go and visit the ‘Hootchy-Kootchy’ dance, the dance with naked women, and would suggest to you all sorts of vileness or indecency that could possibly be thought of,” p. 114. Bush did not like his stay in Egypt where he saw mostly Cairo. Part of an around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs.

1084 Cosman, Albert Charles
ter Emily on their trip through Egypt in 1910. Cosman took care of the Roosevelts on their train trip from Cairo to Luxor, seeing them safely to the Winter Palace Hotel. After they visited the Sudan, Cosman saw them back to Cairo where they stayed at Shepheard’s Hotel. Cosman recounts how after leaving the Roosevelts, Teddy gave a speech at the El Ahzar University in Cairo soon after the assassination of the unpopular Pasha. Roosevelt praised the slain despot arousing the ire of the Cairenes to such a pitch that he had to be hustled out of Cairo to Alexandria and off to Italy. Cosman’s book, written 30 years after the fact—when he came to live in the United States, includes facsimiles of letters to and from members of Congress, the FDR’s White House, and the Roosevelt family.

1085 Fonvizin, S.

Date of Travel: 1910          Nationality: Russian

a. Fonvizin visited Egypt from Cairo to Aswan before going on to the Holy Land.

b. A brief, chatty account of Cairo as Fonvizin stops in Egypt during his trip to the Holy Land.

1086 Frizell, William Givens, 1866–, and George Henry Greenfield

Date of Travel: 1910          Nationality: American

“Upon our arrival at the hotel, the unexpected news of King Edward’s death was reported to us. Mr. Milton A. McRai, who was at Shepherd’s [sic] Hotel ten years ago at the time of Queen Victoria’s death, contrasted the great lamentation then with the entire absence of any demonstration this time,” p. 279. On an around-the-world trip, Frizell’s account of Egypt (Port Said and Cairo) is very brief and basic. Illustrated with photographs.
Nile Notes of a Howadji

1087 Wheeler, William Webb, 1845–1925

Date of Travel: 1910  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip, Wheeler stopped briefly in Egypt (Port Said, Cairo), staying only two days in Cairo to see the Pyramids. Traveled with his wife. The Wheelers had visited Egypt before in 1905 (q.v.). Illustrated with photographs.

1088 Willard, Helen Parker (Wilson), Mrs., 1873–

Date of Travel: 1910  Nationality: American

Helen and Harry Willard, along with their three children, Henry Augustus, William Bradley, and Sarah Kellog take their first trip abroad which includes, after Europe, a trip to Egypt. Helen Willard’s chronicle is a delightful, innocent account of Egypt: “. . . we had a second unpleasant experience with careless and reckless driving. Our driver, in crossing a car-track, pulled a wheel from our carriage. Fortunately our vehicle was a very low one; nevertheless we all tumbled out one on top of the other . . .” (p. 34). The family rides donkeys and camels and visit all the sights as far south as Aswan. Illustrated with entertaining “snapshot” photos of the family along the route. A very entertaining book.

1089 Copping, Arthur Edward, 1865–

Date of Travel: 1910(?)  Nationality: British

“Cairo made my eyeballs ache. It is a city of coloured splendour, alive and moving, with a hundred gay pigments astir in the sunshine, and every thoroughfare stuffed full, as it seems, of processioning and pageantry,” p. 17. Egypt was only a short stop for Copping (Alexandria, Cairo, Pyramids, Suez) on his way to the Holy Land. An exuberant account with detailed illustrations, some in color, by the author’s brother, Harold Copping. Most of the book is devoted to Palestine. Illustrated by Harold Copping.

1090 Fahmy-Bey, J. (pseud. of D'Ivray, Jehan)
Date of Travel: 1910(?)  Nationality: French

A bit of daily life in Egypt as seen by a young Frenchwoman. Describes Alexandria and Cairo.

1091 Kassner, Theo

Date of Travel: 1910(?)  Nationality: British

A brief account of Egypt as Kassner travels from Central Africa to the Mediterranean. Illustrated with photographs.

1092 Kent, Annabelle

Date of Travel: 1910(?)  Nationality: American

Kent, totally deaf, made her around-the-world trip to prove a hearing-impaired person could do it. She made a brief stop in Egypt (Port Said, Cairo), told in letters. A good, chatty account. “The Continental is one of the largest of the Cairo hotels, and as this is the height of the season, one might almost fancy oneself in England, if it were not for the Arab and French servants,” p. 40. Illustrated with photographs.

1093 Mattson, Peter August, 1865–

Date of Travel: 1910(?)  Nationality: American?

A detailed account of Port Said, Suez, and Cairo. In Danish. Illustrated with photographs.

1094 Nichols, William Ford, 1849–

Date of Travel: 1910(?)  Nationality: American

An Episcopalian bishop on an around-the-world trip, sponsored by his diocese to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of his episcopacy, Nichols stops in Egypt and travels from Alexandria to Cairo, and up the Nile to Luxor with a side trip from Port Said as he started his visit. An entertaining account, well-written. Illustrated with photographs.

1095 Johnson, Solomon
Notes on travels including a trip around the world by way of Australia. Columbus, OH: The F. J. Heer Printing Co., 1914. 295 p.

Date of Travel: 1911 Nationality: American

A brief account of Johnson’s visit to Port Said and Cairo as part of an around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs.

1096 Stine, Milton Henry, 1853–

Date of Travel: 1911 Nationality: American

Mostly a collection of facts on cities in the Levant, including Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor. Traveled with his wife. See 1890 for his personal-travel account. Illustrated with photographs.

1097 White, Alma (Bridwell), 1862–

Date of Travel: 1911 Nationality: American

a. White visited Alexandria and Cairo in her trip to Egypt. This, the first edition of the work varied little from the later edition.

b. “Some years ago, when engaged in missionary work in Montana, the Lord made it known to me that some say I should visit the actual places in Egypt and Palestine, not as a mere sightseer, but in the interests of His work and Kingdom,” p. 13. Contrary to this stated goal, White saw all the sights of Cairo, including the Pyramids and Sphinx, but not much missionary work.
Interesting in parts, although most of the book is concerned with Palestine. Illustrated with photographs.

1098 Alder, Lydia Dunford, 1846–

Date of Travel: 1911(?) Nationality: American

Filled with facts and a long section on the Suez Canal, Alder's account of Port Said, Cairo, and Alexandria is informative but not too interesting. Includes a poem on Egypt:

“What secret dread behind ye lies?
What happened when the Sphinx was young?
What gaze ye on, ye sightless eyes,
E'er turning to the rising sun?”

p. 363

1099 Fletcher, Alfred Charles Benson, 1885–

Date of Travel: 1911(?) Nationality: American

Working his way around the world, Fletcher worked as a sailor in Suez, making a side trip to Cairo. “A man at the American Presbyterian Mission in Cairo told us that there were a crowd of American ‘free-lovers’ in Jerusalem who frequently entertained travelers,” p. 188. Traveled with R.J. Richardson. Illustrated with photographs.

1100 Francis, René

Date of Travel: 1911(?) Nationality: British

After a history of Egypt, Francis concentrates on the traits of the ancient Egyptians that led them to develop the artistic/aesthetic sense that they did. Traveling from Alexandria to Wadi Halfa, with side trips to the Fayyum and the Sinai, she writes a fascinating book. “Wadi Halfa itself is nothing. There is a grubby Soudanese village, and there are a few ancient tombs in the hills to the east. The rest is all flat sand around the town buildings, haunted by low-flying vultures,” p. 264.
1101 Freeman, Henrietta Bennett, 1860–

Date of Travel: 1911(?) Nationality: American

Breezy, brief little account of Cairo and Port Said visited on an around-the-world trip.

1102 Marden, Philip Sanford, 1874–

Date of Travel: 1911(?) Nationality: American

A book in two parts. The first part is a basic, professional, “tour book” account of Egypt. The second part, is the journal of Marden on his travels from Alexandria to Aswan. The first part, with facts and figures, is quite dull; the second, much more personal, is more interesting: “Some people will be so unkind as to tell you, no doubt, as they told us, that the so-called Assiut shawls are made in Vienna, or in Connecticut. But why believe that? Do they not look truly Oriental? Are they not, at all events, sold in Assiut?” p. 213. Illustrated with photographs.

1103 Perkins, Angie Villette (Warren)

Date of Travel: 1911(?) Nationality: American

Perkins gives a sprightly account of the usual sights in Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor. Illustrated with photographs and pen-and-ink drawings.

1104 Elsey, Charles William, 1880–
Journeying with Jesus: as the days go by in that dormant land where rest the ashes of patriarchs, prophets and kings of whom the world was not worthy. Boston: R.G. Badger, 1913. 307 p.

Date of Travel: 1912 Nationality: American

A rather pedestrian account, laden with religious quotation and discussions on how to relate the present state of Egypt to Biblical prophecy ("Yet the great intelligence of ancient Egypt did not preserve its sons from gross moral corruption, and no worldly wisdom was able to provide against the descending arm of judgement,” p. 83). Arranged in the form of a sermon with the descriptive passages as glosses on the Biblical text. An interesting passage occurs when Elsey tells how he had meant to book passage in Cairo on the Titanic, but was unable to after hearing of its disaster.

1105 Hart, Arthur Wellington, 1848–

Date of Travel: 1912 Nationality: American

“A correct memorandum of a trip to London and Stratford, Paris and Marseilles, Rome and Naples, Egypt and the Sudan, taken from the daily record of events kept during the trip with a particular view to the comical side of all occurrences, descriptions omitted.” Spending 21 days and 25 pages on Egypt, Hart is true to his title, telling us of Shepheard’s Hotel’s lack of sufficient towels and his trip to the Luxor Turf Club where he watches donkeys, pigs, dogs and camels race. Hart travelled as far as Wadi Halfa, stopping at all the sights, but describes none.

1106 Kaminka, Armand, 1866–1950

Date of Travel: 1912 Nationality: German

A basic account of Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said as Kaminka traveled on to the Holy Land.

1107 Parkhurst, Lewis, 1856–

Date of Travel: 1912 Nationality: American

Parkhurst, a publisher, traveled with his wife and son Richard, Mr. and Mrs. T.W. Gilson, Mrs. Pond, Irene De Witt, John Gile and a guide, Miss Watson, from Alexandria to Aswan. Seeing the usual sights, they also go to some unusual events: “Our ladies had a rare experience last evening. Through Mrs. Robert Talbot Kelly (q.v.) they were invited to a ‘Mohammedan hen party.’ The ladies of the Khedive and other first families gave a fête in a private residence, or palace, for some charitable purpose; no men wanted, or at least not invited,” p. 88. Illustrated with photographs taken by the party and pencil sketches by the author.

1108 Royce, Charles C., 1845–1923

Date of Travel: 1912  Nationality: American

“Printed exclusively for private circulation among . . . friends,” this diary account of Royce’s travels from Chico, California across the United States to Egypt and the Holy Land is honestly done, and a simple account of the sights he saw daily, his illnesses, and impressions. Royce traveled up the Nile aboard the boat Mayflower as far as Philae.

1109 Struthers, C. B.

Date of Travel: 1912  Nationality: American

Diary-style entries describing Struthers’ brief stop in Alexandria and Port Said on an around-the-world trip.

1110 Tiffany, Flavel Benjamin

Date of Travel: 1912  Nationality: American

Traveling with his wife, Tiffany made a brief stop in Alexandria before continuing on to the Holy Land. Being an oculist, he makes some interesting comments on ophthalmia. Illustrated with photographs.

1111 Alexander, Frances Gordon (Paddock)
Date of Travel: 1912(?)  Nationality: American

A pair of women (the author and Lady Evelyn Cobbold, q.v.) travel alone on a nineteen-day trip with only Bedouin guides across the desert from Cairo to the Fayyum. They stopped along the way at the Pyramids and Saqqara. A good little adventure, even though at this late a date, it was not that dangerous. “After nineteen days of the simple life it is with mixed feelings that we enter again the rush and turmoil of civilization. What have the past days held for us but endless variety, beauty, color, and interest; and every hour has had its charm. Truly the desert, like the sea, ‘washes away the cares of me,’ ” p. 257. Illustrated with photographs. “Note: Prepared jointly by Lady Evelyn Cobbold and Frances Gordon Alexander. The American edition appeared under Mrs. Alexander’s name, the English under Lady Evelyn Cobbold’s, the text differing slightly.”

1112 Cobbold, Evelyn (Murray), 1867–

Date of Travel: 1912(?)  Nationality: British

A word-for-word repeat of Frances Gordon Alexander’s work (q.v.). The women apparently wrote the book together and then issued it in their respective countries under their name only. This version has slightly fewer photographs in it, otherwise, it is exactly the same. “Note: Prepared jointly by Lady Evelyn Cobbold and Frances Gordon Alexander. The American edition appeared under Mrs. Alexander’s name, the English under Lady Evelyn Cobbold’s, the text differing slightly.”

1113 Fitch, George Hamlin, 1852–1915

Date of Travel: 1912(?)  Nationality: American

On an around-the-world tour, Fitch makes a brief stop in Egypt, visiting Port Said, Cairo, and Luxor. A tourbook-like account with descriptions of likely encounters: “These street peddlers are wonderfully keen judges of nationality and they manage to make life a burden to the American Tourist for their unwearied and smiling persistence,” p. 139.
1114 Kummer, Fritz, 1875–

Date of Travel: 1912(?) Nationality: German

On an around-the-world trip, Kummer visited Cairo and Port Said. A very brief account, mostly about the Suez Canal. Illustrated with photographs.

1115 Lichnowsky, Mechtilde Christiane Maria (von Arco-Zinneberg), 1879–1958

Date of Travel: 1912(?) Nationality: German

a. NOT SEEN

b. Traveling from Aswan to Cairo down the Nile, Lichnowsky gives a good, informal account of the sights, with many details on the antiquities. Illustrated with photographs and drawings.

1116 Morrill, Gulian Lansing, 1857–1928

Date of Travel: 1912(?) Nationality: American

“The auto’s honk has drowned out the Muezzin’s cry. You motor to the Pyramids, take a Martini before you climb on and crawl in them; stand up by the Sphinx with a cigarette in your mouth and have your picture taken,” p. 157. An amusing, but brief account of Egypt as Morrill stops in Port Said and Cairo on his around-the-world trip. Morrill visited before in 1901(?). Illustrated with photographs.

1117 Randolph, Howard Stelle Fitz, 1883–1959

Date of Travel: 1912(?) Nationality: American

A very brief account of Randolph’s trip from Cairo to Aswan, a stop on his around-the-world trip. Illustrated with photographs.
1118 Todd, John A.
Date of Travel: 1912(?) Nationality: British
More of a history book with some personal anecdotes. Todd traveled all over Egypt. Illustrated with colored plates by Ella du Cane.

1119 Dietz, Nettie Fowler
A white woman in a black man’s country: three thousand miles up the Nile to Rejaf. Omaha, NE: Priv. print, 1914. 328 p.
Date of Travel: 1912–13 Nationality: American
A fascinating account of Dietz and her husband, Charles N. Dietz as they rent a boat and travel from Aswan deep into the Sudan. Though most of the book is taken up with the account of the Sudan, there is quite a bit on Egypt (Alexandria, Cairo, Luxor, Aswan, and Wadi Halfa). Taking with them Amelia Edwards’ A thousand miles up the Nile, Dietz comments on the people and places and how they’ve not changed much since Edwards’ time. “I have been much interested in the J.P Morgan steam dahabeah, the “Khargeh,” which is right in front of the hotel and can be seen from my window. Of course it flies the American flag. His little Pekingese dog is the only thing that don’t jump up when Mr. Morgan appears, but quite to the contrary often jumps up in the very chair Mr. Morgan would naturally take,” p. 293. Told in letters to her sister back home and illustrated with photographs taken by C.N. Dietz.

1120 Harris, Carlton Danner, 1864–1928
Date of Travel: 1913 Nationality: American
A good, basic account of Port Said and Cairo. “The exquisite coloring of Egypt with which nature paints all aspects cannot perhaps be duplicated anywhere else in the world,” p. 32. Harris was the editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist where these letters first appeared. Illustrated with photographs.

1121 Kipling, Rudyard, 1865–1936
Date of Travel: 1913 Nationality: British

Visiting Port Said and Cairo, Kipling gives a brief account of Egypt. “The Swiss are the only people who have taken the trouble to master the art of hotel-keeping. Consequently, in the things that really matter—beds, baths, and victuals—they control Egypt,” p. 268. An entertaining account.

1122 Low, Sidney James Mark, 1857–1932

Date of Travel: 1913 Nationality: British

Great account from a British point of view of the political and economic situation in Egypt on the verge of WWI, but one that never forgets the Egyptian viewpoint. Includes an excellent introduction by Lord Cromer. Still, Low does not totally forget the purpose of his book, and gives a fascinating account of Egypt: “Egypt, then, for a certain number of weeks in the winter is a tourist land, and such, under all political and social vicissitudes, it is likely to remain. Whether this is wholly an advantage to the country may be doubted. The visitors bring in some money, but only a small portion is left to ‘fructify within the pockets of the people.’ Perhaps two millions sterling are spent in Egypt each year between December and March. But of this same the greater part goes to the tourist agencies, the steamship companies, and the great hotels,” p. 146. Includes portraits of the leading figures in Egypt at the time.

1123 Poe, Sophie A., 1862–
Correspondence Ten months on the wing. Roswell, NM: [s.n.], 1916. 179 p.

Date of Travel: 1913 Nationality: American

“Cairo is a fine modern city in many ways, but dirty,” p. 76. On an around-the-world trip, Poe stops briefly in Port Said, Alexandria, and Cairo before going on to the Holy Land. She sees the usual sights.

1124 Smith, Frederick George, 1880–
Missionary journeys through Bible lands; Italy, Greece, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Asia Minor and other countries, including a

Date of Travel: 1913  Nationality: American

A very brief account of Egypt (Alexandria and Cairo—skipping the Pyramids), as Smith goes on to visit the Holy Land. Illustrated with photographs.

1125 Warner, David Snethen, 1857–

Date of Travel: 1913  Nationality: American

Traveling in a group of 26 people, Warner et al., traveled in reverse of the usual order, coming from the Holy Land to Egypt. The primary purpose of the visit was to see sights of Biblical interest. Arriving in Port Said before going on to Cairo, Heliopolis, and the Pyramids, Warner describes an amusing incident at the Port Said customs: “At last we assembled in the dining-room to pass the medical examination. This was apparently a very formal and empty affair. As one’s name was called, he passed by the doctor, who took hold of his wrist and held it for about a second and called for the next on the list. The doctor probably used his eyes to help in detecting any diseased person. The cost to each tourist for this exam was the equivalent of thirty-two cents,” p. 193. Warner was also impressed with the irrigation system used in Egypt. Illustrated with photographs.

1126 Bradt, Acken Gordon

Date of Travel: 1913(?)  Nationality: American

“After taking pictures of the party, Sphinx and Pyramids, we hired some camels from some anxious men who wanted a job and rode back to the street car station,” p. 107. Brief, basic account, primarily of the Pyramids and Cairo, on Bradt’s stop in Egypt during his around-the-world trip with his family. Illustrated with photographs.
1127 Crouse, Mary Elizabeth, 1873–

Date of Travel: 1913(?)    Nationality: American

1128 Gómez Carrillo, Enrique, 1873–1927

Date of Travel: 1913(?)    Nationality: Guatemalan

Visiting just Cairo and Luxor, Gómez Carrillo, a Guatemalan journalist, critic, and novelist, gives a good account of the sights, people, and Islamic art. “En el Cairo, como en todas partes, los barrios más pintorescos y más poéticos son los más antiguos, los más poblados de ruinas. Claro que esto los cicerones no lo saben,” p. 34.

1129 Norfleet, Minnie Tising

Date of Travel: 1913(?)    Nationality: American

On an around-the-world trip aboard the Cleveland, Norfleet, a “Missouri Girl,” makes a brief visit to Port Said and Cairo, giving basic account of both. Illustrated with photographs.

1130 Thomas, Sidney J., 1868–
Six and one abroad. Austin, TX: Printed by E.L. Steck, 1914. 281 p.

Date of Travel: 1913(?)    Nationality: American

A good, short account of the usual sights in Alexandria, Cairo, and Port Said. Traveled with a party of Christian ministers. Illustrated with photographs.
1131 Willard, Mary Frances, 1867–

Date of Travel: 1913(?) Nationality: American

The principal of the A.H. Burley School in Chicago, Willard wrote this account of Alexandria and Cairo for children. Well done. Illustrated with photographs.

1132 Forster, Edward Morgan, 1879–1970

Date of Travel: 1913–19 Nationality: British

a. NOT SEEN

b. Though primarily a guidebook, Forster’s account of Alexandria still makes good reading.

1133 Barrés, Maurice, 1862–1923

Date of Travel: 1914 Nationality: French

A brief account of Alexandria before Barrés went on to the rest of the Near East.

1134 Congleton, Sarah Robb

Date of Travel: 1914 Nationality: American

“We took a trip to Alexandria one day, but as it is just a great seaport, I shall take no time to write of it,” p. 141. Congleton, on an around-the-world trip, makes a brief stop in Egypt, visiting Port Said, Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor.
1135 Glaspell, Kate Eldridge
Diary of a trip abroad in 1914: when all the world was at peace and every nation loved the United States of America. Philadelphia: Dorrance Press, 1942. 122 p.

Date of Travel: 1914  Nationality: American

A very basic account of the sights in Alexandria, Cairo, and Luxor. Traveled with Mrs. McGillivray and Mrs. Cosgriff. Illustrated with photographs.

1136 Poulsen, Johannes, 1881–

Date of Travel: 1914  Nationality: Danish

On an around-the-world trip, Poulsen visited Suez, Cairo and Luxor. UNREAD. Illustrated with photographs.

1137 Rowland, Joseph M.

Date of Travel: 1914  Nationality: American

Traveling as part of a large group, Rowland gives a well-written and interesting account of Alexandria, Port Said, and Cairo. “Port Said is said to be one of the most wicked places on earth, and from what we gathered it would, without a misfit, change its name to Port Perdition,” p. 105. Illustrated with photographs.

1138 Cart, Léon, 1869–1916

Date of Travel: 1914(?)  Nationality: Swiss

On a scientific/archaeological expedition to the Sinai, Cart gives only the sparest of personal details. Includes only the Suez and Sinai areas. Illustrated with photographs.

1139 Oliver, George Fletcher, 1853–
A trip through Bible lands and Europe; a journalistic record of a

Date of Travel: 1914(?) Nationality: American

A basic account of Egypt and its associations with the Bible. Oliver visited Alexandria, Cairo, and the Suez area. Illustrated with photographs.

1140 Chack, Paul, 1876–1945

Date of Travel: 1915 Nationality: French

a. NOT SEEN

b. A French account of the Suez campaign of the First World War. Illustrated with drawings.

1141 Bell, Archie, 1877–

Date of Travel: 1915(?) Nationality: American

A slick, professional account written for the “Spell Series” of the Page Company, Boston. Comprehensive, but far too impersonal to be interesting at this late date. Bell wrote a series of these “The Spell of” books for various parts of the world. Illustrated with photographs.

1142 Feldman, Wilhelm, 1880–

Date of Travel: 1915–16 Nationality: German

A detailed account, from the German perspective, of the military actions in Egypt during the First World War. Feldman visited only the Sinai.
1143 Forster, Richard

Date of Travel: 1915–16 Nationality: German

A detailed account, from the German perspective, of the military actions in Egypt during the First World War. Forster visited only the Sinai.

1144 Henkelburg, Hans

Date of Travel: 1915–16 Nationality: German

A detailed account, from the German perspective, of the military actions in Egypt during the First World War. Henkelburg visited only the Sinai.

1145 Crawshay-Williams, Eliot, 1879–

Date of Travel: 1916 Nationality: British

Soldier and poet, Crawshay-Williams describes British troop life in wartime Egypt. The terrible conditions for troops facing the German-supplied Turks are fully described by the literate (and literary) Crawshay-Williams. Though most of his time was spent in military operations, Crawshay-Williams did have some time to visit the historical sights. Near Aswan, in a bit of gruesome humor during wartime, Crawshay-Williams and his troops discover a cache of mummies which they proceed to keep as souvenirs and send home to England. A photo of Crawshay-Williams' mummy propped up in the desert is included. Crawshay-Williams visits Karnak, the Valley of the Kings and other sites, commenting on the great heat. Shipping out of Egypt to the Sinai to meet "Johnny Turk," the harsh conditions turn worse when actual battles take place. A fascinating account interspersed with the poems of Crawshay-Williams and Rupert Brooke on the horrors of war.

1146 Massey, William Thomas
Date of Travel: 1916 Nationality: British

A detailed account of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force sent to protect British interests in Egypt during the First World War. Illustrated by James McBey (1883– ), the official artist with the Egyptian Expeditionary Force. Massey was the official newspaper correspondent for the Egyptian Expeditionary Force.

1147 Anonymous ("Anzac")

Date of Travel: 1916(?) Nationality: New Zealand

Told by an anonymous ANZAC (perhaps written for propaganda purposes and not a real account). There are many patriotic sections of this book. Still, it includes a quite interesting account of Alexandria and Cairo.

1148 Devonshire, Henriette Caroline, 1864–

Date of Travel: 1916–17(?) Nationality: British

A series supposed to have been written by a recovering soldier. Devonshire, in her introduction, claims the contents of the letters represent real trips she took with wounded soldiers in Cairo. The contents give a tourbook-like account of the usual sights in Cairo. The letters first appeared in Sphinx under the title "A Convalescent in Cairo." Illustrated with photographs.

1149 Briggs, Martin Shaw, 1882–

Date of Travel: 1916–18 Nationality: British

A fascinating, detailed account of the military actions in Egypt from a personal point of view, with a minimum of military jargon. Briggs also visited many parts of Egypt on leave. Illustrated with photographs.

1150 Dinning, Hector William; McBey, James, 1887–
Date of Travel: 1916–19    Nationality: Australian

An account of the Light Horsemen of Australia and their contribution to the British war effort in Egypt. A fascinating, well-done account, with a great deal of personal anecdotes of travel. Illustrated by James McBey (q.v.).
NAME INDEX

The following is an index of all the named travelers in the bibliography. Names followed by "ed." are editors and did not necessarily travel to Egypt; names followed by "(ill)" are illustrators (painters, engravers, etc.), who may or may not have traveled with the principal author to Egypt; names followed by "(ph)" are photographers who may or may not have traveled with the principal author to Egypt. The "n" following an entry indicates that the person is mentioned in the annotation and not the primary traveller.
